Doth all the noble substance of a doubt To his own scandal.

Enter Ghost.

Look, my lord, it comes. Hor. Ham. Angels and ministers of grace defend us!

Be thou a spirit of health or goblin damn'd, Bring with thee airs from heaven or blasts from hell,

Be thy intents wicked or charitable,

Thou com'st in such a questionable shape That I will speak to thee. I'll call thee Hamlet.

King, father, royal Dane. O, answer me! Let me not burst in ignorance, but tell Why thy canoniz'd bones, hearsed in death, Have burst their cerements; why the sepulchre

Wherein we saw thee quietly enurn'd Hath op'd his ponderous and marble jaws Ham. The King doth wake to-night and To cast thee up again. What may this mean steel

Revisits thus the glimpses of the moon, Making night hideous, and we fools of nature

So horridly to shake our disposition With thoughts beyond the reaches of our souls?

Say, why is this? wherefore? What should we do? [Ghost beckons Hamlet.

Hor. It beckons you to go away with it, As if it some impartment did desire To you alone.

Look with what courteous action Mar. It waves you to a more removed ground. 6x But do not go with it.

Hor. No, by no means.

Ham. It will not speak; then I wil follow it. Hor. Do not, my lord. Ham. Why, what should be the fear I do not set my life at a pin's fee; And for my soul, what can it do to that, Being a thing immortal as itself? It waves me forth again; I'll follow it. Hor. What if it tempt you toward the flood, my lord, Or to the dreadful summit of the cliff That beetles o'er his base into the sea. And there assume some other horrible form, Which might deprive your sovereignty of reason And draw you into madness? Think of it The very place puts toys of desperation, 75 Without more motive, into every brain That looks so many fathoms to the sea And hears it roar beneath. Ham. It waves me still Go on; I'll follow thee. Mar. You shall not go, my lord. Hold off your hands. Hor. Be rul'd; you shall not go. Ham. My fate cries out, And makes each petty arture in this body As hardy as the Nemean hon's nerve. [Ghost beckons. Still am I call'd. Unhand me, gentlemen. By heaven, I'll make a ghost of him that lets me. I say, away! Go on; I'll follow thee. [Exeunt Ghost and Hamlet. Hor. He waxes desperate with imagina-Mar. Let's follow; 'tis not fit thus to obey him. Hor. Have after. To what issue will this come? Mar. Something is rotten in the state of Denmark. Hor. Heaven will direct it. Mar. Nay, let's follow him. Exeunt.

Scene V. Elsinore. The battlements of the Castle.

Enter Ghost and HAMLET. Ham. Whither wilt thou lead me? Speak. I'll go no further.

Ghost. Mark me.

Ham. I will. Ghost. My hour is almost come, When I to sulph'rous and tormenting flames Must render up myself. Ham. Alas, poor ghost!

hearing To what I shall unfold.

Ham.

Ghost. So art thou to revenge, when thou snalt hear. Ham. What?

Ghost. I am thy father's spirit.

Doom'd for a certain term to walk the night.

And for the day confin'd to fast in fires. Till the foul crimes done in my days of nature

Are burnt and purg'd away. But that I am forbid

To tell the secrets of my prison-house, I could a tale unfold whose lightest word is Would harrow up thy soul, freeze thy young blood.

Make thy two eyes, like stars, start from their spheres.

Thy knotted and combined locks to part. And each particular hair to stand an end. Like quills upon the fretful porpentine. But this eternal blazon must not be

To ears of flesh and blood. List, list, O. list ! If thou didst ever thy dear father love-

Ham. O God!

Ghost. Revenge his foul and most un. natural murder.

Ham. Murder! Ghost. Murder most foul, as in the best

But this most foul, strange, and unnatural. Ham. Haste me to know't, that I, with wings as swift

As meditation or the thoughts of love, 30 May-sweep to my revenge.

Ghost. I find thee apt: And duller shouldst thou be than the fat weed

That roots itself in ease on Lethe wharf, Wouldst thou not stir in this. Now, Hamlet, hear: given out that, sleeping in my orchard,

A serpent stung me; so the whole ear of Denmark

Is by a forged process of my death Rankly abus'd; but know, thou noble youth. The serpent that did sting thy father's life

Now wears his crown. O my prophetic soul! Ham. My uncle!

Ghost. Ay, that incestuous, that adulterate beast.

With witchcraft of his wits, with traitorous

gitts-O wicked wit and gifts that have the power

So to seduce !-- won to his shameful lust 45 The will of my most seeming virtuous queen.

O Hamlet, what a falling off was there, Ghost. Pity me not, but lend thy serious From me, whose love was of that dignity 5) That it went hand in hand even with the

But virtue, as it never will be moved, Though lewdness court it in a shape of heaven,

So lust, though to a radiant angel link'd, 55

Will sate itself in a celestial bed

And prey on garbage. But soft! methinks I scent the morning air. Brief let me be. Sleeping within my orchard, My custom al vays of the afternoon, Upon my secure hour thy uncle stole, With juice of cursed hebona in a vial. And in the porches of my ears did pour The leperous distilment; whose effect Holds such an enmity with blood of man 65 That swift as quicksilver it courses through The natural gates and alleys of the body; And with a sudden vigour it doth posset And curd, like eager droppings into milk, The thin and wholesome blood. So did it mine:

And a most instant tetter bank'd about. Most lazar-like, with vile and loathsome

All my smooth body.

Thus was I, sleeping, by a brother's hand Of life, of crown, of queen, at once dis-patch'd:

Cut off even in the blossoms of my sin. Unhous'led, disappointed, unanel'd: No recking made, but sent to my account But you'll be secret? With all my imperfections on my head. O, horrible! O, horrible! most horrible! If thou hast nature in thee, bear it not; Let not the royal bed of Denmark be A couch for luxury and damned incest. But, howsomever thou pursuest this act, Taint not thy mind, nor let thy soul contrive

Against thy mother aught; leave her to heaven,

And to those thorns that in her bosom lodge

To prick and sting her. Fare thee well at once. The glowworm shows the matin to be near.

And gins to pale his uneffectual fire. Adieu, adieu, adieu! Remember me. [Exit.

Ham. O all you host of heaven! O earth! What else?

And shall I couple hell? O, fie! Hold, hold, my heart;

And you, my sinews, grow not instant old, But bear me stiffly up. Remember thee! 95 Ay, thou poor ghost, whiles memory holds a seat In this distracted globe. Remember thee! Yea, from the table of my memory I'll wipe away all trivial fond records,

So, uncle, there you are. Now to my word: It is 'Adieu, adieu! Remember me'. 111 I have sworn't.

Hor. [Within] My lord, my lord!

Enter HORATIO and MARCELLUS.

Mar. Lord Hamlet! Hor. Heavens secure him! Ham. So be it!

Mar. Illo, ho, ho, my lord! Ham. Hillo, ho, ho, boy! Come, bird.

Mar. How is't, my noble lord? Hor. What news, my lord?

Ham. O, wonderful!

Hor. Good my lord, tell it.

Ham. No; you will reveal it. Hor. Not I, my lord, by heaven!

Mar. Nor I, my lord, 120 Ham. How say you, then; would heart of man once think it?

Both. Ay, by heaven, my lord! Ham. There's never a villain dwelling in all Denmark

But he's an arrant knave.

Hor. There needs no ghost, my lord, come from the grave

To tell us this.

Ham. Why, right; you are in the right; And so, without more circumstance at all, I hold it fit that we shake hands and part; You, as your business and desire shall point you-

For every man hath business and desire, 130 Such as it is; and for my own poor part, Look you, I will go pray.

Hor. These are but wild and whirling words, my lord.

Ham. I am sorry they offend you, heartily; Yes, faith, heartily.

Hor. There's no offence, my lord. 135 Ham. Yes, by Saint Patrick, but there is, Heratio,

And much offence too. Touching this vision here-

It is an honest ghost, that let me tell you. For your desire to know what is between us. O'ermaster't as you may. And now, good friends,

As you are friends, scholars, and soldiers, ive me one poor request.

Hor. What is't, my lord? We will.

HAMLET Act 2

Ham. Never make known what you have God willing, shall not lack. Let us go in seen to-night. Both. My lord, we will not.

Nay, but swear't. Ham. Hor. In faith.

My lord, not I.

Nor I, my lord, in faith. 146 Mar. Ham. Upon my sword. Mar. We have sworn, my lord, already.

Ham. Indeed, upon my sword, indeed. Ghost. [Cries under the stage] Swear. Ham. Ha, ha, boy! say'st thou so? Art thou there, truepenny? 150 Come on. You hear this fellow in the cellarage: Consent to swear.

Propose the oath, my lord. Hor. Ham. Never to speak of this that you have seen.

Swear by my sword.

Ghost. [Beneath] Swear.

Ham. Hic et ubique? Then we'll shift our ground.

Come hither, gentlemen,

And lay your hands again upon my sword. And how, and who, what means, and where Swear by my sword

Never to speak of this that you have heard. Ghost [Beneath] Swear, by his sword. 161 Ham. Well said, old mole! Canst work i' th' earth so fast? A worthy pioneer! Once more remove, good friends. Hor. O day and night, but this is wondr. vis strange! Ham. And therefore as a stranger give it welcome. There are more things in heaven and earth,

Horatio. Than are dreamt of in your philosophy. But come.

Here, as before, never, so help you mercy, How strange or odd some'er I bear myself-As I perchance hereafter shall think meet To put an antic disposition on-That you, at such times, seeing me, never shall.

With arms encumb'red thus, or this headshake,

Or by pronouncing of some doubtful phrase, As 'Well, well, we know ' or ' We could, an if we would

Or ' If we list to speak ' or ' There be, an it they might '

Or such ambiguous giving out, to note That you know aught of me-this do swear, So grace and mercy at your most need help you.

Ghost. [Beneath] Swear.

Ham. Rest, rest, perturbed spirit! So, gentlemen,

With all my love I do commend me to you; And what so poor a man as Hamlet is 185 May do t'express his love and friending to you, together:

And still your lingers on your lips, I pray, The time is out of joint. O cursed spire. That ever I was born to set it right! 190 Nay, come, let's go togetner.

ACT TWO

Scene I. Elsinore. The house of Polonius.

Enter Polonius and RLYNALDO.

Pol. Give him this money and these notes, Reynaldo. Rev. I will, my lord.

Pol. You shall do marvellous wisely, good Revnaldo.

Before you visit him, to make inquire Of his behaviour.

Rey. My lord, I did intend it. . Pol. Marry, well said; very well said. Look you, sir, Enquire me fust what Danskers are in Pari::

they been,

What company, at what expense; and inding

By this encompassment and drift question That they do know my son, come you more nearer Than your particular demands will touch it. Take you, as 'twere, some distant knowledge of him;

As thus: 'I know his father and his friends, And in part him'. Do you mark this, Reynaldo?

Rey. Ay, very well, my lord.

Pol. 'And in part him-but' you may say 'not well;

But if't be he I mean, he's very wild;

Addicted so and so '; and there put on him What torgeries you please; marry, none so

As may dishonour him: take heed of that: But, sir, such wanton, wild, and usual slips As are companions noted and most known To youth and liberty.

Rey. As gaming, my lord. Pol. Ay, or drinking, fencing, swearing, quarrelling.

Drabbing-- you may go so far.

Rey. My lord, that would dishonour him. Pol. Faith, no; as you may season it in the charge.

You must not put another scandal on him, That he is open to incontinency; That's not my meaning. But breathe his faults so quaintly

That they may seem the taints of liberty; The flash and outbreak of a fiery mind, A savageness in unreclaimed blood, Of general assault.

Rey. Pol. Wherefore should you do this? Rev. Ay, my lord,

I would know that.

Pol. Marry, sir, here's my drift, And I believe it is a fetch of warrant: You laying these slight sullies on my son, As 'twere a thing a little soil'd wi' th' working.

Mark vou,

Your party in converse, him you would sound.

Having ever seen in the prenominate crimes The youth you breathe of guilty, be assur'd He closes with you in this consequence-'Good sir' or so, or 'friend' or 'gentleman

According to the phrase or the addition

Of man and country.

Very good, my lord. Pol. And then, sir, does 'a this—'a does— What was I about to say? By the mass. I was about to say something; where did I

Rey. At 'closes in the consequence', at 'friend or so' and 'gentleman'.

Pol. At 'closes in the consequence'- ay, marry, He closes thus: 'I know the gentleman;

I saw him yesterday, or t'other day, Or then, or then; with such, or such; and, as you say,

There was 'a gaming; there o'ertook in's rouse:

There falling out at tennis'; or perchance 'I saw him enter such a house of sale' Videlicet, a brothel, or so forth. See you now Your bait of falsehood take this carp of truth:

And thus do we of wisdom and of reach, With windlasses and with assays of bias, 65 By indirections find directions out: So, by my former lecture and advice, Shall you my son. You have me, have you not?

Rey. My lord, I have.

Pol. God buy ye; fare ye well. Rey. Good my lord!

Pol. Observe his inclination in yourself. Rey. I shall, my lord.

Pol. And let him ply his music.

Rev. Well, my lord. Pol. Farewell! [Exit Reynaldo.

Enter OPHELIA.

How now, Ophelia! What's the matter? Oph. O my lord, my lord, I have been so affrighted!

Pol. With what, i' th' name of God? Oph. My lord, as I was sewing in my closet.

Lord Hamlet, with his doublet all unbrac'd, No hat upon his head, his stockings fouled, Ungart'red and down-gyved to his ankle;

But, my good lord- 25 Pale as his shirt, his knees knocking each other. And with a look so piteous in purport

As if he had been loosed out of hell

To speak of horrors-he comes before me. Pol. Mad for thy love?

Oph. My lord, I do not know.

But truly I do fear it.

Pol. What said he? Oph. He took me by the wrist, and held me hard:

Then goes he to the length of all his arm, And, with his other hand thus o'er his brow,

He falls to such perusal of my face As 'a would draw it. Long stay'd he so.

At last, a little shaking of mine arm, And thrice his head thus waving up and down.

He rais'd a sigh so piteous and profound As it did seem to shatter all his bulk And end his being. That done, he lets me

And, with his head over his shoulder turn'd, He seem'd to find his way without his eyes; For out adoors he went without their helps And to the last bended their light on me.

Pol. Come, go with me. I will go seek the King.

This is the very ecstasy of love, Whose violent property fordoes itself,

And leads the will to desperate undertakings

As oft as any passion under heaven That does afflict our natures. I am sorry-What, have you given him any hard words of late?

Oph. No, my good lord; but, as you did command.

I did repel his letters, and denied His access to me.

Pol. That hath made him mad. 110 I am sorry that with better heed and judgment I had not quoted him. I fear'd he did but trifle,

And meant to wreck thee; but beshrew my jealousy!

By heaven, it is as proper to our age To cast beyond ourselves in our opinions As it is common for the younger sort

To lack discretion. Come, go we to the King.

This must be known; which, being kept close, might move

More grief to hide than hate to utter love. Come. [Excunt. 120

SCENE II. Elsinore. The Castle.

Enter KING, QUEEN, ROSEN-CRANTZ. GUILDENSTERN. and Attendants.

King. Welcome, dear Rosencrantz and Guildenstern!

Moreover that we much did long to see you, The need we have to use you did provoke Our hasty sending. Something have you heard Of Hamlet's transformation: so I call it. 5 Sith nor th' exterior nor the inward man Resembles that it was. What it should be, More than his father's death, that thus hath put him

So much from th' understanding of himself, I cannot deem of. I entreat you both That, being of so young days brought up with him.

And sith so neighboured to his youth and haviour.

That you vouchsafe your rest here in our

Some little time; so by your companies To draw him on to pleasures, and to gather, So much as from occasion you may glean, Whether aught to us unknown afflicts him

That, open'd, lies within our remedy. Queen. Good gentlemen, he hath much talk'd of you; And sure I am two men there is not living To whom he more adheres. If it will please

To show us so much gentry and good will As to expend your time with us awhile For the supply and profit of our hope, Your visitation shall receive such thanks 25 As fits a king's remembrance.

Both your Majesties Might, by the sovereign power you have of

Than to entreaty.

But we both obey, Guil. And here give up ourselves, in the full bent, To lay our service freely at your feet, To be commanded.

King. Thanks, Rosencrantz and gentle Guildenstern.

Queen. Thanks, Guildenstern and gentle Rosencrantz.

And I beseech you instantly to visit My too much changed son. Go, some of you, And bring these gentlemen where Hamlet

Guil. Heavens make our presence and our practices

Pleasant and helpful to him!

Queen. Aye amen! [Exeunt Rosencrantz, Guildenstern, and some Attendants.

Enter Polonius.

Pol. Th' ambassadors from Norway, my good lord, Are joyfully return'd.

good news.

Pol. Have I, my lord? I assure you, my good liege.

I hold my duty, as I hold my soul, Both to my God and to my gracious King: And I do think-or else this brain of mine Hunts not the trail of policy so sure

As it hath us'd to do—that I have found The very cause of Hamlet's lunacy.

King. O, speak of that; that do I long to hear. Pol. Give first admittance to th' ambassadors; My news shall be the fruit to that great teast. King. Thyself do grace to them, and bring them in. [Exit Polonius. He tells me, my dear Gertrude, he hath found

The head and source of all your son's distemper.

Oueen. I doubt it is no other but the main, father's death and our o'erhasty marriage.

King, Well, we shall sift him.

Re-enter Polonius, with Voltemand and CORNELIUS.

Welcome, my good friends! Say, Voltemand, what from our brother Norway?

Volt. Most fair return of greetings and desires.

Upon our first, he sent out to suppress His nephew's levies; which to him appear'd To be a preparation 'gainst the Polack ; But, better look'd into, he truly found griev'd, That so his sickness, age, and impotence, Was falsely borne in hand, sends out arrests

On Fortinbras; which he, in brief, obeys: Receives rebuke from Norway; and, in Makes vow before his uncle never more 70 To give th' assay of arms against your Majesty.

Whereon old Norway, overcome with joy, Gives him threescore thousand crowns in annual fee.

And his commission to employ those soldiers.

So levied as before, against the Polack: 75 With an entreaty, herein further shown,

Gives a paper. That it might please you to give quiet pass Through your dominions for this enterprise. On such regards of safety and allowance As therein are set down.

King. It likes us well: 80 And at our more considered time we'll read. Answer, and think upon this business. King. Thou still hast been the father of Meantime we thank you for your well-took Go to your rest; at night we'll feast together.

Most welcome home!

[Exeunt Ambassadors and Attendants. Pol. This business is well ended. 85 My liege, and madam, to expostulate What majesty should be, what duty is, Why day is day, night night, and time is time,

Were nothing, but to waste night, day, and time.

Therefore, since brevity is the soul of wit, 90 And tediousness the limbs and outward flourishes.

I will be brief. Your noble son is mad. Mad call I it; for, to define true madness, What is't but to be nothing else but mad? But let that go.

Queen. More matter with less art. of Pol. Madam, I swear I use no art at all. That he's mad, 'tis true: 'tis true 'tis pity; And pity 'tis 'tis true. A foolish figure! But farewell it, for I will use no art. Mad let us grant him, then; and now remains

That we find out the cause of this effect;
Or rather say the cause of this defect,
For this effect defective comes by cause.
Thus it remains, and the remainder thus.

Perpend. 105
I have a daughter—have while she 18

mine—
Who in her duty and obedience, mark, Hath given me this. Now gather, and surmise. [Reads.

'To the celestial, and my soul's idol, the most beautified Ophelia.' That's an ill phrase, a vile phrase; 'beautified' is a vile phrase. But you shall hear. Thus: [Reads.' In her excellent white bosom, these, &c.'

Queen. Came this from Hamlet to her?
Pol. Good madam, stay awhile; I will be faithful. [Reads.

Doubt thou the stars are fire; xx Doubt that the sun doth move; Doubt truth to be a liar;

But never doubt I love.
O dear Ophelia, I am ill at these numbers.
I have not art to reckon my groans; but that I love thee best, O most best, believe it. Adieu.

Thine evermore, most dear lady, whilst this machine is to him, HAMLET.'
This, in obedience, hath my daughter shown me;

And more above, hath his solicitings, 125 As they fell out by time, by means, and place,

All given to mine ear.

King. But how hath she Receiv'd his love?

Pol. What do you think of me?
King. As of a man faithful and honourable.

Pol. I would fain prove so. But what might you think, 130
When I had seen this hot love on the wing.

As I perceiv'd it, I must tell you that, Before my daughter told me—what might you,

Or my dear Majesty your queen here, think,

If I had play'd the desk or table-book; 135 Or given my heart a winking, mute and dumb;

Or look'd upon this love with idle sight—What might you think? No, I went round to work,

And my young mistress thus I did bespeak: 'Lord Hamlet is a prince out of thy

This must not be'. And then I prescripts gave her,

That she should lock herself from his resort, Admit no messengers, receive no tokens. Which done, she took the fruits of my advice:

And he repelled, a short tale to make, 145 Fell into a sadness, then into a fast,

Thence to a watch, thence into a weakness, Thence to a lightness, and, by this declension,

Into the madness wherein now he raves And all we mourn for.

King. Do you think 'tis this? Queen. It may be, very like.

Pol. Hath there been such a time—I would fain know that—

That I have positively said 'Tis so', When it prov'd otherwise?

King. Not that I know.
Pol. Take this from this, if this be other-

If circumstances lead me, I will find Where truth is hid, though it were hid indeed

Within the centre.

King. How may we try it further?

Pol. You know sometimes he walks four hours together,

Here in the lobby.

Queen. So he does, indeed. 160
Pol At such a time I'll loose my daughter to him

Be you and I behind an arras them. Mark the encounter: if he love her not, And be not from his reason fall'n thereon, Let me be no assistant for a state,

165
But keep a farm and carters.

King. We will try it.

Enter HAMLET, reading on a book.

Queen. But look where sadly the poor wretch comes reading.

Pol. Away, I do beseech you, both away: I'll board him presently. O, give me leave. Exeunt King and Queen. How does my good Lord Hamlet?

Ham. Well, God-a-mercy.

Pol. Do you know me, my lord?

Ham. Excellent well; you are a fishmonger.

Pol. Not I. my lord.

Pol. Honest, my lord!

Ham. Av. sir: to be honest, as this world goes, is to be one man pick'd out of ten thousand.

Pol. That's very true, my lord.

Ham. For if the sun breed maggets in a dead dog, being a good kissing carrion Have you a daughter?

Pol. I have, my lord.

Ham. Let her not walk i' th' sun. Conception is a blessing. But as your daughter may conceive-friend, look to't.

Pol. How say you by that ? [Aside] Still harping on my daughter. Yet he knew me not at first: 'a said I was a fishmonger. 'A is far gone, far gone. And truly in my youth I suff'red much extremity for love. Very near this. I'll speak to him again.— What do you read, my lord ?

Ham. Words, words, words.

Pol. What is the matter, my lord?

Ham.Between who? Pol I mean, the matter that you read, my lord.

Ham. Slanders, sir; for the satirical rogue says here that old men have grey beards; that their faces are wrinkled; their eyes purging thick amber and plumtree gum; and that they have a plentiful lack of wit. together with most weak hams —all which, sir, though I most powerfully and potently believe, yet I hold it not honesty to have it thus set down; for you yourself, sir, shall grow old as I am, if, like a crab, you could go backward.

Pol. [Aside] Though this be madness, yet there is method in't.-Will you walk out of the air, my lord?

Ham. Into my grave?

Pol. Indeed, that's out of the air. [Aside] How pregnant sometimes his replies are! a happiness that often madness hits on, which reason and sanity could not so prosperously be delivered of. I will leave him, and suddenly contrive the means of meeting between him and my daughter. -My lord, I will take my leave of you. 213

Ham. You cannot, sir, take from me anything that I will more willingly part withal -except my life, except my life, except my life.

Enter Rosencrantz and Guildenstern.

Pol. Fare you well, my lord. Ham. These tedious old fools! Pol. You go to seek the Lord Hamlet: there he is.

Ros. [To Polonius] God save you, sir! Heat Polonius.

Guil. My honour'd lord !

Ros. My most dear lord !

Ham. My excellent good friends! How Ham. Then I would you were so honest dost thou, Guildenstern? Ah, Rosen-175 crantz! Good lads, ho., do you both? 225 Ros. As the indifferent children of the earth.

Guil. Happy in that we are not overhappy;

On fortune's cap we are not the very button.

Ham. Nor the soles of her shoe?

Ros. Neither, my lord. Ham. Then you live about her waist, or in the middle of her favours?

Guil. Faith, her privates we.

Ham. In the secret parts of Fortune? O. most true; she is a strumpet. What news? Ros. None, my lord, but that the world's grown honest. Ham. Then is doomsday near. But your news is not true. Let me question more in particular. What have you, my good friends, deserved at the hands of Fortune, that she sends you to prison hither? 240 Guil. Prison, my lord!

Ham. Denmark's a prison.

Ros. Then is the world one.

Ham. A goodly one; in which there are many confines, wards, and dungeons, Denmark being one o' th' worst.

Ros. We think not so, my lord. Ham. Why, then, 'tis none to you; for there is nothing either good or bad, but thinking makes it so. To me it is a prison. Ros. Why, then your ambition makes it one; 'tis too narrow for your mind. Ham. O God, I could be bounded in a nutshell and count myself a king of infinite space, were it not that I have bad dreams. Guil. Which dreams indeed are ambition; for the very substance of the ambitious is merely the shadow of a dream.

Ham. A dream itself is but a shadow. Ros. Truly, and I hold ambition of so airy and light a quality that it is but a shadow's shadow. Ham. Then are our beggars bodies, and our monarchs and outstretch'd heroes the beggars' shadows. Shall we to th' court? for, by my fay, I cannot reason.

Both. We'll wait upon you. Ham. No such matter. I will not sort you with the rest of my servants; for, to speak to you like an honest man, I am most dreadfully attended. But, in the beaten way of friendship, what make you at Elsinore ?

Ros. To visit you, my lord; no other occasion.

Ham. Beggar that I am, I am even poor thanks; but I thank you; and sure, dear friends, my thanks are too dear a half penny. Were you not sent for? Is it you own inclining? Is it a free visitation Come, come, deal justly with me. Come, come; nay, speak

Guil. What should we say, my lord? Ham. Why any thing. But to th' pur pose: you were sent for; and there is a kind of confession in your looks, which your modesties have not craft enough to colour: I know the good King and Queen have sent for you.

Ros. To what end, my lord?

Ham. That you must teach me. But let me conjure you by the rights of our fellow ship, by the consonancy of our youth, by the obligation of our ever-preserved love. and by what more dear a better proposer can charge you withal, be even and direc with me, whether you were sent for or no

Ros. [Aside to Guildenstern] What say vou?

Ham. [Aside] Nay, then, I have an eye of you.—If you love me, hold not off. 290

Guil. My lord, we were sent for.

Ham. I will tell you why; so shall my anticipation prevent your discovery, and your secrecy to the King and Queen moult no feather. I have of late-but wherefore I know not-lost all my mirth, forgone all custom of exercises; and indeed it goes so heavily with my disposition that this goodly frame, the earth, seems to me a sterile promontory; this most excellent canopy the air, look you, this brave o'erhanging firmament, this majestical roof fretted with golden fire-why, it appeareth no other thing to me than a foul and pestilent congregation of vapours. What a piece of work is a man! How noble in reason! how infinite in faculties! in form and moving, how express and admirable! in action, how like an angel! in apprehension. how like a god! the beauty of the world! the paragon of animals! And yet, to me, what is this quintessence of dust? Man delights not me-no, nor woman neither, though by your smiling you seem to say so.

Ros. My lord, there was no such stuff in my thoughts.

Ham. Why did ye laugh, then, when I said 'Man delights not me'?

Ros. To think, my lord, if you delight not in man, what lenten entertainment the players shall receive from you. We coted them on the way; and hither are they coming to offer you service. 316

Ham. He that plays the king shall be welcome—his Majesty shall have tribute on me; the adventurous knight shall use his foil and target; the lover shall not sigh my extent to the players, which, I tell you, gratis; the humorous man shall end his must show fairly outwards, should more part in peace; the clown shall make those appear like entertainment than yours. Ros. Even those you were wont to take such delight in-the tragedians of the

Ham. How chances it they travel? Their residence, both in reputation and profit. was better both ways.

Ros. I think their inhibition comes by the means of the late innovation.

Ham. Do they hold the same estimation they did when I was in the city? Are they so followed?

Ros. No, indeed, are they not.

Ham. How comes it? Do they grow rusty?

Ros. Nay, their endeavour keeps in the wonted pace; but there is, sir, an evrie of children, little eyases, that cry out on the top of question, and are most tyrannically clapp'd for't. These are now the fashion, and so berattle the common stages-so they call them—that many wearing rapiers are afraid of goose quills and dare scarce come thither.

Ham. What, are they children? Who maintains 'em? How are they escoted? Will they pursue the quality no longer than they can sing? Will they not say afterwards, if they should grow themselves to common players—as it is most like, if their means are no better-their writers do them wrong to make them exclaim against their own succession?

Ros. Faith, there has been much to-do on both sides; and the nation holds it no sin to tarre them to controversy. There was for a while no money bid for argument, unless . 'he poet and the player went to cuffs in the question.

Ham. Is't possible? Guil. O, there has been much throwing about of brains. Ham. Do the boys carry it away?

Ros. Ay, that they do, my lord-

Hercules and his load too.

Ham. It is not very strange; for my uncle is King of Denmark, and those that would make mows at him while my father lived give twenty, forty, fifty, a hundred ducats apiece for his picture in little. Sblood, there is something in this more than natural, if philosophy could find it out. [A flourish.

Guil. There are the players. Ham. Gentlemen, you are welcome to Elsinore. Your hands, come then; th' afourtenance of welcome is fashion and ceremony. Let me comply with you in this garb; lest 37.2 aunt-mother are deceived.

Guil. In what, my dear lord?

Hum. I am but mad north-north-west; when the wind is southerly I know a hawk from a handsaw.

Re-enter POLONIUS.

Pol. Well be with you, gentlemen l Ham. Hark you, Guldenstern, and you too-at each ear a hearer: that great baby you see there is not yet out of his swaddling clouts.

Ros. Happily he is the second time come to them: for they say an old man is twice a child.

Ham. I will prophesy he comes to tell me of the players; mark it. You say right, sir: a Manday morning; 'twas then indeed. Pol. My lord, I have news to tell you. 305

Ham. My lord, I have news to fell you. When Roscius was an actor in Rome-

Pol. The actors are come hither, my lord. Ham. Buzz, buzz!

Pol. Upon my honour—

Ham. Then came each actor on his ass— Pol. The best actors in the world, either for tragedy, comedy, history, pastoral, pastoral-comical, historical-pastoral, tragitragical-comical-historicalcal-historical, pastoral, scene individable, or poem unlimited. Seneca cannot be too heavy nor Plantus too light. For the law of writ and the liberty, these are the only men.

Ham. O Jephthah, judge of Israel, what a treasure hadst thou!

Pol. What a treasure had he, my lord? Ham. Why-

'One fair daughter, and no more. The which he loved passing well '. Pol. [Aside] Still on my daughter.

Ham. Am I not i' th' right, old Jephthah? Pol. If you call me Jephthah, my lord, I have a daughter that I love wassing well.

Ham. Nay, that follows not. Pol. What follows then, my lord? Ham. Why-

'As by lot, God wot'

and then, you know,

.' It came to pass, as most like it was '. The first row of the pious chanson will show you more; for look where my abridgement comes.

Enter the Players.

You are welcome, masters; welcome, all.—I am glad to see thee well.—Welcome, good friends .- O, my old friend! We'll have a speech straight Come, give us a taste of your quality: come, a passionate speech.

1 Play. What speech, my good lord? Ham. I heard thee speak me a speech once, but it was never acted; or, if it was, not above once; for the play, I remember, pleas'd not the million; 'twes caviary to the general. But it was-as I received it. and others whose judgments in such matters cried in the top of mine-an excellent play, well digested in the scenes. set down with as much modesty as cunning. I remember one said there were no sallers in the lines to make the matter savoury. nor no matter in the phrase that might indict the author of affectation; but call'dit an honest method, as wholesome as sweet, and by very much more handsome than fine. One speech in it I chiefly lov'd: 'twas Æneas' tale to Dido; and thereabout of it especially where he speaks of Priam's slaughter. It it live in your memory, begin at this line-let me see, let me see:

' The rugged Pyrrhus, like th' Hyrcanian beast.'

'Tis not so; it begins with Pyrrhus.

Pol. My lord, I will use them according to their desert.

Ham. God's bodykus, man, much better. Use every man after his desert, and who shall scape whipping? Use them after your own honour and dignity: the less they deserve, the more ment is in your bounty. Take them in.

Pol. Co.ne. sus.

Ham. Follow him, friends. We'll hear a play to-morrow. Dost thou hear me, old fuend; can you play 'The Murder of Gonzago ' !

O, what a rogue and peasant slave am I! Is it not monstrous that this player here, But in a nction, in a dream of passion, 515 Could force his soul so to his own conceit That from her working all his visage wann'd:

O, vengeance!

Why, what an ass am I! This is most brave.

That I, the son of a dear father murder'd, Prompted to my revenge by heaven and hell,

Must, like a whore, unpack my heart with words,

And fall a-cursing like a very drab,
A scullion! Fie upon't! foh!
About, my brains. Hum—I have heard
That guilty creatures, sitting at a play, 585
Have by the very cunning of the scene
Been struck so to the soul that presently
They have proclaim'd their malefactions;
For murder, though it have no tongue, will speak

With most miraculous organ. I'll have these players 500

Play something like the murder of my father

Before mine uncle. I'll observe his looks; I'll tent him to the quick. If 'a do blench, I know my course. The spirit that I have seen

May be a devil; and the devil hath power T' assume a pleasing shape; yea, and perhaps

Out of my weakness and my melancholy, As he is very potent with such spirits, Abuses me to damn me. I'll have grounds More relative than this. The play's the thing Wherein I'll catch the conscience of the King. [Exit.

ACT THREE

Scene I. Elsinore. The Castle.

Enter King, Queen, Polonius, Ophelia,

Rosencrantz, and Guildenstern.

King. And can you by no drift of conference

Get from him why he puts on this confusion, Grating so harshly all his days of quiet With turbulent and dangerous lunacy?

Ros. He does confess he feels himself distracted,

But from what cause 'a will by no means

speak.

Guil. Nor do we find him forward to be Guil. Nor do we find him forward to be sounded;

But, with a crafty madness, keeps aloof When we would bring him on to some contession

Of his true state.

Queen. Did he receive you well? 10 Ros. Most like a gentleman.

Guil. But with much forcing of his disposition.

Ros. Niggard of question; but of our demands

Most free in his reply.

Queen. Did you assay him To any pastime?

Ros. Madam, it so fell out that certain players

We o'er-raught on the way. Of these we told him;

And there did seem in him a kind of ion

And there did seem in him a kind of joy
To hear of it. They are here about the court,

And, as I think, they have already order 20 This night to play before him.

Pol. "Tis most true; And he beseech'd me to entreat your Majesties

To hear and see the matter.

King. With all my heart; and it doth much content me

To hear him so inclin'd.

Good gentlemen, give him a further edge,
And drive his purpose into these delights.

Ros. We shall, my lord.

[Exeunt Rosencrantz and Guildenstern. King. Sweet Gertrude, leave us too; For we have closely sent for Hamlet hither, That he, as 'twere by accident, may here 30 Affront Ophelia.

Enter HAMLET.

Ham. To be, or not to be--that is the question:

Whether 'tis nobler in the mind to suffer The slings and arrows of outrageous fortune, Or to take arms against a sea of troubles, And by opposing end them? To die, to sleep-No more; and by a sleep to say we end

The heart-ache and the thousand natural shocks

That flesh is heir to. 'Tis a consummation Devoutly to be wish'd. To die, to sleep; To sleep, perchance to dream. Ay, there's the rub:

For in that sleep of death what dreams may come.

When we have shuffled off this mortal coil, Must give us pause. There's the respect That makes calamity of so long life; For who would bear the whips and scorns of time, Th' oppressor's wrong, the proud man's contumely,

The pangs of despis'd love, the law's delay, The insolence of office, and the spurns That patient merit of th' unworthy takes, When he himself might his quietus make 75 With a bare bookin? Who would these fardels bear.

To grunt and sweat under a weary life, But that the dread of something after death-

The undiscover'd country, from whose bourn

No traveller returns—puzzles the will, And makes us rather bear those ills we have

Than fly to others that we know not of? Thus conscience does make cowards of us

And thus the native hue of resolution

Oph. My lord, I have remembrances of vours

That I have longed long to re-deliver.

I pray you now receive them.

I never gave you aught. Oph. My honour'd ford, you know right well you did,

And with them words of so sweet breath compos'd

As made the things more rich; their perfume lost,

Take these again: for to the noble mind Rich gifts wax poor when givers prove unkind.

There, my lord.

Ham. Ha, ha! Are you honest?

Oph. My lord?

Ham. Are you fair? 202 Oph. What means your lordship?

Ham. That if you be honest and fair. your honesty should admit no discourse to your beauty.

Oph. Could beauty, my lord, have better commerce than with honesty?

Ham. Ay, truly; for the power of beauty will sooner transform honesty from what it is to a bawd than the force of honesty can translate beauty into his likeness. was sometime a paradox, but now the time gives it proof. I did love you once.

Obh. Indeed, my lord, you made me helieve so.

Ham. You should not have believ'd me; for virtue cannot so inoculate our old stock but we shall relish of it. I loved you not.

Oph. I was the more deceived. Why Ham. Get thee to a nunnery. wouldst thou be a breeder of sinners? I am myself indifferent honest, but yet I could accuse me of such things that it were better my mother had not borne me: I am very proud, revengeful, ambitious; with more offences at my beck than I have thoughts to put them in, imagination to give them shape, or time to act them in. What should such fellows as I do crawling between earth and heaven? We are arrant knaves, all; believe none of us. Go thy ways to a nunnery. Where's your father?

Oph. At home, my lord. Ham. Let the doors be shut upon him,

Get thee to a numery, to, tarewell. Or, if thou wilt needs marry marry a fool; for wise men know well enough what monsters you make of them To a nunnery, go; and quickly too. Farewell.

Oph. O heavenly powers, restore him! Ham. I have heard of your paintings too, well enough; God hath given you one face, and you make yourselves another. You jig and amble, and you lisp, and nickname God's creatures, and make your wantonness your ignorance. Go to, I'll no more on't; it hath made me mad. SCENE II. Flainore. The Castle.

Enter HAMLET and three of the Players.

Ham. Speak the speech, I pray you, as I pronounc'd it to you, trippingly on the tongue; but if you mouth it, as many of our players do, I had as hef the town-crier spoke my lines. Nor do not saw the air too much with your hard, thus, but use all gently; for in the very torrent, tempest, and, as I may say, whirlwind of your passion, you must acquire and beget a temperance that may give it smoothness. O, it offends me to the soul to hear a robustious periwig-pated fellow tear a passion to tatters, to very rags, to split the ears of the groundlings, who, for the most part, are capable of nothing but inexplicable dumb shows and noise. I would have such a tellow whipp'd for c'erdoing Termagant; it out herods Herod. Pray you avoid it. 14

1 Play. I warrant your honour.

Ham. Be not too tame neither, but let your own discretion be your tutor. Suit the action to the word, the word to the action; with this special observance, that you o'erstep not the modesty of nature; for anything so o'erdone is from the purpose of playing, whose end, both at the first and now, was and is to hold, as 'twere, the mirror up to nature; to show virtue her own feature, scorn her own image, and the very age and body of the time his form and pressure. Now, this overdone or come tardy off, though it makes the unskilful laugh, cannot but make the judicious grieve; the censure of the which one must, in your allowance, o'erweigh a whole theatre of others. O, there be players that I have seen play—and heard others praise, and that highly—not to speak it profanely, that, neither having th' accent of Christians, nor the gait of Christian, pagan, nor man, have so strutted and bellowed that I have thought some of Nature's journeymen had made men, and not made them well, they imitated humanity so abominably.

1 Play. I hope we have retoim'd that indifferently with us, sir.

Ham. O, reform it altogether. And let those that play your clowns speak no more than is set down for them; for there be of them that will themselves laugh, to set on some quantity of barren spectators to laugh too, though in the meantime some necessary question of the play be then to be considered. That's villainous, and shows a most pitful ambition in the fool that uses it. Go, make you ready. [Exeunt Players.

Enter Polonius, Rosencrantz, and Guildenstern.

How now, my lord! Will the King hear this piece of work?

Pol. And the Queen too, and that presently.

Ham. Bid the players make haste.

[Exit Polonius.

Will you two help to hasten them?

Ros. Ay, my lord. [Exeunt they two. Ham. What, ho, Horatio! 50

Enter Horatio.

Ilam. They are coming to the play; I must be idle.

Get you a place.

King. How fares our cousin Hamlet? 90 Ham. Excellent, i' faith; of the chameleon's dish. I eat the air, promise-cramm'd; you cannot feed capons so.

King. I have nothing with this answer, Ilamlet; these words are not mine. 94 Ham. No, nor mine now. [To Polonius] My lord, you play'd once i' th' university, you say?

Pol. That did I, my lord, and was accounted a good actor.

Ham. What did you enact? 99
Pol. I did enact Julius Casar; I was kill'd i' th' Capitol; Brutus kill'd me.

Ham. It was a brute part of him to kill so capital a call there. Be the players ready?

Ros. Ay, my lord; they stay upon your patience.

Queen. Come hither, my dear Hamlet, sic by me.

Ham. No, good mother; here's metal more attractive.

Pol. [To the King] O, ho! do you mark that?

Ham. Lady, shall I lie in your lap?
[Lying down at Ophelia's feet.
Oph. No, my lord.
Ham. I mean, my head upon your lap?

Ham. Do you think I meant country matters?

Oph. I think nothing, my lord.

Ham. That's a fair thought to lie between maids' lers.

Oph. What is, my lord? Ham. Nothing,

X049

Oph. You are merry, my lord. Ham. Who, I?

Oph. Ay, my lord.

Ham. O God, your only jig-maker! What should a man do but be merry? For look you how cheerfully my mother looks, and my father died within's two hours.

Oph. Nay, 'tis twice two months, my lord.

Ham. So long? Nay then, let the devil wear black, for I'll have a suit of sables. O heavens! die two months ago, and not forgotten yet? Then there's hope a great man's memory may outlive his life half a year; but, by'r lady, 'a must build churches, then; or else shall 'a suffer not thinking on, with the hobby-horse, whose epitaph is 'For O, for O, the hobby-horse is forgot!'

The trumpet sounds. Hautboys play. The Dumb Show enters.

Enter a King and a Queen, very lovingly; the Queen embracing him and he her. She kneels, and makes show of protestation unto him. He takes her up, and declines his head upon her neck. He lies him down upon a bank of flowers; she, seeing him asleep, leaves him. Anon comes in a Fellow, takes off his crown, kisses it, pours poison in the sleeper's ears, and leaves him. The Queen returns; finds the King dead, and makes passionale action. The Poisoner, with some two or three Mutes, comes in again, seeming to condole with her. The dead body is carried away. The Poisoner woos the Queen with gifts: she seems harsh awhile, but in the end accepts his love. [Exeunt.

Oph. What means this, my lord?
Ham. Marry, this is miching mallecho;
it means mischief.

Oph. Belike this show imports the argument of the play.

Enter Prologue.

Ham. We shall know by this fellow: the players cannot keep counsel; they'll tell all.

Oph. Will 'a tell us what this show meant?

Ham. Ay, or any show that you will show him. Be not you asham'd to show, he'll not shame to tell you what it means. 241 Oph. You are naught, you are naught.

I'll mark the play.

Pro. For us, and for our tragedy,

Here stooping to your clemency, 145
We beg your hearing patiently. [Exit.
Ham. Is this a prologue, or the posy of a ring?

Oph. 'Tis brief, my lord. Ham. As woman's love.

Enter the Player King and Queen.

P. King. Full thirty times hath Phæbus cat gone round

Neptune's salt wash and Tellus' or ed ground,

And thirty dozen moons with borrowed sheen About the world have times twelve thirties been.

Since love our hearts and Hymen did our hands

Unite comutual in most sacred bands. 257
P. Queen. So many journeys may the sun and moon

Make us again count o'er ere love be done! But, woe is me, you are so sick of late, 158 So far from cheer and from your former state, That I distrust you. Yet, though I distrust, Discomfort you, my lord, it nothing must; For women fear too much even as they love, And women's fear and love hold quantity, In neither aught, or in extremity.

Now, what my love is, proof hath made you know:

And as my love is six'd, my fear is so. 165
Where love is great, the littlest doubts are fear;
Where little fears grow great, great love grows there.

P. King. Faith, I must leave thee, love, and shortly too:
My operant powers their functions leave to do; And thou shalt live in this fair world behind, Honour'd, belov'd; and haply one as kind For husband shalt thou—

P. Queen. O, confound the rest 1
Such love must needs be treason in my breast.
In second husband let me be accurs! 1 274
None wed the second but who kill'd the first.
Ham. That's wormwood, wormwood.

P. Queen. The instances that second marriage move

Are base respects of thrift, but none of love.

A second time I kill my husband dead,

When second husband kisses me in bed. 1800

D. King, I do believe one think many

P. King. I do believe you think what now you speak;

But what we do determine oft we break.
Purpose is but the slave to memory,
Of violent birth, but poor validity;
Which now, the fruit unripe, sticks on the tree;
But fall unshaken when they mellow be.

Most necessary 'tis that we forget To pay ourselves what to ourselves in passion we propose, The passion ending, doth the purpose lose. 190 The violence of either grief or joy Their own enactures with themselves destroy. Where joy most revels grief doth most lament; Grief joys, joy grieves, on slender accident. This world is not for aye; nor 'tis not strange That even our loves should with our fortunes.

change;
For 'tis a question left us yet to prove,

Scene 2] HAMLET

Whether love lead fortune or else fortune love The great man down, you mark his favourite flies ;

The poor advanc'd makes friends of enemies. And hitherto doth love on fortune tend ; For who not needs shall never lack a friend, And who in want a hollow friend Joth try, Directly seasons him his enemy. But, orderly to end where I begun,

Our wills and fates do so contrary run That our devices still are overthrown: Our thoughts are ours, their ends none of our own.

So think thou wilt no second husband wed: But die thy thoughts when thy first lord is dead.

P. Queen. Nor earth to me give food, nor heaven light,

Sport and repose lock from me day and nıght,

To desperation turn my trust and hope, An anchor's cheer in prison be my scope, Each opposite that blanks the face of joy 215 Meet what I would have well, and it destroy, Both here and hence pursue me lasting strife, If, once a widow, ever I be wife!

Ham. If she should break it now!

P. King, 'Tis deeply sworn. Sweet, leave me here auhile ;

My spirits grow dull, and fain I would beguile

The telious day with sleep. Sleeps. P. Queen. Sleep rock thy brain, And never come mischance between us twain! Exit.

Ham. Madam, how like you this play? Queen. The lady doth protest too much, methinks.

Ham. O, but she'll keep her word. King. Have you heard the argument? Is there no offence in't?

Ham. No, no; they do but jest, poison

King. What do you call the play?

Ham. 'The Mouse-trap,' Marry, how?

Tropically. This play is the image of a murder done in Vienna: Gonzago is the duke's name; his wife, Baptista. You shall see anon. 'Tis a knavish piece of work; but what of that? Your Majesty, and we that have free souls, it touches us not. Let the galled jade wince, our withers are unwrung.

Enter LUCIANUS.

This is one Lucianus, nephew to the King. Oph. You are as good as a chorus, my lord.

Ham. I could interpret between you and your love, if I could see the puppets dallying.

Oph. You are keen, my lord, you are keen. Ham. It would cost you a groaning to take off mine edge.

Oph. Still petter, and woise. Ham. So you mus-take your husbands .-Begin, murderer; pox, leave thy damnable faces and begin. Come; the crooking raven doth beliow for revenge.

Luc. Thoughts black, hands a t, drugs fit, and time agreeing;

Confederate season, else no creature seeing: Thou mixture rank, of midnight weeds collected,

With Hecat's ban thrice blasted, thrice infected,

Thy natural magic and dire property

On wholesome life usurps immediately. [Pours the poison in his ears.

Ham. 'A poisons him i' th' gaiden for his estate. His name's Gonzago. The story is extant, and written in very choice Italian. You shall see anon how the murderer gets the love of Gonzago's wife.

Oph. The King rises.

Ham. What, frighted with false fire! 250 Queen. How fares my lord?

Pol. Give o'er the play.

King. Give me some light. Away! Pol. Lights, lights, lights!

Exeunt all but Hamlet and Horatio. Ham. Why, let the strucken deer go weep, 265

The hait ungalled play; For some must watch, while some must sleep;

Thus runs the world away. 268 Would not this, sir, and a forest of feathers -- if the rest of my fortunes turn Turk with me -with two Provincial roses on my raz'd shoes, get the a fellowship in a cry of players,

Hor. Very well, my lord.

Ham. Upon the talk of the poisoning.

Hor. I did very well note him.

Ham. Ah, ha! Come, some music. Come, the recorders.

For if the King lik not the comedy, Why, then, belile to likes it not, perdy. Come, some much.

Re-enter Rosencrantz and Guildenstern.

Guil. Good my lord, vouchsafe me a word with you.

Ham. Sir, a whole history. Guil. The King, sir—

Ham. Ay, sir, what of him?

Guil. Is, in his retirement, marvellous distempired.

Ham. With drink, sir?

Guil. No, my lord, rather with choler.

Ham. Your wisdom should show itself more richer to signify this to his cloctor;
for for me to put him to his purgation would perhaps plunge him into far more choler.

Guil. Good my lord, put your discourse into some trame, and start not so wildly from my affair.

301

Ham. I am tame, sir. Pronounce.

Guil. The Queen, your mother, in most great affliction of spirit, hath sent me to you.

Ham. You are welcome.

Guil. Nay, good my lord, this courtesy is not of the right breed. If it shall please you to make me a wholesome answer, I will do your mother's commandment; if not, your pardon and my return shall be the end of my business.

Ham. Sir, I cannot. Ros. What, my lord?

Ham. Make you a wholesome answer; my wit's diseas'd. Bur, sir, such answer as I can make, you shall command; or rather, as you say, my mother. Therefore no more, but to the matter: my momer, you say—

31"

Ros. Then thus she says: your behaviour bath struck her into amazement and admiration.

Ham. O wonderful son, that can so stonish a mother! But is there no sequel at the heels of this mother's admiration?

Ros. She desires to speak with you in her closet ere you go to bed.

Ham. We shall obey, were she ten times our mother. Have you any further trade with us?

Ros. My lord, you once did love me. Ham. And do still, by these pickers and stealers.

Ros. Good my lord, what is your cause of distemper? You do surely bar the door upon your own liberty, if you deny your grafs to your triend.

Ham. Šir, I lack advancement.

Ros. How can that be, when you have the voice of the King himself for your succession in Denmark?

Ham. Ay, sir, but 'While the grass grows'—the proverb is something musty.

Re-enter the Players, with recorders.

O, the recorders! Let me see one. To withdraw with you—why do you go about to recover the wind of me, as if you would drive me into a toil?

Guil. O my lord, if my duty be too bold, my love is too unmannerly.

Ham. I do not well understand that. Will you play upon this pipe?

Gill My lord, I cannot.

Ham. I pray you.

Guil. Believe ine, I cannot. Ham. I do beseech you.

Guil. I know no touch of it, my lord.

Ham. It is as easy as lying: govern these ventages with your fingers and thumb, give it breath with your mouth, and it will discourse most eloquent music. Look you, these are the stops.

Guil. But these cannot I command to any utterance of harmony; I have not the skill.

Ham. Why, look you now, how unworthy a thing you make of me! You would play upon ine; you would seem to know my stops; you would pluck out the heart of my invitery; you would sound me from my low is note to the top of my compass; and there is much music, excellent voice, and there is much music, excellent voice, and there is much music, excellent voice, and this little organ, yet cannot you make it speak. 'Shlood, do you think! an easier to be play'd on than a pipe? Call nie what instrument you will, floogh you can teet me, yet you cannot play upon me.

Re-enter Polonius.

God bless you, sir l

Pol. My ford, the Queen would speak with you, and presently.

Ham. Do you see yonder cloud that's almost in shape of a camel?

Pol. By th[†] mass, and 'tis like a camel indeed.

Ham. Methinks it is like a weasel.

Pol. It is back'd like a weasel.

Ham. Or like a whale? Pol. Very like a whale.

Ham. Then I will come to my mother by and by. [Aside] They tool me to the top of my bent.—I will come by and by.

Pol. I will say so. [Exit Polonius. Ham. 'By and by 'ts easily said. Leave me, friends. [Execut all but Hamlet.

'Tis now the very witching time of night, When churchyards yawn, and hell itself breathes out

Contagion to this world. Now could I driok hat blood,

And do such bitter business as the day Would quake to look on. Soft! now to my mother.

Scene III. Elsmore. The Castle. Enter KING, ROSENGPANIZ, and GUILDEN-STERN.

King. I like luni no.; nor stands it safe with us

To let his madness range. Therefore prepare you;

I your commission will forthwith dispatch. And he to England shall along with you. The terms of our estate may not endure 5 Hazard so near's as doth hourly grow Out of his brows.

We will ourselves provide. Guil. Most holy and religious fear it is

To keep those many many bedies safe That live and feed upon your Majesty. Ros. The single and peculiar life is bound With all the strength and armour of the mind To keep itself from novance; but much more That spirit upon whose weal depends and rests

The lives of many. The cease of majesty Dies not alone, but like a gulf doth draw What's near it with it. It is a massy wheel, Fix'd on the summit of the highest mount. To whose huge spokes ten thousand lesser things

Are mortis'd and adjoin'd; which when it falls,

Each small annexment, petty consequence, Attends the boist'rous ruin. Never alone Did the king sigh, but with a general groan. King. Arm you, I pray you, to this sneedy voyage; Por we will fetters put about this fear, 25 Which now goes too free-footed.

We will haste us. Ros. [Exeunt Rosencrantz and Guildenstern. Enter Polonius.

Pol. My lord, he's going to his mother's closet.

Behind the arras I'll convey myself To hear the process. I'll warrant she'll tax him home;

And, as you said, and wisely was it said, 30 Its meet that some more audience than a mother,

Since nature makes them partial, should o'ernear

Enter QUEEN and Polonius.

Pol. 'A will come straight. Look you lay home to him;

Tell him his pranks have been too broad to bear with,

Queen. Why, how now, Hamlet! What's the matter now?

Queen. Have you forgot me? No, by the rood, not so: Ĥam. You are the Queen, your husband's brother's wife; And-would it were not so !--you are my mother.

Queen. Nay then, I'll set those to you that can speak.

Ham. Come, come, and sit you down; you shall not budge.

And let me wring your heart; for so I shall, If it be made of penetrable stuff;

If daraned custom have not braz'd it so That it be proof and bulwark against sense. Queen. What have I done that thou dar'st wag thy tongue

In noise so rude against me?

Ham. Such an act 40 That blurs the grace and blush of modesty; Calls virtue hypocrite; takes off the rose From the fair forehead of an innocent love, And sets a blister there; makes marriage-VOWS

Ham. Look here upon this picture and on this,

See what a grace was seated on this brow; Hyperion's curls; the front of Jove himself;

An eye like Mars, to threaten and command; A station like the herald Mercury New lighted on a heaven-kissing hill-A combination and a form indeed

Where every god did seem to set his seal,

To give the world assurance of a man. This was your husband. Look you now what follows:

Here is your husband, like a mildew'd ear Blasting his wholesome brother. Have you eves?

Could you on this fair mountain leave to feed.

And batten on this moor? Ha! have you eyes?

You cannot call it love; for at your age The heyday in the blood is tame, it's humble.

And waits upon the judgment; and what iudement

Would step from this to this? Sense, sure, vou have.

Else could you not have motion; but sure that sense

Is apoplex'd; for madness would not err, Nor sense to ecstasy was ne'er so thrall'd But it reserv'd some quantity of choice 75 To serve in such a difference. What devil was't

That thus hath cozen'd you at hoodmanblind?

As will not leave their tinct.

Nay, but to live In the rank sweat of an enseamed bed, Stew'd in corruption, honeying and making love

Over the nasty sty!

Oueen. O, speak to me no more! These words like daggers enter in my ears; No more, sweet Hamlet.

A murderer and a villain! A slave that is not twentieth part the tithe Of your precedent lord; a vice of kings; A cutpurse of the empire and the rule, 99 That from a shelf the precious diadem stole And put it in his pocket!

Queen. No more!

Enter Ghost.

Ham. A king of shreds and patches-

Save me, and hover o'er me with your wings.

You heavenly guards! What would your gracious figure?

Queen. Alas, he's mad!

Ham. Do you not come your tardy son to chide.

That, laps'd in time and passion, lets go by Th' important acting of your dread command?

O. say!

Ghost. Do not forget; this visitation 110 Is but to whet thy almost blunted purpose But look, amazement on thy mother sits. O step between her and her fighting soul! Conceit in weakest bodies strongest works. Speak to her, Hamlet.

Ham. I low is it with you, lady? Queen. Alas, how is't with you. That you do bend your eye on vacancy, And with th' incorporal air do hold discourse?

Forth at your eyes your spirits wildly peep; And, as the sleeping soldiers in th' alarm, Your bedded hairs like life in excrements Start up and stand an end. O gentle son, Upon the heat and flame of thy distemper Sprinkle cool patience! Whereon do you look?

Ham. On him, on him! Look you how pale he glares.

His form and cause conjoin'd, preaching to stones,

Would make them capable.—Do not look upon me.

Lest with this piteous action you convert My stern effects; then what I have to do Will want true colour-tears perchance for blood.

Queen. To whom do you speak this? Ham. Do you see nothing there? Queen. Nothing at all; yet all that is Queen. This is the very coinage of your brain.

This bodiless creation ecstasy

Is very cunning in.

Ecstasy! Ham. My pulse as yours doth temperately keep

For in the fatness of these pursy times Virtue itself of vice must pardon beg, Yea, curb and woo for leave to do him good.

Queen. O Hamlet, thou hast cleft my heart in twain.

Ham. O, throw away the worser part of it.

And live the purer with the other half. Good night—but go not to my uncle's bed; Assume a virtue, if you have it not. That monster custom, who all sense doth

For use almost can change the stamp of nature,

And either curb the devil, or throw him

With wondrous potency. Once more, good night;

And when you are desirous to be blest, I'll blessing beg of you. For this same lord I do repent; but Heaven hath pleas'd ît so,

To punish me with this, and this with me, That I must be their scourge and minister. I will bestow him, and will answer well The death I gave him. So, again, good night.

I must be cruel only to be kind; Thus bad begins and worse remains behind. One word more, good lady.

Queen. What shall I do? 180 Ham. Not this, by no means, that I bid vou do :

Let the bloat King tempt you again to bed; Pinch wanton on your cheek; call you his mouse:

And let him, for a pair of reechy kisses, Or paddling in your neck with his damn'd fingers, Make you to ravel all this matter out, That I essentially am not in madness, But mad in craft. 'Twere good you let him

For who that's but a queen, fair, sober,

Such dear concernings hide? Who would do so?

Act 4

No, in despite of sense and secrecy. Unpeg the basket on the house's top. Let the birds fly, and, like the famous ape, To try conclusions, in the basket creep 195 And break your own neck down.

Queen. Be thou assur'd, if words be made of breath

And breath of life, I have no life to breathe What thou hast said to me.

Ham. I must to England; you know that?

Queen. Alack, 200 I had forgot. 'Tis so concluded on.

Ham. There's letters seal'd; and my two school-fellows.

Whom I will trust as I will adders fang'd-They bear the mandate; they must sweep my way

And marshal me to knavery. Let it work: For 'tis the sport to have the engineer Hoist with his own petar; and't shall go

But I will delve one yard below their mines And blow them at the moon. O, 'tis most

When in one line two crafts directly meet. This man shall set me packing. I'll lug the guts into the neighbour room. Mother, good night. Indeed, this counsellor Is now most still, most secret, and most

Hamlet in madness hath Polonius slain, And from his mother's closet hath he dragg'd him;

Scene II. Elsinore. The Castle.

Enter HAMLET.

Ham. Safely stow'd. Gentlemen. [Within] Hamlet I Lord Hamlet i

Ham. But soft! What noise? Who calls on Hamlet? O. here they come!

Enter ROSENCRANTZ and CUILDENSTEIN.

Ros. What have you done, my lord, with the dead body? Ham. Compounded it with dust, whereto

'tis kin. Ros. Tell us where 'tis, that we may take it thence

Ham. Do not believe it.

Ros. Believe what?

Ham. That I can keep your counsel, and We would not understand what was most not mine own. Besides, to be demanded of a sponge-what replication should be made by the son of a king?

Ros. Take you me for a sponge, my lord? Ham. Ay, sir; that soaks up the King's countenance, his rewards, his authorities. But such officers do the King best service in the end: he keeps them, like an are an apple in the corner of his jaw; first mouth'd. to be last swallowed; when he needs what you have glean'd, it is but squeezing you and, sponge, you shall be dry again.

Ros. I understand you not, my lord. Ham. I am glad of it; a knavish speech sleeps in a foolish ear.

Ros. My lord, you must tell us where the body is, and go with us to the King.

Ham. The body is with the King, but the King is not with the body. The King is a thing-

Guil. A thing, my lord!

Ham. Of nothing. Bring me to him. Hide fox, and all after. [Excunt. 30

SCENE III. Elsinore. The Castle. Enter KING, attended.

King. I have sent to seek him, and to find the body.

How dangerous is it that this man goes loose!

Yet must not we put the strong law on him:

He's lov'd of the distracted multitude, Who like not in their judgment but their eyes; And where 'tis so, th' offender's scourge is weigh'd, But never the offence. To bear all smooth and even. This sudden sending him away must seem Deliberate pause. Diseases desperate grown

By desperate appliance are reliev'd, Or not at all.

Enter ROSENCRANTZ.

How now! what hath befall'n? Ros. Where the dead body is bestow'd, my lord,

We cannot get from him. King. But where is he? Ros. Without, my lord; guarded, to And, England, if my love thou hold'st at know your pleasure.

King. Bring him before us. T 4. Ros. Ho, Guildenstern! bring in the lord.

Enter Hamlet and Guildenstern.

King, Now, Hamlet, where's Polonius? Ham At supper.

King. At supper! Where?

Ham. Not where he eats, but where 'a is eaten: a certain convocation of politic worms are e'en at him. Your worm is your only emperor for diet: we fat all creatures else to fat us, and we fat ourselves for maggots; your fat king and your lean beggar is but variable service-two dishes, but to one table. That's the end.

King. Alas, alas!

Ham A man may fish with the worm that bath eat of a king, and eat of the fish that hath ted of that worm.

King. What dost thou mean by this? Ham. Nothing but to show you how a king may go a progress through the guts of a beggar.

King. Where is Polonius?

Ham. In heaven; send thither to see; if your messenger find him not there, seek him i' th' other place yourself. But if, indeed, you find him not within this month, you shall nose him as you go up the stairs into the lobby.

King [To Attendants] Go seek him there. Ham. 'A will stay till vou come.

[Exeunt Attendants. King, Hamlet, this deed, for thine especial safety-

Which we do tender, as we dearly grieve For that which thou hast done-must send thee hence

With fiery quickness. Therefore prepare thyself;

The bank is ready, and the wind at help, in Th' associates tend, and everything is bent For England.

For England! Ham.

King. Ay, Hamlet.

Ham. Good ! King. So is it, if thou knew'st our purposes.

Ham. I see a cherub that sees them. But, come; for England! Farewell, dear mother.

king. Thy loving father, Hamlet.

Ham. My mother: father and mother is man and wife; man and wife is one flesh; and so, my mother. Come, for England. [Exit.

King. Follow him at foot; 'tempt him with speed aboard;

Delay it not; I'll have him hence to-night. Away! for everything is seal'd and done That else leans on th' affair. Pray you make haste.

(Exeunt all but the King.

Scene V. Elsinore. The Castle.

Enter QUEEN, HORATIO, and a Gentleman.

Queen. I will not speak with her.

Gent. She is importunate, indeed distract. Her mood will needs be pitied.

Queen. What would she have? Gent. She speaks much of her father; says she hears

There's tricks I' th' world, and hems, and but when they ask you what it means, say beats her heart:

in doubt.

That carry but half sense. Her speech is nothing,

Yet the unshaped use of it doth move The hearers to collection they yawn

Queen. Let her come in. [Exit Gentleman. [Aside] To my sick soul, as sin's true nature

So full of artless jealousy is guilt, It spills itself in tearing to be spilt.

Enter OPHELIA distructed.

Oph. Where is the beauteous Majesty of Denmark?

Queen. How now, Ophelia!

Oth. [Sings]

How should I your true love know From another one? By his cockle hat and staff.

And his sandal shoon.

Queen. Alas, sweet lady, what imports this song?

Oph. Say you? Nay, pray you mark.

Enter KING.

Queen. Alas, look here, my ford Oph. Larded with sweet flowers: Which bewept to the grave did not go

With true-love showers.

King. How do you, pretty lady? 39 Oph. Well, God dild you! They say the owl was a baker's daughter. Lord, we know what we are, but know not what we may be. God be at your table!

King. Conceit upon her father.

Oph. Pray let's have no words of this; s you this:

King. Pretty Ophelia! Oph. Indeed, la, without an oath, I'll make an end on't.

[Sings] By Gis and by Saint Charity, Alack, and fie for shame!

King. How long hath she been thus? 65 Oph. I hope all will be well. We must be patient; but I cannot choose but weep to think they would lay him i' th' cold ground. My brother shall know of it; and so I thank you for your good counsel. Come, my coach! Good night, ladies; good night, sweet ladies, good night, good night. [Exit.

King. Follow her close; give her good

Queen. Alack, what noise is this? Kine. Attend!

Enter a Gentleman.

Where are my Switzers? Let them guard the door.

What is the matter?

Gent. Save yourself, my lord: 95 The ocean, overpeering of his list, Eats not the flats with more impitious

haste

Than young Laertes, in a riotous head. O'erbears your officers. The rabble call him lord:

And, as the world were now but to begin. Antiquity forgot, custom not known, The ratifiers and props of every word,

They cry 'Choose we; Laertes shall be king'.

Caps, hands, and tongues, applaud it to the clouds,

'Laertes shall be king, Laertes king'. 105 Queen. How cheerfully on the false trail they cry! Noise within.

O, this is counter, you false Danish dogs ! King. The doors are broke.

Enter LAERTES, with Others, in arms.

Laer. Where is this king ?-Sirs, stand you all without.

All. No, let's come in.

Laer. I pray you give me leave. All. We will, we will. [Exeunt. 111 Laer. I thank you. Keep the door .- O thou vile king,

Give me my father! Queen. Calmly, good Laertes. Laer. That drop of blood that's calm proclaims me bastard;

Cries cuckold to my father; brands the harlot

Even here, between the chaste unsmirched brow

Of my true mother.

What is the cause, Laertes. King. That thy rebellion looks so giant-like? Let him go, Gertrude; do not fear our person:

There's such divinity doth hedge a king 120 That treason can but peep to what it would,

Acts little of his will. Tell me, Laertes, Why thou art thus incens'd. Let him go. Gertrude. Speak, man.

Laer. Where is my father? Dead. King.

King. Who shall stay you?

Laer. My will, not all the world's. And for my means, I'll husband them so well

Oph. [Sings] They bore him barefac'd on the bier;

Hey non nonny, nonny, hey nonny; And in his grave rain'd many a tear-

Fare you well, my dove!

Laer. Hadst thou thy wits, and didst persuade revenge.

It could not move thus. Oph. You must sing 'A-down, a-down', I pray you go with me.

But not by him, an you call him a-down-a. O, how the 126 wheel becomes it! It is the false steward, Laer. This nothing's more than matter. Oph. There's rosemary, that's for remembrance; pray you, love, remember. And there is pansies, that's for thoughts.

Laer. A document in madness—thoughts and remembrance fitted.

Oph. There's fennel for you, and columbines. There's rue for you; and here's some for me. We may call it herb of grace a Sundays. O, you must wear your rue with a difference. There's a daisy. I would give you some violets, but they wither'd all when my father died. They say 'a made a good end.

[Sings] For bonny sweet Robin is all my joy. Laer. Thought and affliction, passion, hell itself.

She turns to favour and to prettiness. Oph. [Sings] And will 'a not come again? And will 'a not come again?

No, no, he is dead. Go to thy death-bed,

He never will come again. 290 His beard was as white as snow.

All flaxen was his poll: He is gone, he is gone, And we cast away moan:

God-a-mercy on his soul! 195

And of all Christian souls, I pray God. God buy you. [Exit. Laer. Do you see this, O God?

King. Laertes, I must commune with your grief,

Or you deny me right. Go but apart, Make choice of whom your wisest friends you will, And they shall hear and judge 'twixt you and me.

If by direct or by collateral hand

They find us touch'd, we will our kingdom give.

Our crown, our life, and all that we call ours.

To you in satisfaction; but if not, Be you content to lend your patience to us,

And we shall jointly labour with your soul To give it due content.

Let this be so.

His means of death, his obscure funeral-No trophy, sword, nor hatchment, o'er his bones,

No noble rite nor formal ostentation-Cry to be heard, as 'twere from heaven to earth.

That I must call't in question.

So you shall: King. And where th' offence is, let the great axe fall.

[Exeunt. 1061 SCENE V1. Elsinore. The Castle.

Enter Horatio with an Attendant.

Hor. What are they that would speak with me?

Att. Sea-taking men, sir; they say they have letters for you.

How, ter them come in. [Exit Attendant. I do not know from what part of the world I should be greeted, if not from Lord Hamlet.

Enter Sailors.

Sail. God bless you, sir.

Hor. Let Him bless thee too.

Sail. 'A shall, sir, an't please Him. There's a letter for you, sii; it came from th' ambassador that was bound for England—if your name be Horatio, as I am let to know it is.

Hor. [Reads] 'Horatio, when thou shalt have overlook'd this, give these fellows some means to the King: they have letters for him. Ere we were two days old at sea, a pirate of very warlike appointment gave us chase. Finding ourselves too slow of sail, we put on a compelled valour; and in the grapple I boarded them. On the instant they got clear of our ship; so I alone became their prisoner. They have dealt with me like thieves of mercy; but they knew what they did: I am to do a good turn for them. Let the King have the letters I have sent; and repair thou to me with as much speed as thou wouldest fiy death. I have words to speak in thine ear will make thee dumb; yet are they much too light for the bore of the matter. These good fellows will bring thee where I am. Rosencrantz and Guildenstern hold their course for England; of them I have much to tell thee. Farewell.

He that thou knowest thine, HAMLET.'
Come, I will give you way for these your letters.

And do't the speedier that you may direct me

To him from whom you brought them. [Exeunt.

Scene VII. Elsinore. The Castle.

Enter KING and LAERTES.

King. Now must your conscience my acquittance seal,

And you must put me in your heart for friend,

Sith you have heard, and with a knowing ear,

That he which hath your noble father slain Pursu'd my life.

Laer. It well appears. But tell me 5 Why you proceeded not against these feats, 1062

So crimeful and so capital in nature, As by your safety, wisdom, all things else, You mainly were stirr'd up.

King. O, for two special reasons, Which may to you, perhaps, seem much-unsinew'd.

But yet to me th'are strong. The Queen his mother

Lives almost by his looks; and for myself, My virtue or my plague, be it either which—

She is so conjunctive to my life and soul That, as the star moves not but in his sphere,

I could not but by her. The other motive, Why to a public count I might not go, Is the great love the general gender bear him:

Who, dipping all his faults in their affection, Work like the spring that turneth wood to stone,

Convert his gives to graces; so that my arrows,

Too slightly timber'd for so loud a wind, Would have reverted to my bow again, But not where I have aim'd them.

Laer. And so have I a noble father lost; A sister driven into desp'rate terms, 20 Whose worth, if praises may go back again, Stood challenger on mount of all the age For her perfections. But my revenge will come.

King. Break not your sleeps for that.
You must not think 30

That we are made of stuff so flat and dull That we can let our beard be shook with danger,

And think it pastime. You shortly shall hear more.

I lov'd your father, and we love our self; And that, I hope, will teach you to imagine—

Enter a Messenger with letters.

How now! What news?

Mess. Letters, my lord, from Hamlet: These to your Majesty; this to the Queen. King. From Hamlet! Who brought them?

Mess. Sailors, my lord, they say; I saw them not.

They were given me by Claudio; he receiv'd them 40 Of him that brought them.

King. Laertes, you shall hear them. Leave us. [Exit Messenger.

[Reads] 'High and Mighty. You shall know I am set naked on your kingdom. Tomorrow shall I beg leave to see your kingly eyes; when I shall, first asking your pardon thereunto, recount the occasion of my sudden and more strange return. HAMLET.' What should this mean? Are all the I: St.

hat should this mean? Are all the icome back? Scene 7] HAMLET

Or is it some abuse, and no such thing?

Laer. Know you the hand?

King. 'Tis Hamlet's character. 'Naked'!
And in a postcript here, he says 'alone'
Can you devise me?

Laer. I am lost in it, my lord. But let him come:

It warms the very sickness in my heart 55 That I shall live and tell him to his teeth 'Thus didest thou'.

King. If it be so, Laertes—As how should it be so, how otherwise? Will you be rul'd by me?

Laer. Ay, my lord;

So you will not o'errule me to a peace. 60 King. To thine own peace. If he be now return'd.

As checking at his voyage, and that he means

No more to undertake it, I will work him To an exploit now ripe in my device, Under the which he shall not choose but fall;

And for his death, no wind of blame shall breathe;

But even his mother shall uncharge the practice

And call it accident.

Laer. My lord, I will be rul'd The rather, if you could devise it so That I might be the organ.

King. It falls right. 70
You have been talk'd of since your travel

And that in Hamlet's hearing, for a quality Wherein they say you shine. Your sum of parts

Did not together pluck such envy from him As did that one; and that, in my regard, 75 Of the unworthiest siege.

Laer. What part is that, my lord? King. A very riband in the cap of youth, Yet needful too; for youth no less becomes The light and careless livery that it wears Than settled age his sables and his weeds, Importing health and graveness. Two months since

Here was a gentleman of Normandy—
I have seen myself, and serv'd against, the French,

And they can well on horseback; but this gallant

Had witchcraft in't; he grew unto his seat, And to such wondrous doing brought his

As had he been incorps'd and demi-natur'd With the brave beast. So far he topp'd my thought.

That I, in forgery of shapes and tricks, Come short of what he did.

Laer. A Norman was't? 90
King. A Norman.

Laer. Upon my life, Lamord. King. The King. The very same

Laer. I know him well. He is the brooch indeed

And gem of all the nation.

King. He made confession of you;
And gave you such a masterly report
For art and exercise in your defence,
And for your rapier most especial.

That he cried out 'twould be a sight indeed
If one could match you. The scrimers of their nation

He swore had neither motion, guard, nor eye,

If you oppos'd them. Sir, this report of his Did Hamlet so envenom with his envy That he could nothing do but wish and beg Your sudden coming o'er, to play with you. Now, out of this—

Laer. What out of this, my lord?
King. Laertes, was your father dear to you?

Or are you like the painting of a sorrow, A face without a heart?

Laer. Why ask you this? 109
King. Not that I think you did not love your father;

But that I know love is begun by time,
And that I see, in passages of proof,
Time qualifies the spark and fire of it.
There lives within the very flame of love
A kind of wick or snuff that will abate it;
And nothing is at a like goodness still;
For goodness, growing to a pleurisy, Dies in his own too much. That we would do,

We should do when we would; for this 'would' changes,

And hath abatements and delays as many As there are tongues, are hands, are accidents;

And then this 'should' is like a spendthirft's sigh

That hurts by easing. But to the quick of th' ulcer:

Hamlet comes back; what would you undertake

To show yourself in deed your father's son More than in words?

Laer. To cut his throat i' th' church.

King. No place, indeed, should murder sanctuarize:

Revenge should have no bounds. But, good Laertes,

Will you do this? Keep close within your chamber.

Hamlet return'd shall know you are come home.

We'll put on those shall praise your excellence,

And set a double varnish on the fame The Frenchman gave you; bring you, in fine, together,

And wager on your heads. He, being remiss,

134

The very same. Most generous, and free from all contriving,

Will not peruse the foils; so that with eas Or with a little shuffling, you may choose A sword unbated, and, in a pass of practice Requite him for your father.

Laer. I will do't; And for that purpose I'll anoint my sword I bought an unction of a mountebank, 14 So mortal that but dip a knife in it.

Where it draws blood no cataplasm so rare, Collected from all simples that have virtue Under the moon, can save the thing from death

That is but scratch'd withal. I'll touch my point

With this contagion, that, if I gall him slightly,

It may be death.

King. Let's further think of this Weigh what convenience both of time and May fit us to our shape. If this should fail,

And that our drift look through our bad performance,
'Twere better not assay'd, therefore this project

Should have a back or second, that might hold If this did blast in proof. Soft! let me

We'll make a solemn wager on your cunnings—

I ha't.
When in your motion you are hot and dry—
As make your bouts more violent to that end—

And that he calls for drink, I'll have preferr'd him

A chalice for the nonce; whereon but sipping, If he by chance escape your venom'd stuck, Our purpose may hold there. But stay; what noise?

Enter QUEEN.

Queen. One woe doth tread upon another's heel,

So fast they follow. Your sister's drown'd, Laertes. 165

Laer. Drown'd! O, where?

Queen. There is a willow grows aslant the brook

That shows his hoar leaves in the glassy stream;

Therewith tantastic garlands did she make Of crowflowers, nettles, daisies, and long purples

That liberal shepherds give a grosser name, But our cold maids do dead men's fingers call them.

There, on the pendent boughs her coronet weeds

Clamb'ring to hang, an envious sliver broke; 174 When down her weedy trophies and herself 1064 Fell in the weeping brook. Her clothes spread wide 176 And, mermaid-like, awhile they bore her up:

Which time she chanted snatches of old lauds.

As one incapable of her own distress, Or like a creature native and indued

Unto that element; but long it could not be

Till that her garments, heavy with their drink,

Pull'd the poor wretch from her melodious lay
To muddy death.

Laer. Alas, then sue is drown'd! Queen. Drown'd, drown'd. 185
Laer. Too much of water hast thou, poor

Ophelia,
And therefore I forbid my tears; but yet

It is our trick; nature her custom holds, Let shame say what it will. When these are gone,

The woman will be out. Adieu, my lord. 190 I have a speech o' fire that fain would blaze But that this folly douts it. [Exit.

King. Let's follow, Gertrude. How much I had to do to calm his rage! Now fear I this will give it start again; 194 Therefore let's follow. [Exeunt.

ACT FIVE

Scene I.- Elsinore. A churchyard.

Enter two Clowns with spades and picks.

1 Clo. Is she to be buried in Christian burial when she wilfully seeks her own salvation?

2 Clo. I tell thee she is; therefore make her grave straight. The crowner hath sat on her, and finds it Christian burial.

1 Clo. How can that be, unless she drown'd herself in her own defence?

2 Clo. Why, 'tis found so.

1 Clo. It must be 'se offendendo'; it cannot be else. For here lies the point: if I drown myself wittingly, it argues an act; and an act hath three branches—it is to act, to do, to perform; argal, she drown'd herself wittingly.

2 Clo. Nay, but hear you, Goodman Delver.

1 Clo. Give me leave. Here lies the water; good. Here stands the man; good. If the man go to this water and drown himself, it is, will he, nill he, he goes—mark you that; but if the water come to him and drown him, he drowns not himself. Argal, he that is not guilty of his own death shortens not his own life.

2 Clo. But is this law?

1 Clo. Ay, marry, is't; crowner's quest law.

2 Clo. Will you ha the truth an't? If this had not been a gentlewoman, she should have been buried out a Christian burial.

1 Clo. Why, there thou sav'st; and the more pity that great folk should have count'nance in this world to drown or hang themselves more than their even Christen. Come, my spade. There is no ancient gentlemen but gard'ners, ditchers, and grave-makers; fession.

2 Clo. Was he a gentleman?

1 Clo. 'A was the first that ever bore arms.

2 Clo. Why, he had none.

1 Clo. What, art a heathen? How dost thou understand the Scripture? Scripture says Adam digg'd. Could he dig without arms? I'll put another question to thee. If thou answerest me not to the purpose, confess thyselt-

2 Clo. Go to. 40 1' Clo. 'Vhat is be that builds stronge than either the mason, the shipwright, of the carpenter?

2 Cb. The gallows-maker; for that frame outlives a thousand tenants.

1 Clo. I like thy wit well; in good faith the gallows does well; but how does it well? It does well to those that do ill. Now thou dost ill to say the gallows is built stronger than the church; ar al, the gallows may do well to thee. To 't again,

2 Clo. Who builds stronger than a mason, a shipwright, or a carpenter?

1 Clo Ay, tell me that, and unyoke.

2 Clo. Marry, now I can tell.

1 Clo. To 't.

2 Clo. Mass, I cannot tell.

Enter HAMLET and HORATIO, afar off.

1 Clo. Cudgel thy brains no I fore about it for your dull ass will not mend his pace w h beating; and when you are ask'd this question next, say 'a grave-maker': the houses he makes lasts till doomsday. Go, get thee to Yaughan; fetch me a stoup of [Exit Second Clown. liquor. [Digs and sings] In youth, when I did love, did love.

Methought it was very sweet.

To contract-o-the time for-a my behove.

O, methought there-a-was nothing-a meet.

Ham. Has this fellow no feeling of his business, that 'a sings in grave-making? 66 Hor. Custom hath made it in him a property of easiness.

Ham. 'Tis e'en so; the hand of little employment hath the daintier sense. I Clo. [Sings] But age, with his stealing Hath clawed me in his clutch. And hath shipped me intil the land. As if I had never been such.

[Throws up a skull. Ham. That skull had a tongue in it, and could sing once. How the knave jowls it to the ground, as if 'twere Cain's jawbone, that did the first murder! This might be the pate of a politician, which this ass now ley hold up Adam's pro- o'erreaches; one that would circumvent 31 God, might it not?

Hor. It might, my lord.

Ham. Or of a courtier; which could say Good morrow, sweet lord! How dost thou, sweet lord?' This might be my Lord Such-a-one, that praised my Lord Such-aone's horse, when 'a meant to beg itmight it not?

Hor. Ay, my lord. 85 Ham. Why, e'en so; and now my Lady Worm's, chapless, and knock'd about the mazard with a sexton's spade. Here's fine revolution, an we had the trick to see't. Did these bones cost no more the breeding but to play at loggats with them? Mine ache to think on't.

1 Clo. [Sings] A pick-axe and a spade, a spade.

For and a shrouding sheet: O, a pit of clay for to be made . For such a guest is meet.

[Throws up another skull. Ham. There's another. Why may not that be the skull of a lawyer? Where be his quiddities now, his quillets, his cases, his tenures, and his tricks? Why does he suffer this rude knave now to knock him about the sconce with a dirty shovel, and will not tell him of his action of battery? Hum! This fellow might be in's time a great buyer of land, with his statutes, his recognizances, his fines, his double youchers, his recoveries. Is this the fine of his fines, and the recovery of his recoveries, to have his fine pate full of fine dirt? Will his vouchers vouch him no more of his purchases, and double ones too, than the length and breadth of a pair of indentures? The very conveyances of his lands will scarcely lie in this box; and must th' inheritor himself have no more. ha?

Hor. Not a jot more, my lord.

Ham. Is not parchment made of sheepskuns ?

Hor. Ay, my lord, and of calves' skins too.

Ham. They are sheep and calves which seek out-assurance in that. I will speak to this fellow. Whose grave's this, sirrah? 1 Clo. Mine, sir.

[Sings] O, a pit of clay for to be made For such a guest is meet.

Ham. I think it be thine indeed, for thou liest in't.

1 Clo. You lie out on't, sir, and therefore 'tis not yours. For my part, I do not lie in't, yet it is mine. 1.20

Ham. Thou dost lie in't, to be in't and say it is thine; 'tis for the dead, not for the quick; therefore thou liest.

1 Clo. 'Tis a quick he, sır; 'twill away again from me to you.

Ham. What man dost thou dig it for ?

1 Clo. For no man, sir.

Ham. What woman, then?

1 Clo. For none neither.

Ham. Who is to be buried in't? 1 Clo. One that was a woman, sir; but, rest her soul, she's dead.

must speak by the card, or equivocation will undo us. By the Lord, Horatio, this three years I have took note of it: the age is grown so picked that the toe of the peasant comes so near the heel of the courtier, he galls his kibe. How long hast thou been a grave-maker?

1 Clo. Of all the days i' th' year, I came to't that day that our last King Hamlet overcame Fortinbras.

Ham. Fow long is that since?

1 Clo. Cannot you tell that? Every fool can tell that: it was that very day that young Hamlet was born-he that is mad, and sent into England.

Ham. Ay, marry, why was he sent into England?

I Clo. Why, because 'a was mad: 'a shall recover his wits there; or, if 'a do not, 'tis no great matter there.

Ham. Why?

1 Clo. 'Twill not be seen in him there: there the men are as mad as he.

Ham. How came he mad? 1 Clo. Very strangely, they say.

Ham. How strangely?

1 Clo. Faith, e'en with losing his wits.

Ham. Upon what ground?

1 Clo. Why, here in Denmark. I have been sexton here, man and boy, thirty years.

Ham. How long will a man lie i' th' earth ere he rot?

1 Clo. Faith, if 'a be not rotten before 'a die-as we have many pocky corses nowa-days that will scarce hold the laying in-'a will last you some eight year or nine year. A tanner will last you nine year. 163 Ham. Why he more than another?

1 Clo. Why, sir, his hide is so tann'd with his trade that 'a will keep out water a great while; and your water is a sore decayer of your whoreson dead body. Here's a skull now; this skull has lien you i' th' earth three and twenty years.

Ham. Whose was it?

I Clo. A whoreson mad fellow's it was. Whose do you think it was?

Ham. Nay, I know not.

1 Clo. A pestilence on him for a mad rogue! 'A poured a flagon of Rhenish on my head once. This same skull, sir, was, sir. Yorick's skull, the King's jester. Ham. This?

1 Clo. E'en that.

Ham. Let me see. [Takes the skull] Alas. poor Yorick! I knew him, Horatio: a fellow of infinite jest, of most excellent fancy; he hath borne me on his back a thousand times. And now how abhorred in my imagination it is! My gorge rises at it. Here hung those lips that I have kiss'd I know not how oft. Where be your gibes Ham. How absolute the knave is! We now, your gambols, your songs, your flashes of merriment that were wont to set the table on a roar? Not one now to mock your own grinning-quite chap-fall'n? Now get you to my lady's chamber, and tell her, let her paint an inch thick, to this favour she must come; make her laugh at that. Prithee, Horatio, tell me one thing.

Hor. What's that, my lord? Ham. Dost thou think Alexander look'd 110 a this fashion i' th' earth?

Hor. E'en so.

Ham. And smelt so? Pah! Throws down the skull.

Hor. E'en so, my lord.

Ham. To what base uses we may return. Horatio! Why may not imagination trace the noble dust of Alexander till 'a find it stopping a bung-hole?

Hor. Twere to consider too curiously to consider so.

Ham. No, faith, not a jot; but to follow him thither with modesty enough, and likelihood to lead it, as thus: Alexander died, Alexander was buried, Alexander returneth to dust; the dust is earth; of earth we make loam; and why of that loam whereto he was converted might they not stop a beer-barrel?

Imperious Cæsar, dead and turn'd to clay.

Might stop a hole to keep the wind away. O, that that earth which kept the world in awe

Should patch a wall t' expel the winter's

But soft! but soft! awhile. Here comes the

Enter the KING, QUEEN, LAERTES, in funeral procession after the coffin, with Priest and Lords attendant.

The Queen, the courtiers. Who is this they follow?

And with such maimed rites? This doth betoken

The corse they follow did with desperate Fordo it own life. 'Twas of some estate. 215

Couch we awhile and mark.

Laer. What ceremony else?

Ham. That is Laertes, a very nobic youth. Mark.

Laer. What ceremony else?

Priest. Her obsequies have been as la enlarg'd

As we have warrantisc. Her death was doubtful;

And, but that great command o'eisways the order.

She should in ground unsanctified have lodg'd

Till the last trumpet; for charitable prayers,

Shards, flints, and pebbles, should be thrown on her: Yet here she is allow'd her virgin crants.

Her maiden strewments, and the bringing home

Of bell and burial.

Laer. Must there no more be done? No more be done. Priest.

We should profane the service of the dead To sing sage requiem and such rest to her As to peace-parted souls.

Lay her i' th' earth; And from her fair and unpolluted flesh

May violets spring! I tell thee, churlish priest, A minist'ring angel shall my sister be 235

When thou liest howling. What, the fair Ophelia!

Queen. Sweets to the sweet; farewell! [Scattering flowers.

I hop'd thou shouldst have been my Hamlet's wife; I thought thy bride-bed to have deck'd, sweet maid, And not have strew'd thy grave.

O, treble woe 240 Fall ten times treble on that cursed bead Whose wicked deed thy most ingenious sense Depriv'd thee of! Hold off the earth awhile, Till I have caught her once more in mine arms. [Leaps into the grave. Now pile your dust upon the quick and dead,

Till of this flat a mountain you have made T' o'er-top old Pelion or the skyish head Of blue Olympus.

Ham. [Advancing] What is he whose grief Bears such an emphasis, whose phrase of sorrow

Conjures the wand'ring stars, and makes them stand

Like wonder-wounded hearers? This is I. Hamlet the Dane. [Leaps into the grave. Laer. The devil take thy soul!

[Grappling with him. Thou pray'st not well. Ham. I prithee take thy fingers from my throat: For, though I am not splenitive and rash, Yet I ave I in me something dangerous, 256 [Retiring with Hongito. | Which let thy wiseness fear. Hold off thy haud.

King, Phick them asunder, Queen. Hamlet! Haralet! All Gentlemen :

ito. Cood my lord, be quiet.

[The Attendants part them, and they came out of the grave.

Ham. Why, I will fight with him upon this theme

Until my eyelids will no longer wag.

Queen. O my son, what theme? Ham. I lov'd Ophelia: forty thousand brothers

Could not, with all their quantity of love. Make up my sum. What wilt thou do for her ? 265

King. O, he is mad, Laertes. Ducen. For love of God, forbear him. Hair. 'Swounds, show me what th'owt

Woo't weep, woo't fight, woo't fast, woo't tear thyself. Woo't'diink up eisel, eat a crocodile? 270

I'll do't. Dost come here to whine? To outface me with leaping in her grave? Be buried quick with her, and so will I;

And, if they prate of mountains, let them

Millions of acres on us, till our ground, 275 Singeing his pate against the burning zone, Make Ossa like a wart! Nay, an thou'lt mouth.

I'll rant as well as thou.

Queer. This is mere madness: And thus a while the fit will work on him; Anon, as patient as the female dove When that her golden couplets are dis-

Clos u,
His silence will sit drooping.
Hear you, sir: What is the reason that you use me thus? I lov'd you ever. But it is no matter. Let Hercules himself do what he may,

The cat will mew, and dog will have his day. IExit. King. I pray thee, good Horatio, wait [Exit Horatio. upon him. [To Laertes] Strengthen your patience in our last night's speech;

We'll put the matter to the present push.— Good Gertrude, set some watch over your

This grave shall have a living monument. An hour of quiet shortly shall we see;

Till then in patience our proceeding be. Exeunt.

The Castle. Scene II. Elsinore.

Enter HAMLET and HORATIO.

Ham. So much for this, sir; now shall you see the other.

You do remember all the circumstance?

Hor. Remember it, my lord!

Ham. Sir, in my heart there was a kind of fighting

That would not let me sleep. Methought I lay

Worse than the mutines in the bilbees. Rashly.

And prais'd be rashness for it—let us know, Our indiscretion sometime serves us well, When our deep plots do pall; and that should learn us

There's a divinity that shapes our ends, 10 Rough-hew them how we will.

Hor. That is most certain.

Ham. Up from my cabin,

My sea-gown scarf'd about me, in the dark Grop'd I to find out them; had my desire; Finger'd their packet, and in fine withdrew To mine own room again, making so bold, My fears forgetting manners, to unseal 17 Their grand commission; where I found, Horatio.

Ah, royal knavery! an exact command, Larded with many several sorts of reasons, Importing Denmark's health and England's too,

With, ho! such bugs and goblins in my

That, on the supervise, no leisure bated, No, not to stay the grinding of the axe, My head should be struck off.

Hor. Is't possible? 25
Ham. Here's the commission; read it at more lessure.

But wilt thou hear now how I did proceed?

Hor. I beseech you.

Ham. Being thus benetted round with villainies—

Ere I could make a prologue to my brains, 30 They had begun the play—I sat me down; Devis'd a new commission; wrote it fair. I once did hold it, as our statists do,

A baseness to write fair, and labour'd much How to forget that learning; but, sir, now It did me yeoman's service. Wilt thou know

Th' effect of what I wrote?

Hor. Ay, good my lord. Ham. An earnest conjuration from the King.

As England was his faithful tributary,
As love between them like the palm might flourish,
40

As peace should still her wheaten garland

And stand a conima 'tween their amities, And many such like as-es of great charge, That, on the view and knowing of these contents,

Without debatement further more or less, He should those bearers put to sudden death, Not shriving-time allow'd.

Hor. How was this seal'd?

Ham. Why, even in that was heaven ordinant.

I had my father's signet in my purse, 49 Which was the model of that Danish seal; Folded the writ up in the form of th' other; Subsciih'd it, gave't th' impression, plac'd it safely,

The changeling never known. Now, the next day

Was our sea-fight; and what to this was sequent

Thou knowest already.

Hor. So Guildenstern and Rosencrantz go to't.

Ham. Why, man, they did make love to this employment;
They are not near my conscience; their defeat

Does by their own insinuation grow: 59
Tis dangerous when the baser nature comes Between the pass and fell incensed points

Of mighty opposites.

Hor. Why, what a king is this!

Ham Does it not think thee stond and

Ham. Does it not, think thee, stand me now upon—
He that hath kill'd my king and whor'd my mother;

Popp'd in between th' election and my hopes; 65

Thrown out his angle for my proper life,
And with such coz'nage—is't not perfect conscience

To quit him with this arm? And is't not to be damn'd

To let this canker of our nature come

In further evil?

Hor. It must be shortly known to him from England

What is the issue of the business there.

Ham. It will be short; the interim is mine,

And a man's life's no more than to say
'one'.

But I am very sorry, good Horatio,
That to Laertes I forgot myself;
For by the image of my cause I see

The portraiture of his. I'll court his favours.

But sure the bravery of his grief did put me Into a tow'ring passion.

Hor. Peace; who comes here? 80

Enter young OSRIC.

Osr. Your lordship is right welcome back to Denmark.

Ham. I humbly thank you, sir. [Aside to Horatio] Dost know this water-fly?

Hor. [Aside to Hamlet] No, my good lord. Ham. [Aside to Horatio] Thy state is the more gracious; for 'tis a vice to know him. He hath much land, and fertile. Let a beast be lord of beasts, and his crib shall stand at the king's mess. 'Tis a chough; but, as I say, spacious in the possession of dirt.

Osr. Sweet loid, if your lo dship were at leisure. I should impart a thing to you hom his Majesty.

Ham. I will receive it, sir, with all diligence of spirit. Put your bonnet to hi right use; 'tis for the head.

Osr. I thank your lordship; it is vety hot. 91 Ham. No, believe me, 'tis' 'ry cold; the wind is northerly

It is indifferent cold, my lord, Osr. indeed.

Ham. But yet methinks is is very sultiy and hot for my complexion.

Osr. Exceedingly, my lord; it is very sultry, as 'twere—i cannot tell how. But, my lord, his Majesty bade me signify to you that 'a has laid a great wager on your head. Sii, this is the matter-

Ham. I beseech you, remember.

Hamlet moves him to put on his hai. Osr. Nay, good my lord; tot my ease, in good faith. Sir, here is newly come to couit Laertes; believe me, an absolute gentleman, full of most excellent differences, of very soft society and great showing. Indeed, to speak feelingly of him, he is the card or calendar of gentry, for you shall find in him the continent of what part a gentleman would see.

Hame Sir, his definement suffers no perdition in you; though, I know, to divide him inventorially would dozy the arithmetic of memory, and yet but vaw neitner in respect of his quick sail. But, in the verity of extolment, I take him to be a soul of great article, and his infusion of such dearth and rareness as, to make true diction of him, his semblable is his mirror, and who else would trace him, his umbrage, nothing more.

Osr Your lordship speaks most infallibly of him.

Ham. The concernancy, sir? Why do we wrap the gentleman in our more rawer breath ?

Osr. Sir?

Hor. [Aside to Hamlet] Is't not possible to understand in another tongue? You will to't, sir, really.

Ham. What imports the nomination of this gentleman?

Osr. Of Lacrtes?

Hor. [Aside] His purse is empty already; all's golden words are spent.

Ham. Of him, sir.

Osr. I know you are not ignorant— Ham. I would you did, sir; yet, in faith, if you did, it would not much approve me. Well, sir.

Osr. You are not ignorant of what excellence Laertes is-

Ham. I dare not confess that, lest I should compare with him in excellence; but to know a man well were to know himself. 139

Ost, I mean, su, for his weepon; but in the proportation laid on him by 'nem, in his meed he's unfellowed.

Ham. What's his weapon?

Osr. Rapier and dagger.

Ham That's two of his reapons-but well.

Osr. The King, sir, hath wiger'd with him-siz Barbary horses; against the which he has impon'd, as I take it, six Fresch rapiers and poniaids, with their assigns, as gudle, hangers, and so-three or the carriages, in faith, are very dear to fancy, very responsive to the fulls, most delicate carriages, and of very liberal conceil.

Ham. What call you the carriages? Hor. [Asides b Hamlel] I knew you must be Edified by the margent ere you had done.

Osr. The carriages, sir, are the hangers. Ham. The phrase would be more germane to the matter if we could carry a cannon by our sides. I would it might be hangers till then. But on: six Barbary horses against six French swords, their designs, and three liberal conceited carriages; that's the French bet against the Danish. this all impon'd, as you call it?

Osr. Th King, sir, hath laid, sir, that in a dozen passes between yourself and him he shall not exceed you three hits; he hath laid on twelve for nine, and it would come to immediate trial if your lordship would vouchsafe the answer.

Ham. How if I answer no?

Osr. I mean, my lord, the opposition of your person in trial.

Ham. Sir, I will walk here in the hall. If it please his Majesty, it is the breathing time of day with me; let the foils be brought, the gentleman willing, and the King hold his purpose, I will win for him an I can; if not, I will gain nothing but my shame and the odd hits.

Osr. Shall I redeliver you 'en se? Ham. To this effect, sir, after what flourish your nature will.

Osr. I commend my duty to your lordship. 'Ham. Yours, yours. [Exit Osric] He does well to commend it himself; there are no tongues else for's turn.

Hor. This lapwing runs away with the shell on his head.

Ham. 'A did comply, sir, with his dug before 'a suck'd it. Thus has he, and many more of the same bevy, that I know the drossy age dotes on, only got the tune of the time and outward habit of encounter-a kind of yesty collection, which carries them through and through the most fann'd and winnowed opinions; and do but blow them to their trial, the bubbles are out. 188

Enter a Lord.

Lord. My lord, his Majesty commended

roba

him to you by young Osric, who brings back Sir, in this audience. to him that you attend him in the hall. He Let my disclaiming from a purpos'd evil sends to know if your pleasure hold to play with Laertes, or that you will take longer time.

Ham. I am constant to my purposes; they follow the king's pleasure: if his fitness speaks, mine is ready now-or when-soever, provided I be so able as now. 195 Lord. The King and Queen and all are coming down.

Ham. In happy time.

Lord. The Queen desires you to use some gentle entertainment to Laertes before you fall to play.

Ham. She well instructs me. [Exit Lord. Hor. You will lose this wager, my lord.

Ham. I do not think so; since he went into France I have been in continual practice. I shall win at the odds. But thou wouldst not think how ill all's here about my heart; but it is no matter.

Hor. Nay, good my lord-

Ham. It is but foolery: but it is such a kind of gain-giving as would perhaps trouble

Hor. If your mind dislike anything, obey it. I will forestall their repair hither, and say you are not fit.

Ham. Not a whit, we defy augury: there is a special providence in the fall of a sparrow. If it be now, 'tis not to come; if it be not to come, it will be now; if it be not now, yet it will come—the readiness is all. Since no man owes of aught he leaves, what is't to leave betimes? Let be.

A table prepared. Trumpets, Drums, and Officers with cushions, foils and daggers. Enter King, Queen, Laertes, and all the State.

King. Come, Hamlet, come, and take this hand from me. IThe King buts Laertes's hand into Hamlet's.

Ham. Give me your pardon, sir. I have done you wrong;

But pardon 't, as you are a gentleman. This presence knows, 220

And you must needs have heard how I am punish'd

With a sore distraction. What I have done That might your nature, honour, and exception,

Roughly awake, I here proclaim was mad-

Was 't Hamlet wrong'd Laertes? Never Hamlet.

If Hamlet from himself be ta'en away, And when he's not himself does wrong Laertes,

Then Hamlet does it not, Hamlet denies it. Who does it, then? His madness. If't be so, Hamlet is of the faction that is wrong'd; His madness is poor Hamlet's enemy. 231

Free me so far in your most generous thoughts

That I have shot my arrow o'er the house And hurt my brother.

Laer. I am satisfied in nature. Whose motive in this case should still me most

To my revenge; but in my terms of honour I stand aloof, and will no reconcilement Till by some elder masters of known honour I have a voice and precedent of peace

To keep my name ungor'd-but till that time

I do receive your offer'd love like love. And will not wrong it.

I embrace it freely: And will this brother's wager frankly play. Give us the foils. Come on.

Come, one for me. Ham. I'll be your foil, Laertes; in mine ignorance

Your skill shall, like a star i' th' darkest night.

Stick fiery off indeed.

Lacr. You mock me, sir. Ham. No, by this hand.

King. Give them the foils, young Osric. Cousin Hamlet,

You know the wager?

Very well, my lord; Your Grace has laid the odds a' th' weaker

King.. I do not fear it: I have seen you both:

But since he's better'd, we have therefore odds. Laer. This is too heavy; let me see another. Ham. This likes me well. These foils have all a length? [They prepare to play. Osr. Ay, my good lord.

King. Set me the stoups of wine upon that table.

If Hamlet give the first or second hit, Or quit in answer of the third exchange, Let all the battlements their ordnance fire; The King shall drink to Hamlet's better breath, And in the cup an union shall he throw, Richer than that which four successive kings

In Denmark's crown have worn. Give me the cups ;

And let the kettle to the trumpet speak, The trumpet to the cannoneer without, The cannons to the heavens, the heaven to earth,

'Now the King drinks to Hamlet'. Come, 270 . begin-And you, the judges, bear a wary eye.

Scene 21 HAMLET

Ham. Come on, sir. In thee there is not half an hour's life: Laer. Come, my lord. [They play. The treacherous instrument is in thy hand, Ham. One. Unbated and envenom'd. The foul practice Hath turn'd itself on me; lo, here I he, 10 Laer. No. Ham. Judgment? Never to rise igain. Thy mother's poison'd. Osr. A hit, a very palpable hit. I can no more. The King, the King's to Laer. Well, again. blame. King. Stay, give me drink. Hamlet, this Ham. The point envenom'd too! pearl is thine: Then, venom, to thy work. [Stabs the King. Here's to thy health. All. Treason! treason! [Drum, trumpets, and shot. King. O, yet defend me, friends: I am but hurt. Give him the cup. 275 Ham. I'll play this bout first; set it by Ham. Enter Fortinbras and English Ambassadors, with drum, colours, and Attendants.

Fort. Where is this sight?

Hor. What is it you would see? If aught of woe or wonder, cease your search.

Fort. This quarry cries on havoc. C

What feast is toward in thine eternal cell That thou so many princes at a shot

So bloodily hast struck?

1 Amb. The sight is dismal;
And our affairs from England come too late:

360

The ears are senseless that should give us hearing

To tell him his commandment is fulfill'd, That Rosencrantz and Guildenstern are dead.

Where should we have our thanks?

Hor. Not from his mouth,
Had it th' ability of life to thank you: 365

He never gave commandment for their death.

But since, so jump upon this bloody question,

You from the Polack wars, and you from England,

Are here arrived, give order that these bodies

High on a stage be placed to the view; 370 And let me speak to th' yet unknowing world

How these things came about. So shall you hear

Of carna', bloody, and unnatural acts; Of accidental judgments, casual slaughters; Of deaths put on by cunning and forc'd cause;

And, in this upshot, purposes mistook Fall'n on th' inventors' heads—all this can I

Truly deliver.

Fort. Let us haste to hear it, And call the noblest to the audience.

For me, with sorrow I embrace my fortune;

I have some rights of memory in this kingdom,
Which now to ram my vantage doth invite me. Hor. Of that I shall have also cause to speak,

And from his mouth whose voice will draw on more.

But let this same be presently perform'd,
Eyen while men's minds are wild, lest more mischance

On plots and errors happen.

Fort. Let four captains Bear Hamlet like a soldier to the stage; For he was likely, had he been put on, To have provide most royal.

To have prov'd most royal; and for his passage
The soldier's music and the rite of war

Speak loudly for him.

Take up the bodies. Such a sight as this Becomes the field, but here shows much amiss.

Go, bid the soldiers shoot. [Exeunt marching.

A peal of ordnance shut off.

ACT ONE

Scene I. King Lear's palace.

Enter Kent. Gloucester, and Edmund.

Kent. I thought the King had more affected the Duke of Albany than Cornwall. Glo. It did always seem so to us: but now, in the division of the kingdom, it appears not which of the Dukes he values most: for equalities are so weigh'd that curiosity in neither can make choice of either's moiety.

Kent. Is not this your son, my lord? Glo. His breeding, sir, hath been at my charge. I have so often blush'd to acknowledge him that now I am braz'd to't. Kent. I cannot conceive you.

Glo. Sir, this young fellow's mother whereupon she grew roundwomb'd, and had indeed, sir, a son for her cradle ere she had a husband for her bed. Do you smell a fault?

Kent. I cannot wish the fault undone, the issue of it being so proper.

Glo. But I have a son, sir, by order of law, some year elder than this, who yet is no dearer in my account. Though this knave-came something saucily to the world before he was sent for, yet was his mother fair; there was good sport at his making, and the whoreson must be co mowledged.—Do you know this noble gentleman, Edmund?

Edm. No, my lord.

Glo. My Lord of Kent. Remember him hereafter as my honourable friend.

Edm. My services to your lordship. Kent. I must love you, and sue to know vou better.

Edm. Sir, I shall study deserving.

Glo. He hath been out nine years, and away he shall again. [Sennet] The King is coming.

Enter One bearing a coronet; then LEAR, then the DUKES OF ALBANY and CORN-WALL, next GONERIL, REGAN, CORDELIA. with Followers.

Lear. Attend the Lords of France and Burgundy, Gloucester. Glo. I shall, my liege.

[Exeunt Gloucester and Edmund Lear. Meantime we shall express our darker purpose.

Give me the map there. Know that we have divided

May be prevented now. The Princes, France and Burgundy, Great rivals in our youngest daughter's

Long in our court have made their amorous sojourn.

And here are to be answer'd. Tell me, my daughters-

Since now we will divest us both of rule, Interest of territory, cares of state-

Which of you shall we say doth love us most?

That we our largest bounty may extend Where nature doth with merit challenge. Goneril,

Our eldest-born, speak first.

Gon. Sir, I love you more than word can wield the matter:

Dearer than eyesight, space, and liberty; 55
Beyond what can be valued, rich or rare;
No less than life, with grace, health, beauty, honour;

As much as child e'er lov'd, or father found:

A love that makes breath poor and speech unable: 59

Beyond all manner of so much I love you. Cor. [Aside] What shall Cordelia speak? Love, and be silent.

Lear. Of all these bounds, even from this line to this,

With shadowy forests and with champains rich'd,

With plenteous rivers and wide-skirted meads,

We make thee lady: to thine and Albany's issues

Be this perpetual.—What says our second daughter,

Our dearest Regan, wife of Connwall? Speak.

Reg. I am made of that self metal as my sister,

And prize me at her worth. In my true heart

I find she names my very deed of love; 70 Only she comes too short, that I profess Myself an enemy to all other Joys Which the most precious square of sense possesses,

And find I am alone felicitate
In your dear Highness' love.

Cor. [Aside] Then poor Cordelia! And yet not so; since I am sure my love's More ponderous than my tongue.

Lear. To thee and thine hereditary ever Remain this ample third of our fair kingdom;

No less in space, validity, and pleasure, 80 Than that conferr'd on Goneril.—Now, our joy,

Although our last and least; to whose young love

The vines of France and milk of Burgundy Strive to be interess'd; what can you say to draw

A third more opulent than your sisters?

Speak.

87

Cor. Nothing, my lord.

Lear. Nothing!

Cor. Nothing.

Lear. Nothing will come of nothing. Speak again.

Cor. Unhappy that I am, I cannot heave My heart into my mouth. I love your Majesty According to my bond; no more nor less.

Lear. How, how, Cordelia! Mend your speech a little,

Lest you may mar your fortunes.

Cor. Good my lord,
You have begot me, bred me, lov'd me; I
Return those duties back as are right fit,
Obey you, love you, and most honour you.
Why have my sisters husbands, if they say
They love you all? Haply, when I shall

Sure I shall never marry like my sisters,
To love my father all.

Lear. But goes thy heart with this?
Cor.
Ay, my good lord.
Lear. So young and so untender?
Cor. So young, my lord, and true.
Lear. Let it be so! Thy truth, then, be thy dower!

For, by the scared radiance of the sun,
The mysteries of Hecat and the night;
By all the operation of the orbs

From whom we do exist and cease to be;
Here I disclaim all my paternal care,
Propinquity and property of blood,
And as a stranger to my heart and me
Hold thee from this for ever. The barbarous Scythian,

Or he that makes his generation messes To gorge his appetite, shall to my bosom Be as well neighbour'd, pitied, and reliev'd, As thou my sometime daughter.

Kent. Good my liege— Lear. Peace, Kent! 120 Come not between the dragon and his wrath.

I lov'd her most, and thought to set my rest

On her kind nursery. [To Cordelia] Hence, and avoid my sight!—

So be my grave my peace as here I give Her father's heart from her! Call France— Who stirs?

Call Burgundy. Cornwall and Albany, With my two daughters' dowers digest this third.

Let pride, which she calls plainness, marry her.

I do invest you jointly with my power, Pre-eminence, and all the large effects 130 -That troop with majesty. Ourself, by monthly course.

Reg. That's most certain, and with you; next month with us.

Gon. You see how full of changes his age is; the observation we have made of it hath not been little. He always lov'd our sister most; and with what poor judgment he hath now cast her off appears too grossly.

Scene II. Gloucester's castle.

Enter EDMUND with a letter.

Edm. Thou, Nature, art my goddess: to thy law

My services are bound. Wherefore should I Stand in the plague of custom, and permit The curiosity of nations to deprive me, For that I am some twelve or fourteen moonshines Lag of a brother? Why bastard? Wherefore base?

When my dimensions are as well compact, My mind as generous, and my shape as true,

As honest madam's issue? Why brand they us

With base? with baseness? bastardy? base, base?

Who, in the lusty stealth of nature, take More composition and fierce quality Than doth, within a dull, stale, tired bed, Go to th' creating a whole tube of fops Got 'tween asleep and wake? Well then, 15 Legitimate Edgar, I must have your land. Our father's love is to the bastard Edmund As to th' legitimate. Fine word 'legiti-mate'! Well, my legitimate, if this letter speed, 19 And my invention thrive, Edmund the base Shall top th' legitimate. I grow; I prosper. Now, gods, stand up for bastards.

Enter GLOUCESTER.

Glo. Kent banish'd thus! and France in choler parted!

And the King gone to-night! Prescrib'd his pow'r!

Confin'd to exhibition! All this done Upon the gad! Edmund, how now! What news?

Edm. So please your lordship, none.

[Putting up the letter. Glo. Why so earnestly seek you to put up that letter?

Edm. I know no news, my lord.

Glo. What paper were you reading?

Edm. Nothing, my lord.

Glo. No? What needed then that terrible dispatch of it into your pocket? The quality of nothing hath not such need to hide itself. Let's see. Come, if it be nothing, I shall not need spectacles.

Edm. I beseech you, sir, pardon me. It is a letter from my brother that I have not all o'er-read; and for so much as I have perus'd, I find it not fit for your o'er-looking.

Glo. Give me the letter, sir. Edm. I shall offend either to detain or give it. The contents, as in part I understand them, are to blame.

Glo. Let's see, let's see.

Edm. I hope, for my brother's justification, he wrote this but as an essay or taste of my virtue.

Glo. [Reads] 'This policy and reverence of age makes the world bitter to the best of our times; keeps our fortunes from us till our oldness cannot relish them. I begin to find an idle and fond bondage in the oppression of aged tyranny, who sways, not as it hath power, but as it is suffer'd. Come to me, that of this I may speak more. If our father would sleep till I wak'd him, you should enjoy half his revenue for ever, and live the beloved of your brother.

EDGAR.' 51
'Sleep till I wak'd Hum—Conspiracy! him, you should enjoy half his revenue.' My son Edgar! Had he a hand to write this? a heart and a brain to breed it in? When came this to you? Who brought it?

Edm. It was not brought me, my lord; there's the cunning of it. I found it thrown in at the casement of my closet.

Glo. You know the character to be your brother's ?

Edm. If the matter were good, my lord, I durst swear it were his; but in respect of that, I would fain think it were not. 62 Glo. It is his.

Edm. It is his hand, my lord; but I hope his heart is not in the contents.

Glo. Has he never before sounded you in this business?

Edm. Never, my lord; but I have heard him oft maintain it to be fit that, sons at perfect age and fathers declin'd, the father should be as ward to the son, and the son manage his revenue.

Glo. O villain, villain! His very opinion in the letter! Abhorred villain! natural, detested, brutish villain! Worse than brutish! Go, sirrah, seek him; apprehend him. Abominable villain! Where is he?

Edm. I do not well know, my lord. If it shall please you to suspend your indignayou should run a certain course; where, run, the firm ament twinkled it you violently proceed against him, on my bosserdizing. Edgar! mistaking his purpose, it would make a great gay in your own honour, and shake in pieces the beart of his obedience. I dare and to no other pietence of danger.

Glo. Think you so?

Edm. If your honour judge it meet, I will place you where you shall hear us confer of this, and by an auricular assurance have your satisfaction; and that without any further delay than this very evening.

Glo. He cannot be such a monster.

Edm. Not is not, sure.

Glo. To his father, that so tenderly and entitely loves him. Heaven and earth! Edmund, seek him out; wind me into him, I pray you. Frame the business after your own wisdom. I would unstate myself to be in a due resolution.

Edm. I will seek him, sir, presently; convey the business as I shall find means, and acquaint you withal.

Glo. These late eclipses in the sun and moon portend no good to us. Though the wisdom of nature can reason it thus and thus, yet nature finds itself scourg'd by the sequent effects: love cools, friendship falls off, brothers divide; in cities, discord; in countries, mutinies; palaces, treason; and the bond crack'd 'twixt son and father. This villain of mine comes under the prediction: there's son against father. The King falls from bias of nature: there's father against child. We have seen the best of our time: machinations, hollowness, treachery, and all ruinous disorders, follow us disquietly to our graves. Find out this villain, Edmund; it shall lose thee nothing; do it carefully. And the noble and truc-hearted Kent banish'd! His offence, honesty! 'Tıs strange. [Exit.

Edm. This is the excellent foppery of the world, that, when we are sick in fortune, often the surfeits of our own behaviour, we make guilty of our disasters the sun, the moon, and stars; as if we were villains on necessity; fools by heavenly compulsion; knaves, thieves, and treachers, by spherical drunkards, liars, predominance; adulterers, by an enforc'd obedience of planetary influence; and all that we are evil in, by a divine thrusting on-an admirable evasion of whoremaster man, to lay his goatish disposition on the charge of a star! Edg. Do you bucy yourself with that?

Edm. I promise you, the effects he writes of succeed unhappily; as of unnaturalness between the child and the parent; death. dearth, dissolutions of ancient amities; divisions in state, inenaces and maledictions against king and nobles; needless diffidences, banishment of friends, dissipation of cohorts, nuptial bucaches, and I know not what.

Edm. Come, come! When saw you my father last?

Edg. The night gone by. Edm. Spake you with him?

Edg. Ay, two hours together.

Edm. Parted you in good terms? Found you no displeasure in him by word nor countenance?

Edg. None at all. Edm. Bethink yourself wherein you may have offended him: and at my entreaty forbear his presence, until some little time hath qualified the heat of his displeasure, which at this instant so rageth in him that with the mischief of your person it would scarcely allay.

Edg. Some villain hath done me wrong. Edm. That's my fear. I pray you have a continent forbearance till the speed of his rage goes slower; and, as I say, retire with me to my lodging, from whence I will fitly bring you to hear my lord speak. Pray ye go; there's my key. If you do stir abroad, go arm'd.

Edg. Arm'd, brother!

Edm. Brother, I advise you to the best. I am no honest man if there be any good meaning toward you. I have told you what I have seen and heard-but faintly; nothing like the image and horror of it. Pray you, away.

Edg. Shall I hear from you anon? Edm. I do serve you in this business.

Shall find thee full of labours.

Horns within. Enter LEAR, Knights, and Attendants.

Lear. Let me not stay a jot for dinner: go get it ready. [Exit an Attendant] How now! What art thou?

Kent. A man, sir. Lear. What dost thou profess? What wouldst thou with us?

Kent. I do profess to be no less than I seem, to serve him truly that will put me in trust, to love him that is honest, to converse with him that is wise and says little, to fear judgment, to fight when I carnot choose, and to eat no fish.

Lear. What art thou?

Kent. A very honest-hearted fellow, and as poor as the King.

Lear. If thou be'st as poor for a subject as he's for a king, thou art poor enough. What wouldst thou?

Kent. Service.

Lear. Who wouldst thou serve?

Kent. You.

Lear. Dost thou know me, fellow? Kent. No, sir; but you have that in your countenance which I would fain call master.

Lear. What's that?

Kent. Authority.

Lear. What services canst thou do? Kent. I can keep honest counsel, ride, run, mar a curious tale in telling it, and deliver a plain message bluntly. which ordinary men are fit for, I am qualified in; and the best of me is diligence.

Lear. How old art thou?

Kent. Not so young, sir, to love a woman for singing, nor so old to dote on her for anything: I have years on my back forty-

Lear. Follow me; thou shalt serve me. If I like thee no worse after dinner, I will not part from thee yet. Dinner, ho, dinner! Where's my knave? my tool?—Go you and call my fool hither. [Exit an Attendant.

Enter OSWALD.

You, you, sirrah, where's my daughter? 44 Osw. So please you-Lear. What says the fellow there? Call the clotpoll back. [Exit a Knight] Where's my fool, ho? I think the world's asleep.

Re-enter Knight.

How now! Where's that mongrel? Knight. He says, my lord, your daughter is not well. Lear. Why came not the slave back to me

5 when I call'd him?

Knight. Sir, he answered me in the roundest manner he would not.

oundest manner he would not.

Lear. He would not!

Lear. He would not!

Knight. My lord, I know not what the matter is; but, to my judgment, your Highness is not entertain'd with that ceremonious affection as you were wont; there's a great abatement of kindness appears as well in the general dependants as in the Duke himself also and your daughter.

61

Lear. Ha! say'st thou so?

Knight. I beseech you pardon me, my lord, if I be mistaken; for my duty cannot be silent when I think your Highness wrong'd.

65

Lear. Thou but rememb'rest me of mine own conception. I have perceived a most faint neglect of late, which I have rather blamed as mine own jealous curiosity than as a very pretence and purpose of unkindness. I will look further into't. But where's my fool? I have not seen him this two days.

Knight. Since my young lady's going into France, sir, the fool hath much pined away.

Lear. No more of that; I have noted it well. Go you and tell my daughter I would speak with her. [Exit an Attendant] Go you, call hither my fool. [Exit another Attendant.

Re-enter OSWALD.

O, you sir, you! Come you hither, sir. Who am I, sir?

Osw. My lady's father.

Lear. 'My lady's father'! my lord's knave! you whoreson dog! you slave! you cur!

Osw. I am none of these, my lord; I beseech your pardon.

Lear. Do you bandy looks with me, you rascal! [Striking him. Osw. I'll not be strucken, my lord. 84

Kent. Nor tripp'd neither, you base football player. [Tripping up his heels.

Lear. I thank thee, fellow; thou serv'st me, and I'll love thee.

Kent. Come, sir, arise, away! I'll teach you differences. Away, away! If you will measure your lubber's length again, tarry; but away! Go to! Have you wisdom? So.

[Pushes Oswald out. Lear. Now, my friendly knave, I thank thee; there's earnest of thy service. 93

[Giving Kent money.

Enter FOOL.

Fool. Let me hire him too; here's my coxcomb. [Offering Kent his cap. Lear. How now, my pretty knave! How dost thou?

Fool Sirrah, you were best take my coxcomb.

Kent. Why, fool?

Fool. Why? For taking one's part that's out of favour. Nay, an thou canst not smile as the wind sits, thou'lt catch cold shortly. There, take my coxcomb. Why, this fellow has banish'd two on's daughters, and did the third a blessing against his will; if thou follow him, thou must needs wear my coxcomb.—How now, nuncle! Would I had two coxcombs and two daughters!

Lear. Why, my boy?

Fool. If I gave them all my living, I'd keep my coxcombs myself. There's mine:

beg another of thy daughters.

Lear. Take heed, sırrah—the whip. 109 Fool. Truth's a dog must to kennel; he must be whipp'd out, when Lady the brach may stand by th' fire and stink.

Lear. A pestilent gall to me!

Fool. Sirrah, I'll teach thee a speech. Lear. Do.

Fool. Mark it, nuncle:

Have more than thou showest, Speak less than thou knowest, Lend less than thou owest, Ride more than thou goest, Learn more than thou trowest, Set less than thou throwest; Leave thy drink and thy whore, And keep in-a-door, And thou shalt have more Than two tens to a score.

Kent. This is nothing, fool. Fool Then 'tis like the breath of an unfee'd lawyer—you gave me nothing for't. Can you make no use of nothing, nuncle?

125

Lear. Why, no, boy; nothing can be made out of nothing.

Fool. [To Kent] Prithee tell him, so much the rent of his land comes to; he will not believe a fool.

Lear. A bitter fool! 735

Fool. Dost thou know the difference, my boy, between a bitter fool and a sweet one?

Lear. No, lad; teach me.

Fool. That lord that counsell'd thee
To give away thy land,
Come place him here by me—
Do thou for him stand

Do thou for him stand.
The sweet and bitter fool
Will presently appear;
The one in motley here,

The one in motley here,
The other found out there.

Lear. Dost thou call me fool, boy?

Fool. All thy other titles thou hast given away; that thou wast born with.

Kent. This is not altogether fool, my lord.

Fool. No, faith, lords and great men will not let me; if I had a monopoly out, they would have part on't. And ladies too—they will not let me have all the fool to myself; they'll be snatching. Nuncle, give me an egg, and I'll give thee two crowns.

Lear. What two crowns shall they be?

Fool. Why, after I have cut the egg i' th' middle and eat up the meat, the two crowns of the egg. When thou clovest thy crown i' th' middle, and gav'st away both parts, thou bor'st thine ass on thy back o'er the dirt. Thou hadst little wit in thy bald crown when thou gav'st thy golden one away. If I speak like myself in this, let him be whipp'd that first finds it so. 163 [Sings] Fools had ne'er less grace in a year:

For wise men are grown foppish. And know not how their wits to wear.

Their manners are so apish.

Lear. When were you wont to be so full of songs, sirrah?

Fool. I have us'd it, nuncle, e'er since thou mad'st thy daughters thy mothers; for when thou gav'st them the rod, and put'st down thine own breeches

[Sings] Then they for sudden joy did weep,

And I for sorrow sung,

That such a king should play bopeep

And go the fools among.

Prithee, nuncle, keep a schoolmaster that can teach thy fool to lie. I would fain learn to lie.

Lear. An you lie, sırrah, we'll have you whipp'd.

Fool. I marvel what kin thou and thy daughters are. They'll have me whipp'd for speaking true: thou'lt have me whipp'd for lying; and sometimes I am whipp'd for holding my peace. I had rather be any kind o' thing than a fool; and yet I would not be thee, nuncle; thou hast pared thy wit o' both sides, and left nothing i' th' middle. Here comes one o' th' parings.

Enter GONERIL.

Lear. How now, daughter! What makes that frontlet on? You are too much of late i' th' frown.

Fool. Thou wast a pretty fellow when thou hadst no need to care for her frowning; now thou art an O without a figure. I am better than thou art now: I am a fool, thou art nothing. [To Goneril] Yes, forsooth, I will hold my tongue; so your face bids me, though you say nothing. Mum, mum!

He that keeps nor crust nor crumb,

Weary of all, shall want some. 197 [Pointing to Lear] That's a sheal'd peascod. Gon. Not only, sir, this your all-licens'd fool.

But other of your insolent retinue Do hourly carp and quarrel, breaking forth

In rank and not-to-be-endured riots. Sir, I had thought, by making this well known unto you,

To have found a safe redress; but now grow fearful,

By what yourself too late have spoke and done.

That you protect this course, and put it on By your allowance; which if you should, the fault

Would not scape censure, nor the redresses sleep,

Which, in the tender of a wholesome weal. Might in their working do you that offence Which else were shame, that then necessity Will call discreet proceeding.

Fool. For, you know, nuncle,

The hedge-sparrow fed the cuckoo so long That it's had it head bit off by it young. 215 So, out went the candle, and we were left darkling.

Lear. Are you our daughter?

Gon. I would you would make use of your good wisdom,

Whereof I know you are fraught, and put

These dispositions which of late transport vou

From what you rightly are.

Fool. May not an ass know when the cart draws the horse? Whoop, Jug! I love thee. Lear. Does any here know me? This is not Lear.

Does Lear walk thus? speak thus? Where are his eyes?

Either his notion weakens, or his discernings

Are lethargied.—Ha! waking? 'Tis not

Who is it that can tell me who I am?

Fool. Lear's shadow. Lear. I would learn that: for, by the marks of sovereignty, knowledge, and reason, I should be false persuaded I had daughters.

Fool. Which they will make an obedient

Lear. Your name, fair gentlewoman? 235 Gon. This admiration, sir, is much o' th' savour

Of other your new pranks. I do beseech you To understand my purposes aright.

As you are old and reverend, should be wise. Here do you keep a hundred knights and squires;

Men so disorder'd, so debosh'd and bold, That this our court, infected with their manners.

Shows like a riotous inn. Epicurism and hist

Makes it more like a tavern or a brothel Than a grac'd palace. The shame itself doth speak

For instant remedy. Be then desir'd By her that else will take the thing she begs A little to disquantity your train

And the remainders that shall still depend To be such men as may be ort your age, 250 Which know themselves and you.

KING LEAR TAct 1

Lear. Darkness and devils ! Saddle my horses; call my train to ther. Degenerate bastard! I'll not trouble thee; Yet have I left a daughter.

Gon. You strike my people; and your Within a fortnight! disorder'd rabble

Make servants of their betters.

Enter ALBANY.

Lear. Woe that too late repents! -O, sir, are you come?

Is it your will? Speak, sir.-Prepare r., horses.

Ingratitude, thou marble-hearted fiend, More hideous when thou show'st thee in a 260 child

Than the sea-monster!

Pray, sir, be patient. Lear. [To Goneril] Detested kite! thou liest :

My train are men of choice and rarest parts, That all particulars of duty know;

And in the most exact regard support The worships of their name. - O most small fault.

How ugly didst thou in Cordelia show!

of nature From the fix'd place: drew from my heart

all love And added to the gall. O Lear, Lear! I have can off for ever.

Beat at this gate that let thy folly in |Striking his head.

And thy dear judgment out! Go, go, my people. [Exeunt Kent and Knights. Alb. My lord, I am guiltless, as 1 am ignorant Of what hath moved you.

It may be so, my lord. Hear, Nature, hear; dear goddess, hear. 275 Suspend thy purpose, if thou didst intend To make this creature fruitful.

Into her womb convey sterility:

Dry up in her the organs of increase; And from her derogate body never spring A babe to honour her! If she must teem, Create her child of spleen, that it may live And be a thwart disnatur'd torment to her. Let it stamp wrinkles in her brow of youth, With cadent tears fret channels in her cheeks.

Turn all her mother's pains and benefits To laughter and contempt, that she may feel

How sharper than a serpent's tooth it is To have a thankless child. Away, away!

TExit. Alb. Now, gods that we adore, whereof comes this?

Gon. Never afflict yourself to know more of it:

But let his disposition have that scope As dotage gives it.

1082

Re-enter LEAR.

Legr. What, fifty of my followers at a clap!

What's the matter, sir? Alb. Lear. I'll tell thee. [To Goneril] Life and death! I am asham'd That thou hast power to shake my manhood thus; That these hot tears, which break from me

perforce,

Should make thee worth them. Blasts and fogs upon thee!

Th' untented woundings of a father's curse Fierce every sense about thee !- Old fond eves.

Beweep this cause again, I'll pluck ve out.

And cast you, with the waters that you loose.

To temper clay. Ha! Is't come to this? Let it be so. I have another daughter, 305 Who, I am sure, is kind and comfortable. When she shall hear this of thee, with her nails

Which, like an engine, wrench'd my frame She'll flav thy wolfish visage. Thou shalt find

That I'll resume the shape which thou dost thunk

Exit Lear. Do you mark that?

320

Alv. I cannot be so partial, Goneril. To the great love I bear you-

Gon. Pray you, content.-What, Oswald. ho!

[To the Fool] You, sir, more knave than fool, after your master.

Fool. Nuncle Lear, nuncle Lear, tarrytake the fool with thee.

A fox, when one has caught her.

And such a daughter. Should sure to the slaughter,

If my cap would buy a halter.

So the fool follows after. Exit. Gon. This man hath had good counsel. A hundred knights!

'Tis politic and safe to let him keep

At point a hundred knights-yes, that on every dream, Each buzz, each fancy, each complaint, dislike.

He may enguard his dotage with their pow'rs,

And hold our lives in mercy. Oswald, I say! Alb. Well, you may fear too far.

Gon. Safer than trust too far. Let me still take away the harms I fear, 330 Not fear still to be taken. I know his heart. What he hath utter'd I have writ my sister.

If she sustain him and his hundred knights. When I have show'd th' unfitnessScene 41 KING LEAR

Re-enter OSWALD.

How now, Cswald! What, have you writ that letter to make sister?

Osw. Ay, madam.

Gon. Take you some company, and away to horse:

Inform her full of my particular fear,

And thereto add such reasons of your own As may compact it more. Get you gone: 310 And hasten your return. [Exit Oswald] No. no, my lord,

This milky gentleness and course of yours, Though I condemn not, yet, under pardon, You are much more ataxt for want of wisdom

Than prais'd for harmful mildness.

Alb. How far your eyes may pierce I cannot tell.

Striving to better, oft we mar what's well. Gon. Nay, then-

Alb. Well, well; th' event. [Exeunt.

SCENE V. Court before the Duke of Albany's palace.

Enter LEAR, KENT, and FOOL.

Lear. Go you before to Gloucester with these letters. Acquaint my daughter vo further with anything you know than a race from her demand out of the letter. If your diligence be not speedy. I shall be three afore you.

Kent. I will not sleep, my lord, till : har delivered your letter.

Fool. If a man's brains were m's have were't not in danger of kibes?

Lear. Av, boy.

Fool. Then, I prithee, be merry; thy will shall not go slipshod.

Lear. Ha, ha, ha!

Fool. Shalt see thy other daughter will use thee kindly; for though she's as like this as a crab's like an apple, yet I can tell what I can tell.

Lear. What canst tell, boy?
Fool. She will taste as like this as a crab does to a crab. Thou canst tell why one's nose stands i' th' middle on's face?

Fool Why to keep one's eyes of either side's nose, that what a man cannot smell out, he may spy into.

Lear. I did her wrong.

Fool. Canst tell how an oyster makes his shell?

Lear. No.

Fool. Nor I neither: but I can tell why a snail has a house.

Lear. Why?

Fool. Why, to put's head in; not to give it away to his daughters, and leave his horns without a case.

Lear. I will forget my nature. So kind a father !- Be my horses ready ?

Fool. Thy asses are gone arout 'enc. 'the reason why the seven stors are no take than seven is a pretty reason.

Lear. Because they are not each? Fool. Yes, indeed. Thou would'd arake a good fool.

Lear. To take't again perforce! Monsier ingratitude!

Fool. If thou wert my fool, nuncle, I'd have thee beaten for being old before thy Lear. How's that? Fool. Thou shouldst not have been old till thou hadst been wise.

Lear. O, let me not be mad, not mad, sweet heaven!

Keep me in temper; I would not be mad! Enter Gentleman.

How now! are the horses ready? Gent. Ready, my loid. Lear. Come, boy.

Fool. She that's a maid new, and laughs at my departure,

Shall not be a maid long, unless things be cut shorter Exeunt.

ACT TWO

SCENE I. A count-yard in the Earl of Gloucester's castle.

Enter EDMUND and CURAN, meeting.

Im. Save thee, Curan.

in. And you, sir. I have been with .. P father, and given him notice that the Fig. of Cornwall and Regan his Duchess we we here with him this night.

Ec'm. How comes that? (m. Nay, I know not. You have heard of the news abroad; I mean the whisper'd one, for they are yet but car buising arguments?

Edm. Not I. Pray you, what are they? Cm. Have you heard of no likely wars toward 'twint the Dukes of Cornwall and Edm. Not a word.

Cur. You may do, then, in time. Fare you well, sir. Frit.

Edm. The Duke be here to-night? The better! best!

This weaves itself perforce into my business.

My father hath set guard to take my brother:

And I have one thing, of a queasy question, Which I must act. Briefness and fortune work!

Brother, a word! Descend. Brother, I say! Enter EDGAR.

30 My father watches. O sir, fly this place; 20 1083 Intelligence is given where you are hid;
You have now the good advantage of the night.

Have you not spoken 'gainst the Duke of Cornwall?

He's coming hither, now, i' th' night, i' th' haste.

And Regan with him. Have you nothing said 25

Upon his party 'gainst the Duke of Albany? Advise yourself.

Edg. I am sure on't, not a word. intent, Edm. I hear my father coming. Pardon And found him pight to do it, with curst

In cunning I must draw my sword upon you.

Draw; seem to defend vourself; www quit you well.—

Yield; come before my father. Light, ho.

Fly, brother.—Torches, torches!—So, farewell.

Some blood drawn on me would beget opinion [Wounds his air.]

Of my more fierce endeavour. I have seen drunkards

Do more than this in sport.—Facher, father!

Stop, stop! No help?

Enter GLOUCESTER, and Servants with torches.

Glo. Now, Edmund, where's the villain?

Edm. Here stood he in the dark, his sharp sword out,

Mumbling of wicked charms, conjuring the moon

To stand's auspicious mistress.

Glo. But where is he? 40 Edm. Look, sir, I bleed.

Glo. Where is the villain, Edmund? Edm. Fled this way, sir. When by no means he could—

Glo. Pursue him, ho! Go after. [Exeunt Servants]—By no means what?

Edm. Persuade me to the murder of your lordship;

But that I told him the revenging gods 45

But that I told him the revenging gods 45 'Gainst parricides did all their thunders bend;

Spoke with how manifold and strong a bond The child was bound to th' father. Sir, in fine,

Seeing how loathly opposite I stood
To his unnatural purpose, in fell motion, 50
With his prepared sword, he charges home
My unprovided body, latch'd mine arm;
But when he saw my best alarum'd spirits,
Bold in the quarrel's right, rous'd to th'
encounter,

Or whether gasted by the noise I made, 55 Full suddenly he fled.

Glo. Let him fly far. Not in this land shall he remain uncaught;

And found—dispatch. The noble Duke my master,

My worthy arch and patron, comes tonight;

By his authority I will proclaim it, 60 That he which finds him shall deserve our thanks,

Bringing the murderous coward to the stake;

He that conceals him, death.

Edm. When I dissuaded him from his intent.

And found him pight to do it, with curst speech

threaten'd to discover him: he replied threaten'd to discover him; he replied, 'Thou unpossessing bastard! dost thou think,

If I would stand against thee, would the reposure

Of any trust, virtue, or worth, in thee Make thy words faith'd? No. What I should deny—should deny— 70

A: this I would; ay, though thou didst produce

My very character—I'd turn it all To thy suggestion, plot, and damned practice;

And thou must make a dullard of the world,
If they not thought the profits of my death
Were very pregnant and potential spuis 76

To make thee seek it'.

Glo. O strong and fast'ned villain!

Would he deny his letter?—I never got him. [Tucket within. Hark, the Duke's trumpets! I know not why he comes.

All ports I'll bar; the villain shall not scape;

80

The Duke must grant me that. Besides, his picture

I will send far and near, that all the kingdom

May have due note of him; and of my land, Loyal and natural boy, I'll work the means To make thee capable.

Enter Cornwall, Regan, and Attendants.

Corn. How now, my noble friend! since I came hither,

Which I can call but now, I have heard strange news.

Reg. If it be true, all vengeance comes too short

Which can pursue th' offender. How dost, my lord?

Glo. O, madam, my old heart is crack'd, it's crack'd! 90

Reg. What, did my father's godson seek your life?

He whom my father nam'd? your Edgar?
Glo. O lady, lady, shame would have it hid!

Reg. Was he not companion with the riotous knights

Scene 1] KING LEAR

That tend upon my father?

Glo. I know not, madam. 'Tis too bad, too bad.

Edm. Yes, madam, he was of that consort.

Reg. No marvel, then, though he were ill affected.

'Tis they have put him on the old man's death,

To have th' expense and waste of his revenues.

I have this present evening from my sister Been well inform'd of them; and with such cautions

That, if they come to sojourn at my house, I'll not be there.

Corn. Nor I, assure thee, Regan. Edmund, I hear that you have shown your father

A child-like office.

Edm. It was my duty, sir.

Glo. He did bewray his practice, and receiv'd

This hurt you see, striving to apprehend him.

Corn. Is he pursued?

Glo. Ay, my good lord. Corn. If he be taken, he shall never more Be fear'd of doing harm. Make your own purpose,

How in my strength you please. For you, Edmund,

Whose virtue and obedience doth this instant

So much commend itself, you shall be ours. Natures of such deep trust we shall much need;

You we first seize on.

Edm I shall serve you, sir,

Truly, however else.

Glo. For him I thank your Grace.

Corn. You know not why we came to visit you—

Reg. Thus out of season, threading darkey'd night:

Occasions, noble Gloucester, of some poise, Wherein we must have use of your advice. Our father he hath writ, so hath our sister, Of differences, which I best thought it fit To answer from our home; the several messengers

From hence attend dispatch, Our good old friend, 125

Lay comforts to your bosom, and bestow Your needful counsel to our businesses, Which craves the instant use.

Glo. I serve you, madam. Your Graces are right welcome. [Exeunt.

Scene II. Before Gloucester's castle. Enter Kent and Oswald severally.

Osw. Good dawning to thee, friend. Art of this house?

Kent. Ay.

Osw. Where may we set our horses? Kent I' th' muc.

Osw. Prithee, if thou lov'st me, tell me. 5 Kent. I love thee not.

Osw. Why then, I care not for thee. Kent. If I had thee in Lipsbury pinfold, I would make thee care for me.

Osw. Why dost thou use me thus? know thee not.

Kent. Fellow, I know thee.

Osw. What dost thou know me for? Kent. A knave, a rascal, an eater of broken meats; a base, proud, shallow, beggarly, three-suited, hundred-pound. filthy, worsted-stocking knave; a lilvliver'd, action-taking, whoreson, glassgazing, superserviceable, finical rogue; one-trunk-inheriting slave; one that wouldst be a bawd in way of good service. and art nothing but the composition of a knave, beggar, coward, pander, and the son and heir of a mongrel bitch; one whom I will beat into clamorous whining, if thou denv'st the least syllable of thy addition.

Osw. Why, what a monstrous fellow art thou, thus to rail on one that is neither known of thee nor knows thee?

Kent. What a brazen-fac'd variet art thou, to deny thou knowest me! Is it two days since I tripp'd up thy heels and beat thee before the King? Draw, you rogue; for, though it be night, yet the moon shines; I'll make a sop o' th' moonshine of you; you whoreson cullionly barbermonger, draw. [Drawing his sword.

Osw. Away! I have nothing to do with thee.

Kent. Draw, you rascal. You come with letters against the King, and take Vanity the pupper's part against the royalty of her father. Draw, you logue, or I'll so carbonado your shanks. Draw, you rascal; come your ways.

Osw. Help, ho! murder! help. 36
Kent. Strike, you slave; stand, rogue, stand; you neat slave, strike.____

[Beating him. Osw. Help, ho! murder! murder!

Enter EDMUND with his rapier drawn, GLOUCESTER, CORNWALL, REGAN, and Servants.

Edm. How now! What's the matter?

Part!

Kent. With you, goodman boy, an you please. Come, I'll flesh ye; come on, young Glo. Weapons! arms! What's the matter here?

master.

Corn. Keep peace, upon your lives; He dies that strikes again. What is the matter?

Reg. The messengers from our sister and the King.

Osw. I am scarce in breath, my lord.

Kent. No marvel, you have so bestirr'd your valour. You cowardly rascal, nature disclaims in thee: a tailor made thee. 51

Corn. Thou art a strange fellow. A tailor make a man?

Kent. Ay, a tailor, sir. A stone-cutter of a painter could not have made him so ill, though they had been but two years o' th'

Corn. Speak yet, how grew your quarrel? Osw. This ancient ruffian, sir, whose lite I have spar'd at suit of his grey beard-

Kent. Thou whoreson zed! thou unnecessary letter! My lord, if you will give me leave, I will tread this unbolted villain into mortar, and daub the wall of a takes with him.-Spare my grey beard, you wagtail?

Corn. Peace, sirrah!

You beastly knave, know you no reverence? Kent. Yes, sir; but anger hath a privilege.

Corn. Why art thou angry?

Kent. That such a slave as this should wear a sword.

Who wears no honesty. Such smiling rogues as these.

Like rats, oft bite the holy cords a-twain Which are too intrinse t' unloose; smooth every passion

That in the natures of their lords rebel: Bring oil to fire, snow to their colder moods; Renege, affirm, and turn their halcyon

With every gale and vary of their masters, Knowing nought, like dogs, but following. A plague upon your epileptic visage! Smile you my speeches, as I were a fool? Goose, if I had you upon Sarum plain, I'd drive ye cackling home to Camelot.

Corn. What, are thou mad, old fellow? Glo. How fell you out? Say that. Kent. No contraries hold more antipathy Than I and such a knave.

Corn. Why dost thou call him knave? What is his fault?

Kent. His countenance likes me not. Corn. No more, perchance, does mine, nor his, nor hers.

Kent. Sir, 'tis my occupation to be plain: I have seen better faces in my time Than stands on any shoulder that I see Before me at this instant.

Corn. This is some fellow 90 Who, having been prais'd for bluntness. doth affect

A saucy roughness, and constrains the garb Quite from his nature. He cannot flatter.

An honest mind and plain—he must speak

An they will take it, so; if not, he's plain. 1086

Corn. What is your difference? Speak. These kind of knaves I know, which in this plainness Harbour more craft and more corrupter

> Than twenty silly ducking observants That stretch their duties nicely.

Kent. Sir, in good faith, in sincere verity. Under th' allowance of your great aspect. Whose influence, like the wreath of radiant ends

On flickering Phœbus' front-

What mean'st by this? Coin. Kent. To go out of my dialect, which you discommend so much. I know, sir, I am no flatterer. He that beguil'd you in a plain accent was a plain knave; which, for my part, I will not be, though I should win your displeasure to entreat me to't.

Coin. What was th' offence you gave him?

I never gave him any. 110 Osw. It pleas'd the King his master very late To strike at me, upon his misconstruction: When he, compact, and flattering his displeasure,

"hipp'd me behind; being down, insulted. rail'd,

And put upon him such a deal of man 115 That worthied him, got plaises of the King

For him attempting who was self-subdu'd: And in the fleshment of this dread exploit. Drew on me here again.

Kent. None of these rogues and cowards But Aiax is their fool.

Fetch forth the stocks. 120 You stubborn ancient knave, you reverend braggart,

We'll teach you.

Kent. Sir, I am too old to learn. Call not your stocks for me; I serve the King.

On whose employment I was sent to you. You shall do small respect, show too bold

Against the grace and person of my master, Stocking his messenger.

Corn. Fetch forth the stocks. As I have life and honour,

There shall he sit till noon.

Reg. Till noon! Till night, my lord; and all night too.

Kent. Why, madam, if I were your father's dog,

You should not use me so.

Reg. Sir, being his knave. I will. Corn. This is a fellow of the self-same colour

Our sister speaks of. Come, bring away the [Stocks brought out. stocks. Glo. Let me beseech your Grace not to do

His fault is much, and the good King his master

Will check him for't; your purpes'd low Blanket my loins, elf all my hairs in knots, correction And with presented pakedness outface.

Is such as basest and contemned'st wretches For pilf'rings and most common frespasses Are punish'd with. The King must take it ill

That he, so slightly valued in his messenger, Should have him thus restrained.

Corn. I'll answer that.

Reg. My sister may receive it much more worse

To have her gentleman abus'd, assaulted, For following her affairs. Put in his legs. 145 [Kent is put in the stocks. Come, my good lord, away.

[Exeunt all but Gloucester and Kent.
Glo. I am sorry for thee, friend; 'tis the Duke's pleasure

Whose disposition, all the world well knows, Will not be rubb'd nor stopp'd. I'll entreat for thee.

Kent. Pray, do not, sir. I have watch'd and travell'd hard;

Some time I shall sleep out, the rest I'll whistle.

A good man's fortune may grow out at heels.

Give you good morrow!

Glo. The Duke's to blame in this;
'Twill be ill taken.

[Exit.

Kent. Good King, that must approve the common saw.

Thou out of heaven's benediction com'st To the warm sun!

Approach, thou beacon to this under globe, That by thy comfortable beams I may Peruse this letter. Nothing almost sees miracles

But misery. I know 'tis from Cordelia, Who hath most fortunately been inform'd Of my obscured course. [Reads] '—and shall find time

From this enormous state—seeking to give Losses their remedies.' All weary and o'erwatch'd. 163

Take vantage, heavy eyes, not to behold This shameful lodging.

Fortune, good night; smile once more; turn thy wheel. [He sleeps.

Scene III. The open country. Enter EDGAR.

Edg. I heard myself proclaim'd,
And by the happy hollow of a tree
Escap'd the hunt. No port is free; no place
That guard and most unusual vigilance Does not attend my taking. Whiles I may scape

I will preserve myself; and am bethought
To take the basest and most poorest shape
That ever penury in contempt of man
Brought near to beast. My face I'll grime with filth.

Way
Thou might'st d usage,
Usage,
With filth.

Blanket my loins, elf all my hairs in knots, And with presented nakedness outface in The winds and persecutions of the sky. The country gives me proof and precedent Of Bedlam beggars, who, with roaring voices.

Strike in their numb'd and mortified bare arms

Pins, wooden pricks, nails, sprigs of rosemary; And with this horrible object, from low farms,

Poor pelting villages, sheep-cotes, and mills,

Sometimes with lunatic bans, sometime with prayers,

Enforce their charity Poor Turkygod!

Enforce their charity. Poor Turlygod!
poor Tom!
20
That's something yet. Edgar I nothing am.

Scene IV. Before Gloucester's castle.

Enter LEAR, Fool, and Gentleman, to KENT in the stocks.

Lear. 'Tis strange that they should so depart from home,

And not send back my messenger.

Gent. As I learn'd,
The night before there was no purpose in them

Of this remove.

Kent. Hail to thee, noble master!

Mak'st thou this shame thy pastime?

Kent.

No, my lord.

Fool. Ha, ha! he wears cruel garters. Horses are tied by the heads, dogs and bears by th' neck, monkeys by th' loins, and men by th' legs. When a man's overlusty at legs, then he wears wooden netherstocks.

Lear. What's he that hath so much thy place mistook

¥5

To set thee here?

Kent. It is both he and she, Your son and daughter.

Lear. No. Kent. Yes. Lear. No. I say.

Kent. I say, yea. Lear. No, no; they would not.

Kent. Yes, they have. Lear. By Jupiter, I swear, no.

Kent. By Juno, I swear, ay. Lear. They durst

Lear. They durst not do't;
They could not, would not do't; 'tis worse than murder

To do upon respect such violent outrage. Resolve me with all modest haste which way

Thou might'st deserve or they impose this usage, 25

Kent. My lord, when at their home 1087

I did commend your Highness' letters to after. When a wise man gives thee better

Ere I was risen from the place that show'd My duty kneeling, came there a reeking gives it.

Stew'd in his haste, half breathless, panting forth

From Goneril his mistress salutations; Deliver'd letters, spite of intermission, Which presently they read; on whose contents

They summon'd up their meiny, straight took horse,

Commanded me to follow and attend The leisure of their answer, gave me cold looks:

And meeting here the other messenger, Whose welcome I perceiv'd had poison'd

Being the very fellow which of late Display'd so saucily against your Highness, Having more man than wit about me, drew. He rais'd the house with loud and coward cries.

Your son and daughter found this trespass worth

The shame which here it suffers.

Fool, Winter's not gone yet, if the wild geese fly that way.

Fathers that wear rags

Do make their children blind; But fathers that bear bags

Shall see their children kind. 50 Fortune, that arrant whore,

Ne'er turns the key to th' poor. But, for all this, thou shalt have as many dolours for thy daughters as thou canst tell in a year.

Lear. O, how this mother swells up toward my heart!

Hysterica passio-down, thou climbing sorrow.

Thy element's below. Where is this daughter?

Kent. With the earl, sir, here within. Follow me not; Lear. Stay here. [Exit.

Gent. Made you no more offence but what you speak of?

Kent. None.

How chance the King comes with so small a number?

Fool. An thou hadst been set i' th' stocks for that question, thou'dst well deserv'd it. Kent. Why, fool?

Fool. We'll set thee to school to an ant, to teach thee there's no labouring i' th' winter. All that follow their noses are led by their eyes but blind men; and there's not a nose among twenty but can smell him that's stinking. Let go thy hold when a great wheel runs down a hill, lest it break thy neck with following; but the great Now, presently. Bid them come forth and one that goes upward, let him draw thee 1088 counsel, give me mine again. I would have none but knaves follow it, since a fool

That sir which serves and seeks for gain,

And follows but for form. Will pack when it begins to rain, And leave thee in the storm.

But I will tarry; the fool will stay And let the wise man fly. The knave turns fool that runs away;

The fool no knave, perdy. Kent. Where learn'd you this, fool? Fool. Not 1' th' stocks, fool.

Re-enter LEAR and GLOUCESTER.

85

Lear. Deny to speak with me! They are sick! They are weary! They have travell'd all the night! Mere fetches:

The images of revolt and flying off. Fetch me a better answer.

My dear lord. You know the fiery quality of the Duke: 90 How unremovable and fix'd he is In his own course.

Lear. Vengeance! plague! death! confusion!

Fiery? What quality? Why Gloucester. Gloucester.

I'd speak with the Duke of Cornwall and his wife.

Glo. Well, my good lord, I have inform'd them so.

Lear. Inform'd them! Dost thou understand me, man ?

Glo. Ay, my good lord. Lear. The King would speak with Cornwall; the dear father Would with his daughter speak; commands their service.

Are they inform'd of this? My breath and blood!

Fiery? the fiery Duke? Tell the hot Duke that-

No, but not yet. May be he is not well. Infirmity doth still neglect all office

Whereto our health is bound; we are not ourselves When nature, being oppress'd, commands the mind To suffer with the body. I'll forbear;

And am fallen out with my more headier

To take the indispos'd and sickly fit For the sound man. Death on my state! Wherefore Should he sit here? This act persuades me That this remotion of the Duke and her Is practice only. Give me my servant forth. Go tell the Duke and's wife I'd speak with them-hear me,

Scene 4] KING LEAR

Or at their chamber door I'll beat the drum Till it cry sleep to death.

Glo. I would have all well betwixt you. [Exit.

Lear. O me, my heart, my rising heart!
But, down.

Fool. Cry to it, nuncle, as the cockney did to the eels when she put 'em i' th' paste alive; she knapp'd 'em o' th' coxcombs with a stick, and cried 'Down, wantons, down'. 'Twas her brother that, in pure kindness to his horse, butter'd his hay. 124

Enter Cornwall, Regan, Gloucester, and Servants

Lear. Good morrow to you both.

Corn. Hail to your Grace!
[Kent here set at liberty.

Rej. I am glad to see your Highness.

Lear. Regan, I think you are; I know what reason

I have to think so. If thou shouldst not be glad,

I would divorce me from thy mother's tomb,

Sepulchring an adultress. [To Kent] O, are you free?

Some other time for that.—Beloved Regan, Thy sister's naught. O Regan, she hath tied Sharp-tooth'd unkindness, like a vulture, here. [Points to his heart.

I can scarce speak to thee; thou'lt not believe

With how depray'd a quality—O Regan! Reg. I pray you, sir, take patience. I have hope

You less know how to value her desert Than she to scant her duty.

Lear. Say, how is that?
Reg. I cannot think my sister in the least
Would fail her obligation. If, sir, perchance
She have restrain'd the riots of your followers.

'Tis on such ground, and to such wholesome end,

As clears her from all blame. Lear. My curses on her!

Reg. O, sir, you are old; Nature in you stands on the very verge 145 Of her confine. You should be rul'd and led By some discretion that discerns your state Better than you yourself. Therefore I pray

That to our sister you do make return;

Say you have wrong'd her, sir.

Lear.

Ask her forgiveness?

Do you but mark how this becomes the house:

'Dear daughter, I confess that I am old;
[Kneeling.

Age is unnecessary; on my knees I beg
That you'll vouchsafe me raiment, bed, and

Reg. Good sir, no more; these are unsightly tricks.

Return you to my sister.

Lear. [Rising] Never, Regan.

She hath abated me of half my train; Look'd black upon me; struck me with her tongue.

Most serpent-like, upon the very heart.
All the stor'd vengeances of heaven fall 100
On her ingrateful top! Strike her young bones,

You taking airs, with lameness.

Corn. Fie, sir, fie!
Lear. You nimble lightnings, dart your blinding flames

Into her scornful eyes. Infect her beauty, You fen-suck'd fogs, drawn by the pow'iful

To fall and blast her pride.

Reg. O the blest gods! So will you wish on me when the rash mood is on.

Lear. No, Regan, thou shalt never have my curse:

Thy tender-hefted nature shall not give 170 Thee o'er to harshness. Her eyes are fierce,

but thine
Do comfort and not burn. 'Tis not in thee
To grudge my pleasures, to cut off my train,
To bandy hasty words, to scant my sizes,
And, in conclusion, to oppose the bolt

Effects of courtesy, dues of gratitude;

Thy half o' th' kingdom hast thou not forgot, Wherein I thee endow'd.

Reg. Good sir, to th' purpose. 180 Lear. Who put my man i' th' stocks?

[Tucket within.

Corn. What trumpet's that?

Reg. I know't—my sister's. This approves her letter.

That she would soon he bere.

Enter OSWALD.

Is your lady come?

Lear. This is a slave whose easy-borrow'd pride

Dwells in the fickle grace of her he follows.

Out, varlet, from my sight!
Corn. What means your Grace?

What means your Grace?

Enter GONERIL.

Lear. Who stock'd my servant? Regan, I have good hope

Thou didst not know on't.—Who comes here? O heavens,

If you do love old men, if your sweet sway Allow obedience, if you yourselves are old, Make it your cause; send down, and take my part.

O Regan, will you take her by the hand?

Scene 4] KING LEAR

As full of grief as age; wretched in both.

If it be you that stirs these daughters' hearts

Against their father, fool me not so much

To bear it tamely; touch me with noble anger, 275

And let not women's weapons, water-drops, Stain my man's cheeks! No, you unnatural hags,

I will have such revenges on you both
That all the world shall—I will do such things—

What they are yet I know not; but they shall be 280

The terrors of the earth. You think I'll weep.

No, I'll not weep. [Storm and tempest. 1 have full cause of weeping; but this heart Fool.

Corn. Let us withdraw; 'twill be a storm.

Reg. This house is little: the old man

Cannot be well bestow'd.

Gon. 'Tis his own blame; hath put himself from rest,

And must needs taste his folly. 290
Reg. For his particular, I'll receive him

Reg. For his particular, I'll receive him gladly,

But not one follower.

Gon. So am I purpos'd.
Where is my Lord of Gloucester?

Corn. Followed the old man forth.

Re-enter GLOUCESTER.

He is return'd.

Glo. The King is in high rage.
Corn. Whither is he going?
Glo. He calls to horse; but will I know not whither.

Corn. 'Tis best to give him way; he leads himself.

Gon. My lord, entreat him by no means to stay.

Glo. Alack, the night comes on, and the high winds

Do sorely ruffle; for many miles about 300 There's scarce a bush.

Reg. O sir, to wilful men
The injuries that they themselves procure Must be their schoolmasters. Shut up your doors.

He is attended with a desperate train; And what they may incense him to, being a wild night.

ACT THREE

Scene I. A heath.

Storm still. Enter KENT and a Gentleman, severally.

Kent. Who's there, besides foul weather? Gent. One minded like the weather, most unquietly.

Kent. I know you. Where's the King?
Gent. Contending with the fretful elements;

Bids the wind blow the earth into the sea, 5 Or swell the curled waters bove the main, That things might change or cease; tears his white hair,

Which the impetuous blasts, with eyeless rage,

Catch in their fury, and make nothing of; Strives in his little world of man to outscorn

The to-and-fro conflicting wind and rain.

This night, wherein the cub-drawn bear would couch.

The lion and the belly-pinched wolf Keep their fur dry, unbonneted he runs, And bids what will take all.

Kent. But who is with him? 15 Gent. None but the fool; who labours to out-jest 290 His heart-struck injuries.

Kent. Sir, I do know you, And dare, upon the warrant of my note, Commend a dear thing to you. There is division,

Although as yet the face of it be cover'd 20 With mutual cunning, 'twixt Albany and Cornwall;

Who have—as who have not that their great stars

Thron'd and set high?—servants, who seem no less,

Which are to France the spies and speculations

Intelligent of our state. What hath been seen,

Either in snuffs and packings of the Dukes; Or the hard rein which both of them hath borne

Against the old kind King; or something deeper,

Whereof perchance these are but furnishings—

But true it is from France there comes a power 30

Into this scatter'd kingdom, who already, Wise in our negligence, have secret feet In some of our best ports, and are at point To show their open banner. Now to you: If on my credit you dare build so far 35 To make your speed to Dover, you shall find Some that will thank you making just report [Exeunt. Of how unnatural and bemadding sorrow

IOOI

The King hath cause to plain. I am a gentleman of blood and breeding: And from some knowledge and assurance in has a good head-piece. offer

This fice to you.

Gent. I will talk further with you.

No, do not. Kent. For confirmation that I am much more 44 Than my out-wall, open this purse and take What it contains. If you shall see Cordelia, As fear not but you shall, show her this ring; And she will tell you who your fellow is That yet you do not know. Fie on this storm!

I will go seek the King.

Gent. Give me your hand. Have you no more to say?

Kent. Few words, but, to effect, more I will say nothing. than all yet;

That when we have found the King-in which your pain

That way, I'll this he that first lights on him [Exeunt severally.

Holla the other.

Scene II. Another part of the heath.

Storm still. Enter LEAR and Fool.

Lear. Blow, winds, and crack your cheeks; rage, blow. You cataracts and hurricanoes, spout you have drench'd our steeples, drown'd the cocks.

You sulph'rous and thought-executing fires.

Vaunt-couriers of oak-cleaving thunder-

Singe my white head. And thou, allshaking thunder.

Strike flat the thick rotundity o' th' world; Crack nature's moulds, all germens spill at

That makes ingrateful man.

Fool. O nuncle, court holy water in a dry house is better than this rain-water out of door. Good nuncle, in; ask thy daughters' blessing. Here's a night pities neither wise men nor fools.

Lear. Rumble thy bellyful. Spit, fire; spout, rain.

Nor rain, wind, thunder, fire, are my daughters.

I tax not you, you elements, with unkindness;

I never gave you kingdom, call'd you children;

You owe me no subscription. Then let fall Your horrible pleasure. Here I stand, your slave,

A poor, infirm, weak and despis'd old man; But yet I call you servile ministers That will with two pernicious daughters

Your high-engender'd battles 'gainst a head 1092

39 So old and white as this. O, ho! 'tis foul! Fool. He that has a house to put's head

The cod-piece that will house Before the head has any, The head and he shall louse: So beggars marry many. The man that makes his toe What he his heart should make Shall of a corn cry woe,

And turn his sleep to wake. For there was never yet fair woman but she made mouths in a glass.

Enter KENT.

Lear. No, I will be the pattern of all patience:

Kent. Who's there?

Fool. Marry, here's grace and a cod-piece: that's a wise man and a fool.

Kent. Alas, sir, are you here? Things that love night

Love not such nights as these; the wrathful skies

Gallow the very wanderers of the dark And make them keep their caves. Since I was man

Such sheets of fire, such bursts of horrid thunder.

Such groans of roaring wind and rain, I never Remember to have heard. Man's nature cannot carry

Th' affliction nor the fear.

Lear. Let the great gods. That keep this dreadful pudder o'er our heads.

Find out their enemies now. Tremble, thou wretch,

That hast within thee undivulged crimes Unwhipp'd of justice. Hide thee, thou bloody hand;

Thou perjur'd, and thou simular man of virtue

That art incestuous; caitiff, to pieces shake.

That under covert and convenient seeming Hast practis'd on man's life. Close pent-up guilts, Rive your concealing continents, and cry These dreadful summoners grace. I am a More sinn'd against than sinning.

Alack, bare-headed! Gracious my lord, hard by here is a hovel; Some friendship will it lend you 'gainst the tempest.

Repose you there, while I to this hard house-

More harder than the stones whereof 'tis rais'd;

Which even but now, demanding after you, Denied me to come in-return, and force

Their scanted countesy.

My wits begin to turn Tea. Come on, my boy. How dost, my boy? Art cold?

I am cold myself. Where is this straw, my fellow?

The art of our necessities is strange That can make vile things precious. Come, your hovel.

Poor fool and knave, I have one part in my heart

That's sorry yet for thee.

Fool. [Sings] He that has and a little tiny

With heigh-ho, the wind and the rain— Must make content with his fortunes fit. Though the rain it raineth every day.

Lear. True, my good boy. Come, bring us to this hovel.

[Exeunt Lear and Kent. Fool. This is a brave night to cool a courtezan. I'll speak a prophecy ere I go. When priests are more in word than matter:

When brewers mar their malt with water: When nobles are their tailors' tutors: No heretics burn'd, but wenches' suitors; When every case in law is right; No squire in debt, nor no poor knight; When slanders do not live in tongues; Nor cutpurses come not to throngs; When usurers tell their gold i' th' field: And bawds and whores do churches build-Then shall the realm of Albion

Come to great confusion.

Then comes the time, who lives to see't, That going shall be us'd with feet. This prophecy Merlin shall make, for I live before his time. [Exit.

Scene III. Gloucester's castle.

Enter GLOUCESTER and EDMUND.

Glo. Alack, alack, Edmund, I like not this unnatural dealing. When I desired their leave that I might pity him, they took from me the use of mine own house, charg'd me, on pain of perpetual displeasure, neither to speak of him, entreat for him, or any way sustain him.

Edm. Most savage and unnatural!

Glo. Go to; say you nothing. There is division between the Dukes; and a worse matter than that. I have received a letter this night-'tis dangerous to be spoken; I have lock'd the letter in my closet. These injuries the King now bears will be revenged home; there is part of a power already footed. We must incline to the King. I will look him, and privily relieve him. Go you and maintain talk with the Duke, that my charity be not of him perceived; if he ask That bide the pelting of this pitiless storm, for me, I am ill, and gone to bed. If I die for it, as no less is threatened me, the Kiri my old master must be relieved. There is strange things toward, Edmund; , בים you be careful. 1Exit

Edm. This courtesy forbid thee shall the Duke

Instantly know, and of that letter too. This seems a fair deserving, and must draw

That which my father loses—no less than all

The younger rises, when the old doth fall IExit.

SCENE IV. Before a hovel on the heath. Storm still. Enter LEAR, KENT, and Fool.

Kent. Here is the place, my lord; good my lord, enter.

The tyranny of the open night's too rough For nature to endure.

Lear. Let me alone.

Kent. Good my lord, enter here.

Tear. Wilt break my beait? Kent. I had rather break mine own.

Good my lord, enter. 5
Lear. Thou think'st 'tis much that this contentious storm

Invades us to the skin; so 'tis to thee, But where the greater malady is fix'd, The lesser is scarce felt. Thou'dst shun a bear: But if thy flight lay toward the roaring sea. Thou'dst meet the bear i' th' mouth. When the mind's free The body's delicate; this tem est in my mind

Doth from my senses take all feeling else, Save what beats there. Filial ingratitude! Is it not as this mouth should tear this hand For lifting food to't? But I will punish home.

No. I will weep no more. In such a night, To shut me out! Pour on; I will endure. In such a night as this! O Regan, Goneral! Your old kind father, whose frank heart gave all!

O, that way madness lies; let me shun that:

No more of that.

Kent. Good my lord, enter here. Lear. Prithee go in thyself; seek thine own ease.

This tempest will not give me leave to ponder

On things would hurt me more. But I'll go in.

[To the Fool] In, boy; go first .- You houseless poverty Nay, get thee in. I'll pray, and then I'll sleep. Exit Fool. Poor naked wretches, wheresoe'er you are, How shall your houseless heads and unfed Judicious punishment! 'twas this flesh sides.

Your loop'd and window'd raggedness, defend you

From seasons such as these? O, I have ta'en

Too little care of this! Take physic, pomp;

Expose thyself to feel what wretches feel, That thou mayst shake the superflux to

And show the heavens more just.

Edg. [Within] Fathom and half, fathom and half! Poor Tom!

Enter Fool from the hovel.

Fool. Come not in here, nuncle, here's a spirit. Help me, help me l Kent. Give me thy hand. Who's there? Fool. A spirit, a spirit. He says his name's poor Tom. Kent. What art thou that dost grumble there i' th' straw? Come forth.

Enter EDGAR, disguised as a madman.

Edg. Away! the foul fiend follows me. 45 Through the sharp hawthorn blows the cold wind.

Humh! go to thy cold bed and warm thee. Lear. Didst thou give all to thy daughters? And art thou come to this?

Edg. Who gives anything to poor Tom? whom the foul fiend hath led through fire and through flame, through ford and whirlpool, o'er bog and quagmire; that hath laid knives under his pillow and halters in his pew, set ratsbane by his porridge; made him proud of heart, to ride on a bay trotting-horse over four-inched bridges, to course his own shadow for a traitor. Bless thy five wits! Tom's a-cold. O, do de, do de, do de. Bless thee from whirlwinds, starblasting, and taking! Do poor Tom some charity, whom the foul fiend vexes. There could I have him now—and there—and there again-and there. [Storm still.

Lear. What, has his daughters brought him to this pass?

Could'st thou save nothing? Would'st thou give 'em all?

Fool. Nay, he reserv'd a blanket, else we had been all sham'd.

Lear. Now all the plagues that in the pendulous air

Hang fated o'er men's faults light on thy daughters!

Kent. He hath no daughters, sir.

Lear. Death, traitor! Nothing could have subdu'd nature

To such a lowness but his unkind daughters.

Is it the fashion that discarded fathers 71 Should have thus little mercy on their flesh? begot

Those pelican daughters.

Edg. Pillicock sat on Pillicock-hill. Alow, alow, loo, loo!

Fool. This cold night will turn us all to fools and madmen.

Edg. Take heed o' th' foul fiend; obey thy parents; keep thy words justly; swear not; commit not with man's sworn spouse: set not thy sweet heart on proud array. Tom's a-cold.

Lear. What hast thou been?

Edg. A serving-man, proud in heart and mind; that curl'd my hair; wore gloves in my cap; serv'd the lust of my mistress' heart, and did the act of darkness with her: swore as many oaths as I spake words, and broke them in the sweet face of heaven: one that slept in the contriving of lust, and wak'd to do it. Wine lov'd I deeply, dice dearly; and in woman out-paramour'd the Turk. False of heart, light of ear, bloody of hand; hog in sloth, fox in stealth, wolf in greediness, dog in madness, hon in prev. Let not the creaking of shoes nor the rustling of silks betray thy poor heart to woman. Keep thy foot out of brothels, thy hand out of plackets, thy pen from lenders' books, and defy the foul fiend. Still through the hawthorn blows the cold wind.

Says suum, mun, nonny.

Dolphin my boy, boy, sessa! let him trot [Storm still.

Lear. Why, thou wert better in a grave than to answer with thy uncover'd body this extremity of the skies. Is man no more than this? Consider him well. Thou ow'st the worm no silk, the beast no hide, the sheep no wool, the cat no perfume. Ha! here's three on's are sophisticated! Thou art the thing itself: unaccommodated man is no more but such a poor, bare, forked animal as thou art. Off, off, you lendings! Come, unbutton here.

Enter GLOUCESTER with a torch.

Fool. Prithee, nuncle, be contented; 'tis a naughty night to swim in. Now a little fire in a wild field were like an old lecher's heart—a small spark, all the rest on's body cold. Look, here comes a walking fire. 112

Edg. This is the foul fiend Flibbertigibbet: be begins at curfew, and walks till the first cock; he gives the web and the pin, squenes the eye, and makes the hare-lip; mildews the white wheat, and hurts the poor creature of earth.

Swithold footed thrice the 'old;

He met the nightmare and her ninefold;

Bid her alight

And her troth plight.

And aroint thee, witch, aroint thee!

Kent How fares your Grace? Lear. What's he? 124 Kent. Who's there? What is't you seek? Glo. What are you there? Your names? Edg. Poor Tom: that eats the swimming frog, the toad, the tadpole, the wall-newt, and the water; that in the fury of his heart, when the foul fiend rages, eats cowdung for sallets, swallows the old rat and the ditch-dog, drinks the green mantle of the standing pool; who is whipp'd from tithing to tithing, and stock-punish'd, and imprison'd: who hath had three suits to his back, six shirts to his body-

Horse to ride, and weapon to wear: But mice and rats, and such small deer, Have been Tom's food for seven long year.

Beware my follower. Peace. Smulkin: peace, thou fiend!

Glo. What, hath your Grace no better company?

Edg. The prince of darkness is a gentleman: Modo he's call'd, and Mahu. Glo. Our flesh and blood, my lord, is grown so vile That it doth hate what gets it.

Edg. Poor Tom's a-cold.

Glo. Go in with me: my duty cannot suffer

T' obey in all your daughters' hard commands.

Though their injunction be to bar my

And let this tyrannous night take hold upon vou. Yet have I ventur'd to come seek you out, And bring you where both fire and food is ready. Lear. First let me talk with this philosopher.

What is the cause of thunder?

Kent. Good my lord, take his offer; go into th' house.

Lear. I'll talk a word with this same learned Theban.

What is your study?

Edg. How to prevent the fiend and to kill vermin.

Lear. Let me ask you one word in private. Kent. Importune him once more to go, my lord:

His wits begin t' unsettle. [Storm still. Canst thou blame him? His daughters seek his death. Ah, that good Kent !-He said it would be thus-poor, banish'd man !

Thou sayest the King grows mad; I'll tell thee, friend,

I am almost mad myself. I had a son.

Now outlaw'd from my blood; he sought my life

But lately, very late. I lov'd him, friend-No father his son dearer. True to tell thee.

The grief hath craz'd my wits. night's this ! 160

I do beseech your Grace-Lear. O, cry you mercy, sir.

Noble philosopher, your company.

Edg. Tom's a-cold. Glo. In, fellow, there, into th' hovel; keep thee warm. Lear. Come, let's in all.

Kent. This way, my lord. Lear.

With him; I will keep still with my philosopher.

Kent. Good my lord, soothe him: let him take the fellow.

Glo. Take him you on. Kent. Sirrah, come on; go along with us.

Lear. Come, good Athenian. Glo. No words, no words! Hush.

Edg. Child Rowland to the dark tower came,

His word was still 'Fie, foh, and fum. I smell the blood of a British man'. Exeunt SCENE V. Gloucester's castle.

Enter CORNWALL and EDMUND.

Corn. I will have my revenge ere I depart his house.

Edm. How, my lord, I may be censured, that nature thus gives way to loyalty, something fears me to think of.

Corn. I now perceive it was not altogether your brother's evil disposition made him seek his death; but a provoking merit, set a-work by a reprovable badness in himself.

Edm. How malicious is my fortune, that I must repent to be just! This is the letter he spoke of, which approves him an intelligent party to the advantages of France. O heavens! that this treason were not, or not I the detector!

Corn. Go with me to the Duchess. Edm. If the matter of this paper be certain, you have mighty business in hand.

Corn. True or false, it bath made thee Earl of Gloucester. Seek out where thy father is, that he may be ready for our apprehension.

Edm. [Aside] If I find him comforting the King, it will stuff his suspicion more fully. -I will persever in my course of loyalty. though the conflict be sore between thar and my blood.

Corn. I will lay trust upon thee; and thou shalt find a dearer father in my love. [Exeunt.

KING LEAR [Act 3

SCENE VI. An outhouse of Gloucester's castle.

Enter KENT and GLOUCESTER.

Glo. Here is better than the open air; take it thankfully. I will piece out the comfort with what addition I can. I will not be long from you.

Kent. All the pow'r of his wits have given way to his impatience. The gods reward your kindness! IExit Gloucester.

Enter LEAR, EDGAR, and Fool.

Edg. Frateretto calls me, and tells me Nero is an angler in the lake of darkness. Pray, innocent, and beware the foul fiend.

Fool. Prithee, nuncle, tell me whether a madman be a gentleman or a yeoman? 10

Lear. A king, a king!

Fool. No; he's a yeoman that has a gentleman to his son; for he's a mad yeoman that sees his son a gentleman before him.

Lear. To have a thousand with red burning spits

Come hizzing in upon 'em-

Edg. The foul fiend bites my back. Fool. He's mad that trusts in the tameness of a wolf, a horse's health, a boy's love, or a whore's oath.

Lear. It shall be done; I will arraign tl:em straight.

[To Edgar] Come, sit thou here, most learned justicer.

[To the Fool] Thou, sapient sir, sit here .-Now, you she-foxes!

Edg. Look where he stands and glares! Want'st thou eyes at trial, madam?

Come o'er the bourn, Bessy, to me. 25 Fool. Her boat hath a leak,

And she must not speak,

Why she dares not come over to thee. Edg. The foul fiend haunts poor Tom in the voice of a nightingale. Hoppedance cries in Tom's belly for two white herring. Croak not, black angel; I have no food for

Kent. How do you, sir? Stand you not so amaz'd.

Will you lie down and rest upon the cushions?

Lear. I'll see their trial first. Bring in their evidence. [To Edgar] Thou robed man of justice, take thy place. [To the Fool] And thou, his yoke-fellow of equity, Bench by his side. [To Kent] You are o' th' commission, Sit you too.

Edg. Let us deal justly. Sleepest or wakest thou, jolly shepherd?

Thy sheep be in the corn;

And for one blast of thy minikin mouth.

Thy sheep shall take no harm.

Pur! the cat is grey. Lear. Arraign her first; 'tis Goneril. here take my oath before this honourable assembly she kick'd the poor King her father.

Fool. Come hither, mistress. name Goneril?

Lear. She cannot deny it.

Fool. Cry you mercy, I took you for a ioint-stool.

Lear. And here's another, whose warn'd looks proclaim

What store her heart is made on. Stop her there!

Arms, arms, sword, fire! Corruption in the place!

False justicer, why hast thou let her scape? Edg. Bless thy five wits! 56
Kent. O pity! Sir, where is the patience now

That you so oft have boasted to retain? Edg. [Aside] My tears begin to take his part so much

They mar my counterfeiting.

Lear. The little dogs and all, Tray, Blanch, and Sweetheart, see, they bark at me.

Edg. Tom will throw his head at them. Avaunt, you curs!

Be thy mouth or black or white, Tooth that poisons if it bite: Mastiff, greyhound, mongrel grim. Hound or spaniel, brach or lym.

Or bobtail tike or trundle-tail-Tom will make him weep and wail; For, with throwing thus my head, Dogs leapt the hatch, and all are fled. Do de, de, de. Sessa! Come, march to wakes and fairs and market-towns. Poor Tom, thy horn is dry.

Lear. Then let them anatomize Regan; see what breeds about her heart. Is there any cause in nature that make these hard hearts? [To Edgar] You, sir, I entertain for one of my hundred; only I do not like the fashion of your garments. You will say they are Persian, but let them be chang'd. 80

Kent. Now, good my lord, lie here and rest awhile.

Lear. Make no noise, make no noise; draw the curtains. So, so. We'll go to supper i' th' morning.

Fool. And I'll go to bed at noon.

Re-enter GLOUCESTER.

Glo. Come hither, friend. Where is the King my master?

Kent. Here, sir; but trouble him nothis wits are gone.

Glo. Good friend, I prithee, take him in thy arms;

тооб

I have o'erheard a plot of death upon him There is a litter ready: lay him in't And drive toward Dover, friend, where thou shalt meet

Both welcome and protection. Take up thy master:

If thou shouldst dally half an hour, his life With thine, and all that offer to defend him.

Stand in assured loss. Take up, take up; 93 And follow me, that will to some provision Give thee quick conduct.

Oppressed nature sleeps Kent. This rest might yet have balm'd thy broken sinews,

Which, if convenience will not allow. Stand in hard cure. [To the Fool] Come, help to bear thy master;

Thou must not stay behind. Glo.

Come, come, away. [Exeunt all but Edgar. Edg. When we our betters see bearing our woes, We scarcely think our miseries our foes. Who alone suffers suffers most i' th' mind, Leaving free things and happy shows behind: But then the mind much sufferance doth o'erskip When grief hath mates, and bearing fellowship.

How light and portable my pain seems now, When that which makes me bend makes the You are my guests; do me no foul play, King bow-

He childed as I father'd! Tom, away! 110 Mark the high noises: and thyself bewray. When false opinion, whose wrong thoughts defile thee,

In thy just proof repeals and reconciles thee.

What will hap more to-night, safe scape the King! Lurk. lurk. TExit.

Scene VII. Gloucester's castle.

Enter CORNWALL, REGAN, GONERIL, EDMUND, and Servants.

Corn. [To Goneril] Post speedily to my lord your husband; show him this letter. The army of France is landed.—Seek out the traitor Gloucester.

[Exeunt some of the Servants. Reg. Hang him instantly.

Gon. Pluck out his eyes.

Corn. Leave him to my displeasure. Edmund, keep you our sister company. The revenges we are bound to take upon your traitorous father are not fit for your beholding. Advise the Duke, where you are going, to a most festinate preparation; we are bound to the like. Our posts shall be swift and intelligent betwixt us. Farewell, dear sister; farewell, my Lord of Gloucester. Enter OSWALD.

How now! where's the King?

Osw. My Lord of Cloucester hath convey'd him hence.

Some five or six and thirty of his knights, 15 Hot questrists after him, met him at gate:

Who, with some other of the lord's dependants,

Are gone with him toward Dover, where they boast

To have well-armed friends.

Corn. Get horses for your mistress. Gon. Farewell, sweet lord, and sister. 20 Corn. Edmund, farewell. [Exeunt Goneril. Edmund, and Oswald.

Go seek the traitor Gloucester, Pinion him like a thief, bring him before us. [Exeunt other Servants.

Though well we may not pass upon his life Without the form of justice, yet our power Shall do a court'sy to our wrath, which men May blame, but not control.

Enter GLOUCESTER, brought in by two or three.

Who's there? the traitor? Reg. Ingrateful fox! 'tis he. Corn. Bind fast his corky arms.

Glo. What means your Graces? Good my ariends, consider friends.

Corn. Bindhim, I say. [Servants bind him. Hard, hard. O filthy traitor! Reg. Glo. Unmerciful lady as you are, I'm none.

Corn. To this chair bind him. Villain, thou shalt find-- [Regan plucks his beard. Glo. By the kind gods, 'tis most ignobly done

To pluck me by the beard. Reg. So white, and such a traitor! Glo.

Naughty lady, These hairs which thou dost ravish from my chin

Will quicken and accuse thee. I am your host.

With robbers' hands my hospitable favours You should not ruffle thus. What will you

Corn. Come, sir, what letters had you late from France?

Reg. Be simple-answer'd, for we know the truth.

Corn. And what confederacy have you with the traitors

Late footed in the kingdom?

Reg. To whose hands you have sent the lunatic King:

Speak. Glo. I have a letter guessingly set down,

KING LEAR [Act 4

Which came from one that's of a neutral heart.

And not from one oppos'd.

Corn. Cunning.
Reg. And false.
Corn. Where hast thou sent the King?

Glo. To Dover. 50
Reg. Wherefore to Dover? Wast thou not charg'd at peril—

Corn. Wherefore to Dover? Let him first answer that.

Glo. I am tied to the stake, and I must stand the course.

Reg. Wherefore to Dover?

Glo. Because I would not see thy cruel nails 55
Pluck out his poor old eyes; nor thy fierce sister

In his anointed flesh rash boarish fangs.

The sea, with such a storm as his bare head

In hell-black night endur'd, would have buoy'd up

And quench'd the stelled fires. 60 Yet, poor old heart, he holp the heavens to rain.

If wolves had at thy gate howl'd that dern time,

Thou shouldst have said 'Good porter, turn the key'.

All cruels else subscribe but I shall see

All cruels else subscribe, but I shall see
The winged vengeance overtake such children. 65

Corn. See't shalt thou never. Fellows, hold the chair.

Upon these eyes of thine I'll set my foot.

Glo. He that will think to live till he be old.

Give me some help!—O cruel! O you gods!

Reg. One side will mock another; th' other too.

Corn. If you see vengeance—

1 Serv. Hold your hand, my lord. I have serv'd you ever since I was a child; But better service have I never done you, Than now to bid you hold.

Reg. How now, you dog!

1 Serv. If you did wear a beard upon your chin 75

I'd shake it on this quarrel. What do you mean?

Corn. My villain! [They draw and fight. 1 Serv. Nay, then come on, and take the chance of anger.

[Cornwall is wounded. Reg. Give me thy sword. A peasant stand up thus! [She takes a sword and stabs him from behind.

1 Serv. O, I am slain! My lord, you have one eye left

To see some mischief on him. O! [Dies. Corn. Lest it see more, prevent it. Out vile jelly!

Where is thy lustre now?

Glo. All dark and comfortless! Where's my son Edmund?

Edmund, enkindle all the sparks of nature To quit this hornd act.

Reg. Out, treacherous villain!
Thou call'st on him that hates thee. It was he

That made the overture of thy treasons

to us;

Who is too good to pity thee.

Glo. O my follies! Then Edgar was abus'd. 90 Kind gods, forgive me that, and prosper him.

Reg. Go thrust him out at gates and let him smell

His way to Dover. [Gloucester led out.

How is't my lord? How look you? Corn. I have receiv'd a hurt. Follow me, lady.

Turn out that eyeless villain; throw this slave

Upon the dunghill. Regan, I bleed apace.

Untimely comes this hurt. Give me your arm. [Exit Cornwall, led by Regan. 2 Serv. I'll never care what wickedness I do,

If this man come to good.

3 Serv. If she live long, And in the end meet the old course of death, Women will all turn monsters.

2 Serv. Let's follow the old Earl and get the Bedlam

To lead him where he would. His roguish madness

Allows itself to anything.

3 Serv. Go thou. I'll fetch some flax and whites of eggs
To apply to his bleeding face. Now heaven help him!
[Exeunt.

ACT FOUR

SCENE I. The Heath.

Enter EDGAR.

Edg. Yet better thus and known to be contemn'd,

Than still contemn'd and flatter'd. To be worst,

The lowest and most dejected thing of fortune,

Stands still in esperance, lives not in fear. The lamentable change is from the best; 5 The worst returns to laughter. Welcome, then,

Thou unsubstantial air that I embrace!
The wretch that thou hast blown unto the worst

Owes nothing to thy blasts.

Enter GLOUCESTER, led by an Old Man.

But who comes here?
My father, poorly led? World, world, O world!

Scene 1] KING LEAR

But that thy strange mutations make us hate thee.

Life would not yield to age.

Old Man. O my good lord, I have been your tenant, and your father's tenant, these fourscore years.

Glo. Away, get thee away; good friend, be gone.

Thy comforts can do me no good at all; Thee they may hurt.

You cannot see your way. Old Man. Glo. I have no way, and therefore want no eyes; I stumbled when I saw: full oft 'tis seen 20 Our means secure us, and our mere defects Prove our commodities. O dear son Edgar, The food of thy abused father's wrath ! Might I but live to see thee in my touch.

I'd say I had eyes again! Old Man. How now! Who's there? Edg. [Aside] O gods! Who is't can say

I am at the worst '? I am worse than e'er I was.

Old Man. 'Tis poor mad Tom.

The worst is not

So long as we can say 'This is the worst'. Old Man. Fellow, where goest?

Is it a beggar-man? 30 Old Man. Madman and beggar too.

Glo. He has some reason, else he could

Glo. Is that the naked fellow?

Old Man. Ay, my lord. Glo. Then, prithee, get thee away. If for my sake Thou wilt o'ertake us hence a mile or twain I' th' way toward Dover, do it for ancient love; And bring some covering for this naked soul.

Which I'll entreat to lead me.

Alack, sir, he is mad. Old Man. Glo. 'Tis the times' plague when madmen lead the blind.

Do as I bid thee, or rather do thy pleasure; Above the rest, be gone.

Old Man. I'll bring him the best 'parel that I have. [Exit. Come on't what will.

Glo. Sirrah, naked fellow!

Edg. Poor Tom's a-cold. [Aside] I cannot daub it further.

Glo. Come hither, fellow.

Edg. [Aside] And yet I must.—Bless thy sweet eyes, they bleed.

Glo. Know'st thou the way to Dover? Edg. Both stile and gate, horse-way and footpath. Poor Tom hath been scar'd out of his good wits. Bless thee, good man's son, from the foul fiend! Five fiends have been in poor Tom at once: of lust, as Obidicut; Hobbididence, prince of dumbness; Mahu, of stealing; Modo, of murder; Flibbertigibbet, of mopping and mowing, who since possesses chambermaids and waitingwomen. So, bless thee, master!

Glo. Here, take this purse, thou whom the heavens' plagues 25 Have humbled to all strokes. That I am wretched Makes thee the happier. Heavens, deal so still!

Let the superfluous and lust-dieted man Edg. [Aside] And worse I may be yet. That slaves your ordinance, that will not Because he does not feel, feel your power quickly;

So distribution should undo excess. And each man have enough. Dost thou know Dover? Edg. Ay, master.

There is a cliff whose high and Glo. bending head

Looks fearfully in the confined deep: Bring me but to the very brim of it And I'll repair the misery thou dost bear With something rich about me. From that place

I shall no leading need.

Edg. Give me thy arm: 79 Poor Tom shall lead thee.

SCENE II. Before the Duke of Albany's balace.

Enter GONERIL and EDMUND.

Gon. Welcome, my lord. I marvel our mild husband Not met us on the way.

Enter OSWALD.

Now, where's your master? Osw. Madam, within, but never man so chang'd.

I told him of the army that was landed; He smil'd at it. I told him you were Scene III. The French camp near Dover. Enter KENT and a Gentleman.

Kent. Why the King of France is so suddenly gone back know you no reason? Gent. Something he left imperfect in the state, which since his coming forth is thought of, which imports to the kingdom so much fear and danger that his personal return was most required and necessary. 6 Kent. Who hath he left behind him general?

Gent. The Marshal of France, Monsieur La Far.

Kent. Did your letters pierce the Queen to any demonstration of grief? Gent. Ay, sir; she took them, read them in my presence,

And now and then an ample tear trill'd down

Her delicate cheek. It seem'd she was a queen

Over her passion, who, most rebel-like, Sought to be king o'er her.

To deal with grief alone.

Kent. It is the stars, The stars above us, govern our conditions; Else one self mate and make could not beget Such different issues. You spoke not with her since ?

Gent. No.

Kent. Was this before the King return'd? Gent. No. since.

Kent. Well, sir, the poor distressed Lear's i' th' town;

Who sometime in his better tune remembers What we are come about, and by no means

Will yield to see his daughter. Gent. Why, good sir? Kent. A sovereign shame so elbows him:

his own unkindness, That stripp'd her from his benediction, turn'd her

To foreign casualties, gave her dear rights To his dog-hearted daughters—these things sting

His mind so venomously that burning shame

Detains him from Cordelia.

Alack, poor gentleman! Gent. Kent. Of Albany's and Cornwall's powers you heard not? Gent. 'Tis so; they are afoot.

Kent. Well, sir, I'll bring you to our master Lear.

And leave you to attend him. Some dear cause

Will in concealment wrap me up awhile; When I am known aright, you shall not grieve

Not to a rage; patience and Lending me this acquaintance. I pray you [Excunt. You Along with me.

> Scene IV. The French camp. A tent. Enter with drum and colours, CORDELIA, Doctor, and Soldiers.

Cor. Alack, 'tis he! Why, he was met cven now

As mad as the vex'd sea, singing aloud, Crown'd with rank fumiter and furrow weeds,

With hardocks, hemlock, nettles, cuckooflow'rs,

In our sustaining corn. A century send forth:

Search every acre in the high-grown field, And bring him to our eye. [Exit an Officer. What can man's wisdom.

Lest his ungovern'd rage dissolve the life That wants the means to lead it.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. News, madam:

The British pow'rs are marching hitherward.

Cor. 'Tis known before; our preparation stands In expectation of them. O dear father! It is thy business that I go about: Therefore great France My mourning and importun'd tears hath pitied.

No blown ambition doth our arms incite. But love, dear love, and our ag'd father's I pray desire her call her wisdom to her. 35 right.

Soon may I hear and see him! [Exeunt.

> Scene V. Gloucester's castle. Enter REGAN and OSWALD.

Reg. But are my brother's pow'rs set What party I do follow.

Osw. Av madam.

Reg. Himself in person there?

Osin. Madam, with much ado. Your sister is the better soldier.

Reg. Lord Edmund spake not with your lord at home?

Osw. No. madam.

Reg. What might import my sister's letter to him? Osw. I know not, lady.

Reg. Faith, he is posted hence on serious matter.

It was great ignorance, Gloucester's eyes being out, To let him live; where he arrives he moves All hearts against us. Edmund, I think, is gone In pity of his misery, to dispatch His nighted life; moreover, to descry The strength o' th' enemy.

Osw. I must needs after him, madam. with my letter.

Reg. Our troops set forth to-morrow: stav with us:

The ways are dangerous.

Osw. I may not, madam: My lady charg'd my duty in this business. Reg. Why should she write to Edmund? Might not you Transport her purposes by word? Belike The which he lacks; that to provoke in Some things—I know not what. I'll love thee much-

Osw. Madam, I had rather-Reg. I know your lady does not love her husband:

here

She gave strange œillades and most speaking looks To noble Edmund. I know you are of her bosom.

Osw. I. madam?

Reg. I speak in understanding: v'are. I know't.

Therefore I do advise you take this note. My lord is dead; Edmund and I have talk'd:

And more convenient is he for my hand Than for your lady's. You may gather more.

If you do find him, pray you give him this:

And when your mistress hears thus much from you,

So fare you well.

If you do chance to hear of that blind traitor,

Preferment falls on him that cuts him off. Osw. Would I could meet him, madam! I should show

Reg.

Fare thee well. 40 [Exeunt.

Scene VI. The country near Dover.

Enter GLOUCESTER, and EDGAR dressed like a peasant.

Glo. When shall I come to th' top of that same hill?

Edg. You do climb up it now; look how we labour.

Glo. Methinks the ground is even.

Edg. Horrible steep. Hark, do you hear the sea?

Glo. No, truly. Edg. Why then, your other senses grow imperfect

By your eyes' anguish. Glo.

So may it be indeed. Methinks thy voice is alter'd, and thou speak'st

In better phrase and matter than thou dıdst.

Edg. Y'are much deceiv'd: in nothing am I chang'd

But in my garments.

Glo. Methinks y'are better spoken. Come on, sir; here's the place. Stand still. How fearful Edg.

And dizzy 'tis to cast one's eyes so low! The crows and choughs that wing the midwav air

Show scarce so gross as beetles. Half-way down

Hangs one that gathers samphire—dreadful trade!

Methinks he seems no bigger than his head. The fishermen that walk upon the beach Appear like mice; and youd tall anchoring

Diminish'd to her cock; her cock, a buoy Almost too small for sight. The murmuring surge

That on th' unnumb'red idle pebble chafes Cannot be heard so high. I'll look no more; Lest my brain turn, and the deficient sight Topple down headlong.

Set me where you stand. Glo. Edg. Give me your hand. You are now within a foot

Of th' extreme verge. For all beneath the moon

Would I not leap upright.

Glo. Let go my hand. Here, friend, 's another purse; in it a jewel

Well worth a poor man's taking. Fairies and gods

Prosper it with thee! Go thou further off; Bid me farewell, and let me hear thee going. Edg. Now fare ye well, good sir.

With all my heart. Glo. Edg. Why I do trifle thus with his despair

Is done to cure it.

Glo. [Kneeling] O you mighty gods! This world I do renounce, and in your sights

Shake patiently my great affliction off. If I could bear it longer, and not fall To quarrel with your great opposeless wills, My snuff and loathed part of nature should Burn itself out. If Edgar live, O, bless him!

[Rising] Now, fellow, fare thee well. Edg. Gone, sir; farewell, [Gloucester casts himself down.

And yet I know not how conceit may rob The treasury of life, when life itself Yields to the theft. Had he been where he The safer sense will ne'er accommodate thought,

By this had thought been past.—Alive or dead?

Ho, you sir! friend! Hear you, sir! Speak !-

Thus might he pass indeed. Yet he revives— What are you, sir?

Glo. Away, and let me die. Edg. Hadst thou been aught but gossamer, feathers, air.

So many fathom down precipitating, Thou'dst shiver'd like an egg; but thou dost breathe,

Hast heavv substance, bleed'st speak'st, art sound.

Ten masts at each make not the altitude Which thou hast perpendicularly iell.

Thy life's a miracle. Speak yet again. Glo. But have I fall'n, or no?

Edg. From the dread summit of this chalky bourn.

Look up a-height; the shrill-gorg'd lank so far

Cannot be seen or heard. Do but look up. Glo. Alack, I have no eyes. Is wretchedness depriv'd that benefit,

To end itself by death? 'Twas yet some comfort.

When misery could beguile the tyrant's rage And frustrate his proud will.

Edg. Give me your arm. Up—so. How ... You stand. How is't? Feel you your legs?

Glo. Too well, too well.

Edg. This is above all strangeness. Upon the crown o' th' cliff what thing was that

Which parted from you?

Glo. A poor unfortunate beggar. Edg. As I stood here below, methought his eves

Were two full moons; he had a thousand noses.

Horns whelk'd and waved like the enudged sea.

It was some fiend; therefore, thou happy father,

Think that the clearest gods, who make them honours

Of men's impossibilities, have preserved thee.

Glo. I do remember now. Henceforth I'll bear

Affliction till it do cry out itself Enough, enough ' and die. That thing you speak of

I took it for a man; often 'twould say, The fiend, the fiend'. He led me to that place.

Edg. Bear free and patient thoughts.

Enter LEAR, fantastically dressed with weeds.

But who comes here? His master thus.

Lear. No, they cannot touch me for coining; I am the King himself.

Edg. O thou side-piercing sight! Lear. Nature's above art in that respect. That fellow There's your press-money. handles his bow like a crow-keeper; draw me a clothier's yard. Look, look, a mouse! Peace, peace; this piece of toasted cheese Dost thou squiny at me? will do't. There's my gauntlet; I'll prove worst, blind Cupid; I'll not love. Read it on a giant. Bring up the brown bills, thou this challenge; mark but the penning O, well flown, bird! i' the clout, i' the clout of it. -hewgh! Give the word.

Edg. Sweet marjoram.

Lear. Pass.

Glc. I know that voice.

Lear. Ha! Goneril, with a white beard! They flatter'd me like a dog, and told me I had white hairs in my beard ere the black ones were there. To say 'ay' and 'no' to everything that I said! 'Ay' and no' too was no good divinity. When the rain came to wet me once, and the wind to make me chatter: when the thunder would not peace at my bidding; there I found 'em, there I smelt 'em out. Go to, they are not men o' their words. They told me I was everything; 'tis a he-I am not agueproof.

Glo. The trick of that voice I do well remember. Is't not the King?

Lear.

Ay, every inch a king. When I do stare, see how the subject quakes.

I pardon that man's life. What was thy cause?

Adultery? Thou shalt not die. Die for adultery? No. The wren goes to't, and the small gilded fly Does lecher in my sight.

Glo. Were all thy letters suns, I could not see one.

Edg. [Aside] I would not take this from report. It is,

And my heart breaks at it.

Lear. Read.

Glo. What, with the case of eyes? Lear. O, ho, are you there with me? No eyes in your head nor no money in your purse? Your eyes are in a heavy case, your purse in a light; yet you see how this world goes.

Glo. I see it feelingly.

Lear. What, art mad? A man may see how this world goes with no eyes. Look with thine ears. See how youd justice rails upon youd simple thief. Hark, in thine ear: change places and, handy-dandy, which is the justice, which is the thief? Thou hast seen a farmer's dog bark at a beggar? 155 Glo. Ay, sir.

Lear. And the creature run from the cur? There thou mightst behold the great image of authority: a dog's obey'd in office. Thou rascal beadle, hold thy bloody Reason in madness !

Lear. If thou wilt weep my fortunes, take my eyes.

Gloucester.

Glo. O run'd piece of nature! This great Thou must be patient; we came crying hither.

Shall so wear out to nought. Dost thou I hou know'st the first time that we smell the air

We wawl ar : cry. I will preach to thee Mar .

Glo. Alach alack the day !

Lear. Who we are born, we cry that we are come

It were a delicate stratagem to shoe rs
A troop of horse with felt; I'll put't is proof;

And when I have stol'n upon these son-in laws,

Then kill, kill, kill, kill, kill, kill!

Enter a Gentleman, with Attendants.

Gent. O, here he is: lay hand upo him.—Sir.

Your most dear daughter—

Lear. No rescue? What, a prisoner?

am even

The natural fool of fortune. Use me well You shall have ransom. Let me have surgeons;

I am cut to th' brains.

Gent. You shall have any thing Lear. No seconds? All myself? 19
Why, this would make a man a man o

To use his eyes for garden water-pots,

Ay, and laying Autumn's dust.

Gent. Good sir—
Lear. I will die bravely, like a smug bridegroom. What!

I will be jovial. Come, come; I am a king, My masters, know you that.

Gent. You are a royal one, and we obey

Lear. Then there's life in't. Nay, an you get it, you shall get it by running. Sa, sa, sa, sa. [Exit running; Attendants follow. Gent. A sight most pitiful in the meanest wretch, 206

Past speaking of in a king! Thou hast one daughter

Who redeems nature from the general curse Which twain have brought her to.

Edg. Hail, gentle sir.

Gent. Sir, speed you; what's your will?

Edg. Do you hear aught, sir, of a battle toward?

212

Gent. Most sure and vulgar; every one hears that

Which can distinguish sound.

Edg. But, by your favour, How near's the other army?

Gent. Near and on speedy foot; the main descry

Stands on the hourly thought.

Edg. I thank you, sir; that's all.

Gent. Though that the Queen on special cause is here,

Her army is mov'd on.

Edg. I thank you, sir. [Exit Gentleman.

Glo. You ever-gentle gods, take my breath from me;
Let not my worser spirit tempt me again 2-0

To die before you please.

Edg. Well pray you, tather. Glo. Now, good sir, what are you?

Edg. A most poor man, made tame to furtune's blows,

Who, by the art of known and feeling sorrows,

Am pregnant to good pity. Give me your hand;

I'll lead you to some biding.

Glo. Hearty thanks;
The bounty and the benison of heaven

To boot, and boot!

Enter OSWALD.

Osw. A p*oclaim'd prize! Most happy! That eyeless head of thine was first fiam'd flesh

To raise my fortunes. Thou old unhapry traitor,

Briefly thyself remember. The sword is out That must destroy thee.

Glo. Now let thy friendly hand Put strength enough to't. [Edgar interposes. Osw. Wherefore, hold peasant Osw. Wherefore, bold peasant, Dar'st thou support a publish'd traitor? Hence;

Lest that th' infection of his fortune take Like hold on thee. Let go his arm. 236 Edg. Chill not let go, zir, without vurther casion.

Osw. Let go, slave, or thou diest.

Edg. Good gentleman, go your gait, and let poor volk pass. An chud ha' bin zwagger'd out of my life, 'twould not ha' bin zo long as 'tis by a vortnight. Nay, come not near th' old man; keep out, che vor ye, or Ice try whether your costard or my ballow be the harder. Chill be plain with you.

SCENE VII. A tent in the French camp. Music. Enter Cordelia, Kent, Doctor, and Gentleman. Cor. O thou good Kent, how shall I live and work

To match thy goodness? My life will be too short.

And every measure fail me.

Kent. To be acknowledg'd, madam, is o'erpaid.

All my reports go with the modest truth; Nor more nor clipp'd, but so.

Be better suited. These weeds are memories of those worser hours:

I prithee put them off.

Kent.

May be my friends. He's dead; I am only Yet to be known shortens my made intent: My boon I make it that you know me not Till time and I think meet.

Cor. Then be't so, my good lord. [To the Doctor] How does the King?

Doct. Madam, sleeps still.

Cor. O you kind gods,

Cure this great breach in his abused nature ! Th' untun'd and jarring senses, O, wind

Of this child-changed father !

Doct. So please your Majesty That we may wake the King; he hath slept long.

Cor. Be govern'd by your knowledge, and proceed sway of your own will. [To the gentleman Is he array'd? Gent. Ay, madam; in the heaviness of sleep We put fresh garments on him.

Doct. Be by, good madam, when we do awake him;

I doubt not of his temperance.

Cor. erv well. Doct. Please you, draw near. Louder the music there!

He draws the curtains and discovers LEAR asleeb in bed.

Cor. O my dear father! Restoration hang Thy medicine on my lips, and let this kiss Repair those violent harms that my two sisters

Against my fire; and wast thou fain, poor father,

To hovel thee with swine and rogues forlorn, In short and musty straw? Alack, alack! 'Tis wonder that thy life and wits at once Had not concluded all.—He wakes; speak to him.

Doct. Madam, do you; 'tis fittest.

Cor. How does my royal lord? How fares your Majesty?

Lear. You do me wrong to take me out o' th' grave.

Thou art a soul in bliss; but I am bound 46 Upon a wheel of fire, that mine own tears Pardon, dear madam; Do scald like molten lead.

Cor. Sir, do you know me? . You are a spirit, I mow. Where did Gloucester. Lec you die? Still, still far wide! Do . He's scarce awake: let him alone! awhile. Where have I been? Where am I? Lea. Fair daylight? I am naightily abus'd. I should e'en die with pity To see another thus. I know not what to say. I will not swear these are my hands. Let's

Cor. O, look upon me, sir, And hold your hands in benediction o'er

No, sir, you must not kneel.

Lear. Pray, do not mock me: I am a very foolish fond old man, Fourscore and upward, not an hour more nor less:

And, to deal plainly,

I fear I am not in my perfect mind.

Methinks I should know you, and know this man;

Yet I am doubtful; for I am mainly ignorant What place this is; and all the skill I have Remembers not these garments; nor I know not

Where I did lodge last night. Do not laugh at me:

For, as I am a man, I think this lady To be my child Cordelia.

And so I am, I am. 70 Cor. Lear. Be your tears wet? Yes, faith. I pray weep not; If you have poison for me I will drink it.

I know you do not love me; for your sisters Have, as I do remember, done me wrong: And bosom'd with her, as far as we call You have some cause, they have not. Cor. No cause, no cause. 75

Lear. Am I in France?

Kent. In your own kingdom, sir. Lear. Do not abuse me.

Doct. Be comforted, good madam. The great rage,

You see, is kill'd in him; and yet it is danger

To make him even o'er the time he has lost. Desire him to go in; trouble him no more Till further settling.

Cor. Will't please your Highness walk? You must bear with me. Pray you now, forget and forgive; I am old and foolish. [Exeunt all but Kent and Gentleman. Gent. Holds it true, sir, that the Duke of Cornwall was so slain? Kent. Most certain, sir.

Gent. Who is conductor of his people?

Kent. As 'tis said, the bastard son of Gent. They say Edgar, his banish'd son, is with the Earl of Kent in Germany.

Kent. Report is changeable. 'Tis time to look about; the powers of the kingdom Luproach apace.

Gent. The arbitrement is like to be biouly. Fare you well, sir. Exit.

Kent. My point and period will be throughly wrought.

Or well or ill, as this day's battle's fought. [Exit.

ACT FIVE

Scene I. The British camp near Dover. Enter, with drum and colours, EDMUND. REGAN, Gentlemen, and Soldiers.

Edm. Know of the Duke if his last purpose hold,

Or whether since he is advis'd by aught To change the course. He's full on alteration

And self-reproving—bring tile constant pleasure. [Exit an Officer. Reg. Our sister's man is certainly miscarned. Edm. 'Tis to be doubted, madam.

Reg. Now, sweet lord. You know the goodness I intend upon vou.

Tell me-but truly-but then speak the truth--

Do you not love my sister?

Edm. In honour'd love. Reg. But have you never found my brother's way

To the forfended place? That thought abuses you. Reg. I am doubtful that you have been conjunct hers.

Edm. No, by mine honour, madam. Reg. I never shall endure her. Dear my lord. Be not familiar with her.

Fear me not. Edm. She and the Duke her husband!

Enter, with drum and colours, ALBANY,

GONERIL, and Soldiers. Gon. [Aside] I had rather lose the battle than that sister Should loosen him and me.

Alb. Our very loving sister, well be-met. Sir, this I heard: the King is come to his daughter

With others whom the rigour of our state Forc'd to cry out. Where I could not be honest

I never yet was valiant. For this business, It touches us as France invades our land, 25 Not bolds the King, with others whom, I Let her who would be rid of him devise Most just and heavy causes make oppose. Edm. Sir, you speak nobly.

Why is this reason'd? Gon. Combine together 'gainst the enemy; For these domestic-door particulars

Are not the question here. Alb.

Let's then determine With th' ancient of war on our proceeding. Edm. I shall attend you presently at vour tent.

Reg. Sister, you'll go with us?

Gon. No.

Reg. 'Tis most convenient; pray you go with us.

Gon. [Aside] O, ho, I know the riddle .-I will go.

As they are going out, enter EDGAR, disguised.

Edg. If e'er your Grace had speech with man so poor,

Hear me one word.

Alb. I'll overtake you.—Speak. Exeunt all but Albany and Edgar. Edg. Before you fight the battle, ope this letter. If you have victory, let the trumpet sound For him that brought it; wretched though

I seem I can produce a champion that will prove What is avouched there. If you miscarry, Your business of the world hath so an end, And machination ceases. Fortune love you!

Alb. Stay till I have read the letter. I was forbid it. When time shall serve, let but the herald cry, And I'll appear again.

Als. Why, fare thee well. I will o'erlook thy paper. [Exit Edgar.

Re-enter EDMUND.

Edm. The enemy's in view; draw up vour powers.

Here is the guess of their true strength and forces

By diligent discovery; but your haste Is now urg'd on you.

We will greet the time. [Exit. Edm. To both these sisters have I sworn my love;

Each jealous of the other, as the stung Are of the adder. Which of them shall I take?

Both? one? or neither? Neither can be enjoy'd,

If both remain alive: to take the widow, Exasperates, makes mad her sister Goneril; And hardly shall I carry out my side, Her husband being alive. Now then, we'll Enter EDGAR and GLOUCESTER.

Edg. Here, father, take the shadow of this tree

For your good host; pray that the right may thrive.

If ever I return to you again

I'll bring you comfort.

Grace go with you, sir! Exit Edgar.

Alarum and retreat within. Re-enter EDGAR. Edg. Away, old man; give me thy hand:

away! King Lear hath lost, he and his daughter ta'en.

Give me thy hand; come on.

Glo. No further, sir; a man may rot even here.

Edg. What, in ill thoughts again? Men must endure

Their going hence, even as their coming hither: Ripeness is all. Come on.

Glo. And that's true too. [Exeunt.

Scene III. The British camp near Dover. Enter, in conquest, with drum and colours, EDMUND: LEAR and CORDELIA prisoners: Soldiers, Captain.

Edm. Some officers take them away. Good guard,

Until their greater pleasures first be known That are to censure them.

Cor. We are not the first Who with best meaning have incurr'd the worst.

For thee, oppressed King, am I cast down; Myself could else out-frown false Fortune's frown.

Shall we not see these daughters and these sisters?

Lear. No, no, no, no! Come, let's away to prison.

We two alone will sing like birds i' th' cage; When thou dost ask me blessing, I'll kneel down

And ask of thee forgiveness: so we'll live, His countenance for the battle; which And pray, and sing, and tell old tales, and laugh

And fortune led you well. You have the captives Who were the opposites of this day's strife;

I do require them of you, so to use them As we shall find their merits and our safety May equally determine.

Edm. Sir, I thought it fit To send the old and miserable king To some retention and appointed guard; Whose age has charms in it, whose title more,

To pluck the common bosom on his side, 50 And turn our impress'd lances in our eyes the Queen.

My reason all the same; and they are ready To-moriow, or at further space, t' appear Where you shall hold your session. At this time

We sweat and bleed; the friend hath lost his friend:

Alb. Which is that adversary? What's he that speaks for Edmund Earl of Gloucester ?

Edm. Himself. What say'st thou to him? Draw thy sword, That, if my speech offend a noble heart.

SCENE I. Venice. A strect. Enter RODERIGO and IAGO.

Rod. Tush, never tell me; I take it much By debitor and creditor-this counter-

As if the strings were thine, shouldst know of this.

Iago, 'Sblood, but you will not hear me." If ever I did dream of such a matter, Abhor me.

Rod. Thou told'st me thou didst hold him in thy hate.

Iago. Despise me if I do not. Three great ones of the city, In personal suit to make me his lieutenant.

Off-capp'd to him; and, by the faith of man.

I know my price. I am worth no worse a place.

But he, as loving his own pride and purposes.

Evades them with a bombast circumstance Horribly stuff'd with epithets of war: And, in conclusion. Nonsuits my mediators: 'For. certes.' says

"I have already chose my officer". And what was he?

Forsooth, a great arithmetician, One Michael Cassio, a Florentine. A fellow almost damn'd in a fair wife, That never set a squadron in the field,

Nor the division of a battle knows More than a spinster; unless the bookish theoric.

Preferment goes by letter and affection, Not by the old gradation, where each second

Stood heir to the first. Now, sir, be judge yourself

Whether I in any just term am affin'd To love the Moor.

Rod. I would not follow him, then, Iago. O, sir, content you.

I follow him to serve my turn upon him: We cannot all be masters, nor all masters Cannot be truly follow'd. You shall mark Many a duteous and knee-crooking knave That, doting on his own obsequious bondage,

Rod. What a full fortune does the thicklips owe.

If he can carry't thus!

Call up her father. Rouse him, make after him, poison his delight, Proclaim him in the streets; incense her kinsmen. And, though he in a fertile climate dwell, Plague him with flies; though that his joy be iov.

Yet throw such changes of vexation on't As it may lose some colour.

Rod. Here is her father's house. I'll call aloud.

Iago. Do, with like timorous accent and dire vell

As when, by night and negligence, the fire Is spied in populous cities.

What, ho, Brabantio!

Brabantio, ho!
Awake! What, ho, Brabantio! Iago. Awake! What, ho, Br Thieves, thieves, thieves! Look to your house, your daughter, and your bags. Thieves! thieves!

Bra. What is the reason of this terrible summons?

What is the matter there?

Rod. Signior, is all your family within? Iago. Are your doors lock'd?

Bra. Why, wherefore ask you this?

Iago. Zounds, sir, you're robb'd; for shame, put on your gown;

Your heart is burst; you have lost half your soul.

Even now, now, very now, an old black ram Is tupping your white ewe. Arise, arise; 90 Awake the snorting citizens with the bell, Or else the devil will make a grandsire of you.

Arise, I say.

Bra. What, have you lost your wits? Rod. Most reverena signior, do you know my voice?

Bra. Not I; what are you?

Rod. My name is Roderigo.

Bra. The worser welcome! I have charg'd thee not to haunt about my doors:

In honest plainness thou hast heard me say My daughter is not for thee; and now, in madness,

Being full of supper and distempering draughts,

Upon malicious bravery dost thou come To start my quiet.

Rod. Sir, sir, sir-

But thou must needs be sure Bra. My spirit and my place have in their power To make this bitter to thee.

Patience, good sir. Rod. Bra. What tell'st thou me of robbing? This is Venice:

My house is not a grange.

Rod. Most grave Brabantio. In simple and pure soul I come to you. 108 lago. Zounds, sir, you are one of those that will not serve God if the devil bid you. Because we come to do you service, and you think we are ruffians, you'll have your daughter cover'd with a Barbary horse; you'll have your nephews neigh to you; you'll have coursers for cousins and gennets for germans. Bra. What profane wretch art thou? 115 lago. I am one, sir, that comes to tell you your daughter and the Moor are now making the beast with two backs. Bra. Thou art a villain.

You are-a Senator. Iago. Bra. This thou shalt answer; I know thee, Roderigo.

Rod. Sir, I will answer anything. But I beseech you,

If't be your pleasure and most wise consent-

As partly I find it is—that your fair daughter.

Enter below, BRABANTIO, in his night gown, and Servants with torches.

Bra. It is too true an evil. Gone she is; And what's to come of my despised time Is nought but bitterness. Now, Roderigo, Where didst thou see her?—O unhappy girl !-

I had thought to have yerk'd him here under the ribs.

Oth. 'Tis better as it is. Iago. Nay, but he prated.

And spoke such scurvy and provoking terms Against your honour That, with the little godliness I have,

I did full hard forbear him. But I pray,

Are you fast married? For be assur'd of

That the magnifico is much beloved, And hath in his effect a voice potential As double as the Duke's. He will divorce you,

Oth. The servants of the Duke and my lieutenant-The goodness of the night upon you, friends!

What is the news?

Cas. The Duke does greet you, General; And he requires your haste-post-haste appearance

Even on the instant.

What is the matter, think you? Oth. Cas. Something from Cyprus, as I may divine.

It is a business of some heat: the galleys 40 Have sent a dozen sequent messengers This very night at one another's heels; And many of the consuls, rais'd and met, Are at the Duke's already. You have been hotly call'd for;

When, being not at your lodging to be found.

The Senate hath sent about three several quests

To search you out.

'Tis well I am found by you. I will but spend a word here in the house, [Exit. And go with you.

Ancient, what makes he here? Cas. Iago. Faith, he to-night hath boarded a land carrack.

If it prove lawful prize, he's made for ever. Cas. I do not understand. He's married. Iago.

To who? Cas.

Re-enter OTHELLO.

Iago. Marry, to-Come, Captain, will you

Oth. Have with you.

Enter Brabantio, Roderigo, and Officers with torches and weapons.

Cas. Here comes another troop to seek for you.

Iago. It is Brabantio. General, be advis'd:

He comes to bad intent. Holla! stand there.

Oth.

Rod. Signior, it is the Moor. Bra. Down with him, thief. They draw on both sides.

Iago. You, Roderigo; come, sir, I am for you.

Oth. Keep up your bright swords, for the dew will rust them.

Good signior, you shall more command with years

Than with your weapons.

Bra. O thou foul thief, where hast thou stow'd my daughter?

Damn'd as thou art, thou hast enchanted her:

For I'll refer me to all things of sense. If she in chains of magic were not bound, 65 Whether a maid so tender, fair, and happy, So opposite to marriage that she shunn'd The wealthy curled darlings of our nation,

Would ever have, to incur a general mock, Run from her guardage to the sooty boscm Of such a thing as thou—to fear, not to delight.

That thou hast practis'd on her with foul charms.

Abus'd her delicate youth with drugs or minerals

That weakens motion. I'll have't disputed on:

'Tis probable, and palpable to thinking. I therefore apprehend and do attach thee For an abuser of the world, a practiser Of arts inhibited and out of warrant.

Lay hold upon him. If he do resist, Subdue him at his peril.

Hold your hands. Both you of my inclining and the rest. Were it my cue to fight, I should have known it Without a prompter. Where will you that I go

To answer this your charge?

To prison; till fit time Of law and course of direct session Call thee to answer.

What if I do obey? Oth. How may the Duke be therewith satisfied, Whose messengers are here about my side, Upon some present business of the state, 90 To bring me to him.

'Tis true, most worthy signior; 1 Off. The Duke's in council, and your noble self,

I am sure, is sent for.

How! The Duke in council! In this time of the night! Bring him away. Mine's not an idle cause. The Duke himself, Or any of my brothers of the state, Cannot but feel this wrong as 'twere their own:

For if such actions may have passage free. Bond-slaves and pagans shall our statesmen Exeunt.

SCHOE III. Venice. A council-chamber.

Enter DUKE and Senators, set at a table with lights; and Attendants.

Duke. There is no composition in these

That gives them credit.

1 Sen. Indeed, they are disproportion'd; My letters say a hundred and seven galleys.

III7

Duke. And mine a hundred and forty. And mine two hundred. 2 Sen. But though they jump not on a just account-

As in these cases, where the aim reports. 'Tis oft with difference—yet do they all confirm

A Turkish fleet, and bearing up to Cyprus. Duke. Nay, it is possible enough to judgment.

I do not so secure me in the error But the main article I do approve

In fearful sense. Sailor. [Within] What, ho! what, ho! what, ho !

Enter Sailor.

Officer. A messenger from the galleys. Now, what's the business? Duke. Sail. The Turkish preparation makes for Rhodes:

So was I bid report here to the state By Signior Angelo.

Duke. How say you by this change? 1 Sen. This cannot be. By no assay of reason. 'Tis a pageant To keep us in false gaze. When we consider

The importancy of Cyprus to the Turk, 20 And let ourselves again but understand That as it more concerns the Turk than Rhodes.

But altogether lacks th' abilities That Rhodes is dress'd in-if we make thought of this, We must not think the Turk is so unskilful

To leave that latest which concerns him

Neglecting an attempt of ease and gain To wake and wage a danger profitless. Duke. Nay, in all confidence, he's not for Rhodes.

Officer. Here is more news.

Enter a Messenger.

you guess? Mess. Of thirty sail; and now they do restem Their backward course, bearing with frank appearance Their purposes toward Cyprus. Signior Montano,

Your trusty and most valiant servitor, 40 And prays you to believe him.

Duke. 'Tis certain, then, for Cyprus, Marcus Lucchese, is not he in town?

1 Sen. He's now in Florence. Duke. Write from us: wish him postpost-haste dispatch.

Enter Brabantio, Othello, IAGO. Roderico, and Officers.

1 Sen. Here comes Brabantio and the valiant Moor.

Duke. Valiant Othello, we must straight employ you

Against the general enemy Ottoman. [To Brabantio] I did not see you; welcome, gentle signior; We lack'd your counsel and your help tonight.

Bra. So did I yours. Good your Grace, pardon me:

Neither my place, nor aught I heard of business.

Hath rais'd me from my bed; nor doth the general care

Take hold on me; for my particular grief Is of so flood-gate and o'erbearing nature That it englits and swallows other sorrows. And it is still itself.

Duke. Why, what's the matter? Bra. My daughter! O, my daughter! All.Dead?

Bra. Ay, to me. So may he with more facile question bear She is abus'd, stol'n from me, and cor-

For that it stands not in such warlke brace, By spells and medicines bought of mountebanks;

For nature so preposterously to err. Being not deficient, blind, or lame of sense,

Sans witchcraft could not. Duke. Whoe'er he be that in this foul proceeding

Hath thus beguil'd your daughter of herself. And you of her, the bloody book of law You shall yourself read in the bitter letter After your own sense; yea, though our proper son Stood in your action.

Bra. Humbly I thank your Grace. Mess. The Ottomites, reverend and Here is the man-this Moor whom now, it seems.

Your special mandate for the state affairs Hath hither brought.

All. We are very sorry for't. Duke. [To Othello] What, in your own part, can you say to this?

Bra. Nothing, but this is so. Oth. Most potent, grave, and reverend signiors.

My very noble and approv'd good masters: That I have ta'en away this old man's daughter,

It is most true; true, I have married her-The very head and front of my offending 80 With his free duty recommends you thus, Hath this extent, no more. Rude am I in my speech.

And little blest with the soft phrase of And she in mine. peace;

For since these arms of mine had seven years' pith,

Till now some nine moons wasted, they have us'd

Their dearest action in the tented field: 85 And little of this great world can I speak More than pertains to feats of broil and battle:

And therefore little shall I grace my cause In speaking for myself. Yet, by your gracious patience

I will a round unvarnish'd tale deliver Of my whole course of love-what drugs, what charms.

What conjuration, and what mighty magic, For such proceedings am I charg'd withal,

I won his daughter.

A maiden never bold. Of spirit so still and quiet that her motion Blush'd at herself; and she-in spite of nature,

Of years, of country, credit, every thing-To fall in love with what she fear'd to look

It is a judgment maim'd and most im-

Or with some dram conjur'd to this effect, He wrought upon her.

Duke. To vouch this is no proof— Without more wider and more overt test Than these thin habits and poor likelihoods Of modern seeming do prefer against him.

1 Sen. But, Othello, speak. Did you by indirect and forced courses Subdue and poison this young maid's affections?

Or came it by request, and such fair question

As soul to soul affordeth?

I do beseech you, Send for the lady to the Sagittary, And let her speak of me before her father. If you do find me foul in her report, The trust, the office, I do hold of you

Not only take away, but let your sentence Even fall upon my life.

Duke. Fetch Desdemona hither. 120 Oth. Ancient, conduct them; you best know the place.

Exeunt Iago and Attendants. And, till she come, as faithful as to heaven I do confess the vices of my blood, So justly to your grave ears I'll present

How I did thrive in this fair lady's love, 125 Here comes the lady; let her witness it. 170

Duke. Say it, Othello.

Oth. Her father lov'd me, oft invited me; Still question'd me the story of my life From year to year—the battles, sieges, fortunes.

That I have pass'd.

I ran it through, even from my boyish days To th' very moment that he bade me tell it: Wherein I spake of most disastrous chances, Of moving accidents by flood and field; 135 Of hairbreadth scapes i' th' imminent deadly breach;

Of being taken by the insolent foe

And sold to slavery; of my redemption thence, And portance in my travel's history:

Wherein of antres wast and deserts idle. 140 Rough quarries, rocks, and hills whose heads touch heaven.

It was my hint to speak-such was the process:

And of the Cannibals that each other eat, The Anthropophagi, and men whose heads Do grow beneath their shoulders. This to

Would Desdemona seriously incline: But still the house affairs would draw her dispatch. She'd come again, and with a greedy ear

ing, means

To draw from her a prayer of earnest heart That I would all my pilgrimage dilate, Whereof by parcels she had something heard, But not intentively. I did consent, And often did beguile her of her tears. When I did speak of some distressful stroke That my youth suffer'd. My story being done, She gave me for my pains a world of sighs;

She swore, in faith, 'twas strange, 'twas passing strange:

'Twas pitiful, 'twas wondrous pitiful. She wish'd she had not heard it; yet she wish'd

That heaven had made her such a man. She thank'd me;

And bade me, if I had a friend that lov'd

I should but teach him how to tell my story,

And that would woo her. Upon this hint I spake :

She lov'd me for the dangers I had pass'd; And I lov'd her that she did pity them. This only is the witchcraft I have us'd.

Enter DESDEMONA, IAGO, and Attendants.

Duke. I think this tale would win my daughter too.

Good Brabantio,

Take up this mangled matter at the best. Men do their broken weapons rather use Than their base hands.

I pray you hear her speak. Bra. If she confess that she was half the wooer, Destruction on my head if my bad blame Light on the man! Come hither, gentie mistress.

Do you perceive in all this noble company Where most you owe obedience?

My noble father, I do perceive here a divided duty: To you I am bound for life and education: My life and education both do learn me How to respect you; you are the lord of duty-

I am hitherto your daughter: but here's my husband.

And so much duty as my mother show'd To you, preferring you before her father, So much I challenge that I may profess Due to the Moor, my lord.

God bu'y, I ha done. Please it your Grace, on to the state affairs-

I had rather to adopt a child than get it. Come hither, Moor:

I here do give thee that with all my

Which, but thou hast already, with all my heart

I would keep from thee. For your sake, iewel.

I am glad at soul I have no other child; For thy escape would teach me tyranny, To hang clogs on them. I have done, my

Duke. Let me speak like yourself, and lay a sentence

Which, as a grise or step, may help these lovers

Into your favour.

When remedies are past, the griefs are ended

By seeing the worst, which late on hopes depended.

To mourn a mischief that is past and gone Is the next way to draw new mischief on. What cannot be preserv'd when fortune takes,

Patience her injury a mockery makes. The robb'd that smiles steals something from the thief:

He robs himself that spends a bootless grief.

Bra. So let the Turk of Cyprus us beguile: We lose it not so long as we can smile. 217 And I a heavy interim shall support He bears the sentence well that nothing by his dear absence. Let me go with him. bears

But the free comfort which from thence he hears:

But he bears both the sentence and the sorrow

That to pay grief must of poor patience borrow.

These sentences, to sugar or to gall, Being strong on both sides, are equivocal. But words are words: I never yet did hear That the bruis'd heart was pierced through the ear.

I humbly beseech you proceed to th' affairs of state.

Duke. The Turk with a most mighty preparation makes for Cyprus. Othello, the fortitude of the place is best known to you: and though we have there a substitute of most allowed sufficiency, yet opinion, a sovereign mistress of effects, throws a more safer voice on you. You must therefore be content to slubber the gloss of your new fortunes with this more stubborn and boisterous expedition.

Oth. The tyrant custom, most grave senators,

Hath made the flinty and steel couch of war My thrice-driven bed of down. I do agnize

A natural and prompt alacrity I find in hardness; and would undertake This present wars against the Ottomites. Most humbly, therefore, bending to your

I crave fit disposition for my wife: Due reference of place and exhibition: With such accommodation and besort As levels with her breeding.

Duke. If you please. Be't at her father's.

Bra. I'll not have it so. 240

Oth. Nor I. Nor I. I would not there reside, To put my father in impatient thoughts By being in his eye. Most gracious Duke, To my unfolding lend your prosperous car, And let me find a charter in your voice 245 T' assist my simpleness.

Duke. What would you, Desdemona? Des. That I did love the Moor to live with him, downright violence and storm of fortunes

May trumpet to the world. My heart's subdu'd

Even to the very quality of my lord: I saw Othello's visage in his mind; And to his honours and his valiant parts Did I my soul and fortunes consecrate. So that, dear lords, if I be left behind, A moth of peace, and he go to the war, The rites for why I love him are bereft me, Oth. Let her have your voice.

Vouch with me, heaven, I therefore beg it nor

To please the palate of my appetite; Nor to comply with heat—the young affects In me defunct—and proper satisfaction; But to be free and bounteous to her mınd. And heaven defend your good souls that you think your serious and great business scant

For she is with me. No, when light-wing'd tovs

Of feather'd Cupid seel with wanton dull-

My speculative and offic'd instruments, 270 That my disports corrupt and taint my business.

Let huswives make a skillet of my helm. And all indign and base adversities Make head against my estimation!

Duke. Be it as you shall privately determine,

Either for her stay or going. Th' affair cries haste,

And speed must answer it. You must away to-night.

Des. To-night, my lord!

Duke. This night.

Oth. With all my heart. Duke. At nine i' th' morning here we'll meet again.

Othello, leave some officer behind, And he shall our commission bring to

With such things else of quality and respect

As doth import you. Oth. So please your Grace, my ancient; A man he is of honesty and trust.

To his conveyance I assign my wife, With what else needful your good Grace shall think

To be sent after me.

Duke. Let it be so. Good night to every one. [To Brabantio] And, noble signior,

If virtue no delighted beauty lack, 289 Your son-in-law is far more fair than black. 1 Sen. Adieu, brave Moor; use Desdemona well.

Bra. Look to her, Moor, if thou hast eyes to see

She has deceiv'd her father, and may thee. [Exeunt Duke, Senators, Officers, &c. Oth. My life upon her faith!—Honest Iago.

My Desdemona must I leave to thee. I prithee let thy wife attend on her; And bring them after in the best advantage. Come, Desdemona, I have but an hour Of love, of worldly matter and direction, To spend with thee. We must obey the

Rod. Iago!

Iago. What say'st thou, noble heart? Rod. What will I do, thinkest thou? Iago. Why, go to bed and sleep. Rod. I will incontinently drown myself.

Iago. Well, if thou dost, I shall never love thee after it. Why, thou silly gentleman!

Rod. It is sillness to live when to live is torment; and then have we a prescription to die when death is our physician.

Iago. O villainous! I ha look'd upon the world for four times seven years; and since I could distinguish betwixt a benefit and an injury, I never found a man that knew how to love himself. Eie I would say I would drown myself for the love of a guinea-hen, I would change my humanity with a baboon.

Rod. What should I do? I confess it is my shame to be so fond, but it is not in my virtue to amend it.

Iago. Virtue? A fig! 'Tis in ourselves that we are thus or thus. Our bodies are cur gardens to the which our wills are gardeners; so that if we will plant nettles or sow lettuce, set hyssop and weed up thyme. supply it with one gender of herbs or distract it with many, either to have it sterile with idleness of manur'd with industry-why, the power and corrigible authority of this lies in our wills. If the balance of our lives had not one scale of reason to poise another of sensuality, the blood and baseness of our natures would conduct us to most preposterous con-clusions. But we have reason to cool our raging motions, our carnal stings, our unbitted lusts; whereof I take this that you call love to be a sect or scion.

Rod. It cannot be. Iago. It is merely a lust of the blood and a permission of the will. Come, be a man. Drown thyself? Drown cats and blind puppies! I have profess'd me thy friend, and I confess me knit to thy deserving with cables of perdurable toughness. I could never better stead thee than now. Put money in thy purse; follow thou the wars; defeat thy favour with an usurp'd beard. I say, put money in thy purse. It cannot be long that Desdemona should continue her love to the Moor-put money in thy purse-nor he his to her: it was a violent commencement in her, and thou shalt see an answerable sequestration—put but money in thy purse. These Moors are changeable in their wills-fill thy purse with money. The food that to him now is as luscious as locusts shall be to him shortly as acerbe as the coloquintida. She must change for youth; when she is sated with his body, she will find the error of her choice. Therefore put money in thy purse. If thou wilt needs [Exeunt Othello and Desdemona. damn thyself, do it a more delicate way than drowning. Make all the money thou canst. If sanctimony and a frail vow betwixt an erring barbarian and a supersubtle Venetian be not too hard for my wits and all the tribe of hell, thou shall enjoy her; therefore make money. A pox a drowning thyself! 'Iss clean out of the way. Seek thou rather to be hang'd in compassing thy joy than to be drown'd and go without her.

Rod. Wilt thou be fast to my hopes, if I depend on the issue?

Tago. Thou ait sure of me—go make money. I have told thee often, and I retell thee again and again I hate the Moor. My cause is hearted: thine hath no less reason. Let us be conjunctive in our revenge against him. If thou canst cuckold him, thou dost thyself a pleasure, me a sport. There are many events in the womb of time which will be delivered. Traverse; go; provide thy money. We will have more of this to-morrow. Adieu.

Rod. Where shall we meet i' th' morning?

Iago. At my lodging.

Rod. I'll be with thee betimes.

Iago. Go to; farewell. Do you hear Roderigo?

Rod. What say you?

Iago. No more of drowning, do you hear

Rod. I am chang'd.

Iago. Go to; farewell. Put money enough in your purse.

Rod. I'll sell all my land. [Exit Roderigo Iago. Thus do I ever make my fool my purse;

For I mine own gain'd knowledge should profane

If I would time expend with such a snipe But for my sport and profit. I hate the Moor;

And it is thought abroad that 'twixt m' sheets

'Has done my office. I know not if't b true;

Yet I, for mere suspicion in that kind, 38 Will do as if for surety. He holds me well The better shall my purpose work on him Cassio's a proper man. Let me see now: To get his place, and to plume up my wil In double knavery. How, how? Let's see After some time to abuse Othello's ear That he is too familiar with his wife. 39

That he is too familiar with his wife. 39
He hath a person and a smooth dispose
To be suspected—fram'd to make women false.

The Moor is of a free and open nature
That thinks men honest that but seem to be so:

And will as tenderly be led by th' nose 3. As asses are.

I ha't—it is engender'd. Hell and night Must bring this monstrous birth to th world's light.

ACT TWO

Scene I. Cypius. A sea-port.

Enter Montano, Governor of Cyprus, with two other Gentlemen.

Mon. What from the cape can you discein at sea?

1 Gent. Nothing at all; it is a highwrought flood.

cannot 'twixt the heaven and the main Descry a sail.

Mon. Methinks the wind hath spoke aloud at land:

A fuller blast ne'er shook our battlements. If it ha ruffian'd so upon the sca, What ribs of oak, when mountains melt on them, Can hold the mortise? What shall we hear of this?

2 Gent. A segregation of the Turkish fleet. For do but stand upon the banning shore, The chidden billow seems to pelt the clouds:

The wind-shak'd surge, with high and monstrous mane.

Seems to cast water on the burning Bear, And quench the guards of th' ever-fired pole.

I never did like molestation view On the enchafed flood.

Mon. If that the Turkish fleet Be not enshelter'd and embay'd, they are drown'd:

It is impossible they bear it out.

Enter a third Gentleman.

3 Gent. News, lads! Your wars are done. The desperate tempest hath so bang'd the Turk

That their designment halts. A noble ship of Venice

Hath seen a grievous wieck and sufferance On most part of their fleet.

Mon. How! Is this true?
3 Gent. The ship is he

3 Gent. The ship is here put in, A Veronesa; Michael Cassio, 26 Licutenant to the warlike Moor Othello, Is come ashore: the Moor himself at sea.

And is in full commission here for Cypius.

Mon. I am glad on't; 'tis a worthy governor.

3 Gent. But this same Cassio, though he speak of comfort

Touching the Turkish loss, yet he looks sadly

And prays the Moor be safe; for they were parted

With foul and violent tempest.

Mon. Pray heaven he be; For I have serv'd him, and the man commands 35

Like a full soldier. Let's to the sea-side, ho! As well to see the vessel that's come in

As to throw out our eyes for brave Othello, Even till we make the main and th' aerial hlue

An indistinct regard.

3 Gent. Coine, let's do so: 40 For every minute is expectancy Of more arrivance.

Enter Cassio.

Cas. Thanks you, the valiant of this warlike isle.

That so approve the Moor. O. let the heavens

Give him defence against their elements, 45 For I have lost him on a dangerous sea!

Mon. Is he well shipp'd?

Cas. His bank is stoutly timber'd, and his

Of very expert and approv'd allowance: Therefore my hopes, not surfeited to death, Stand in bold cure.

[Within: A sail, a sail, a sail!

Enter a Messenger.

Cas. What noise?

Mess. The town is empty; on the brow o' th' sea

Stand ranks of people, and they crv 'A sail!

Cas. My hopes do shape him for the [A. shot. Governor.

2 Gent. They do discharge the shot of courtesy:

Our friend at least.

I pray you, sir, go forth, And give us truth who 'tis that is arriv'd. [Exit. 2 Gent. I shall.

Mon. But, good Lieutenant, is your general wiv'd? 60 Cas. Most fortunately: he hath achiev'd a maid That paragons description and wild fame; One that excels the quirks of blazoning pens. And in th' essential vesture of creation Does tire the ingener.

Re-enter second Gentleman.

Now, who has put in? 2 Gent. 'Tis one Iago, ancient to the General.

'Has had most favourable and happy speed.

Tempests themselves, high seas, and howling winds,

The gutter'd rocks, and congregated sands Traitors ensteep'd to enclog the guiltless keel,

As having sense of beauty, do omit Their mortal natures, letting go safely by The divine Desdemona.

What is she? Mon. She that I spake of-our great Captain's Captain,

Left in the conduct of the bold lago: Whose footing here anticipates our thoughts A se'nnight's speed. Great Jove, Othello guaid,

And swell his sail with thine own powerful breatn,

That he may bless this bay with his tall ship.

Make love's quick pants in Desdemona's arms.

Give renew'd fire to our extincted spirits, And bring all Cypius comfort!

Enter DESDEMONA, IAGO, EMILIA, RODE-RIGO, and Attendants.

O. behold. The tiches of the ship is come ashore! Ye men of Cyprus, let her have your knees. Hail to thee, lady! and the grace of heaven,

Before, behind thee, and on every hand, Enwheel thee round!

Des. I thank you, valiant Cassio. What tidings can you tell me of my lord? Cas. He is not yet alliv'd; nor know I

But that he's well, and will be shortly here. Des. O, but I fear! How lost you company?

Cas. The great contention of the sea and skies

Parted our fellowship.

IWithin: A sail, a sail! But haik- 'A sail!' [A shot. 2 Gent. They give their greeting to the citadel:

This likewise is a friend.

So speaks this voice. Cas. [Exit Gentleman. See for the news. Good ancient, you are welcome. Emilia] Welcome, mistress. ITO

Let it not gall your patience, good Iago, That I extend my manners; 'tis my breeding

That gives me this bold show of courtesy. [Kissing her.

Iago. Sir, would she give you so much of her lips

As of her tongue she oft bestows on me, You'd have enough.

Des. Alas, she has no speech!

I know too much Iago. I find it ave when I ha list to sleep.

Marry, before your ladyship, I grant, She puts her tongue a little in her heart And chides with thinking.

You ha little cause to say so. Emil. Iago. Come on, come on; you are pictures out a-doors, bells in your parlours, wildcats in your kitchens, saints in your injuries, devils being offended, players in your huswifery, and huswives in your beds.

Des. O, fie upon thee, slanderer! Iago. Nay, it is true, or else I am a Turk :

1123

You rise to play, and go to bed to work. 115 Emil. You shall not write my praise. Iago. No, let me not.

Des. What wouldst write of me if thou shouldst praise me?

Iago. O gentle lady, do not put me to't; For I am nothing if not critical.

Des. Come on, assay.—There's one gone to the harbour?

Iago. Ay, madam.

Des. I am not merry; but I do beguile The thing I am by seeming otherwise. Come, how wouldst thou praise me?

Iggo. I am about it; but, indeed, my invention comes from my pate as birdlime does from frieze-it plucks out brains and all. But my Muse labours, and thus she is

If she be fair and wise—fairness and wit, The one's for use, the other useth it.

Des. Well prais'd. How if she be black and witty?

a wit.

She'll find a white that shall her blackness hit.

Des. Worse and worse!

Emil. How if fair and foolish?

Iago. She never yet was foolish that was

For even her folly help'd her to an heir. Des. These are old fond paradoxes to make fools laugh i' th' alehouse. What miserable praise hast thou for her that's foul and foolish? Iago. There's none so foul, and foolish thereunto.

But does foul pranks which fair and wise ones do.

Des. O heavy ignorance! that praises the worst best. But what praise couldst thou bestow on a deserving woman indeed -one that, in the authority of her merits, did justly put on the vouch of very malice itself?

lago. She that was ever fair, and never proud;

Had tongue at will, and yet was never loud; Never lack'd gold, and yet went never

Fled from her wish, and yet said 'Now I

She that, being ang'red, her revenge being

Bade her wrong stay and her displeasure fly;

She that in wisdom never was so frail To change the cod's head for the salmon's tail;

She that could think, and ne'er disclose her

See suitors following, and not look behind: She was a wight, if ever such wight were-Des. To do what?

Iago. To suckle fools and chronicle small beer.

Des. O most lame and impotent conclusion! Do not learn of him, Emilia, though he be thy husband. How say you, Cassio? Is he not a most profane and liberal counsellor?

Cas. He speaks home, madam. You may relish him more in the soldier than in the scholar.

Iago. [Aside] He takes her by the palm. Ay, well said, whisper. With as little a web as this will I ensnare as great a fly as Cassio. Ay, smile upon her, do; I will gyve thee in thine own courtship. You say true: 'tis so, indeed. If such tricks as these strip you out of your lieutenantry, it had been better you had not kiss'd your three fingers so oft, which now again you are most apt to play the sir in. Very good; well kissed! and excellent courtesy! 'Tis so, indeed. Yet again your fingers to your lago. If she be black, and thereto have lips? Would they were clyster-pipes for your sake! [Trum! The Moor! I know his trumpet. [Trumpet within.

'Tis truly so. Cas. Des. Let's meet him, and receive him. Cas. Lo, where he comes!

Enter OTHELLO and Attendants.

Oth. O my fair wairior!

Des. My dear Othello! 180 Oth. It gives me wonder great as my content

To see you here before me. O my soul's joy! If after every tempest come such calms, May the winds blow till they have waken'd death.

And let the labouring bark climb hills of seas

Olympus-high and duck again as low As hell's from heaven. If it were now to die, Twere now to be most happy; for I fear My soul hath her content so absolute That not another comfort like to this Succeeds in unknown fate. Des. The heavens forbid But that our loves and comforts should increase Even as our days do grow!

Amen to that, sweet powers! I cannot speak enough of this content; It stops me here; it is too much of joy. 195 And this, and this, the greatest discords be [They kiss.

That e'er our hearts shall make! Iago. [Aside] O, you are well tun'd now! But I'll set down the pegs that make this music,

As honest as I am.

Oth. Come, let us to the castle.

News, friends: our wars are done; the Turks are drown'd. How do our old acquaintance of the isle?

1124

Honey, you shall be well desir'd in Cyprus: I have found great love amongst them. O my sweet.

I prattle out of fashion, and I dote In mine own comforts. I prithee, good courtesy. Iago.

Go to the bay, and disembark my coffers; Bring thou the Master to the Citadel; He is a good one, and his worthiness Does challenge much respect. Come.

Desdemona.

Once more well met at Cyprus.

[Exeunt all but lago and Roderigo. leaving] Do To one thou meet me presently at the harbour. [To Roderigol Come hither. If thou be'st valiant-as they say base men being in love have then a nobility in their natures more than is native to them-list me. The Lieutenant to-night watches on the court of guard. First, I must tell thee this: Desdemona is directly in love with him. 216

Rod. With him! Why, 'tis not possible. Iago. Lay thy finger thus, and let thy soul be instructed. Mark me with what violence she first lov'd the Moor, but for bragging and telling her fantastical lies. To love him still for prating?—let To love him still for prating?—let not thy discreet heart think it. Her eye must be fed; and what delight shall she have to look on the devil? When the blood is made dull with the act of sport, there should be-again to inflame it, and to give satiety a fresh appetite—loveliness in favour, sympathy in years, manners, beauties-all which the Moor is defective in. Now for want of these requir'd conveniences, her delicate tenderness will find itself abus'd, begin to heave the gorge, disrelish and abhor the Moor; very nature will instruct her in it, and compel her to some second choice. Now, sir, this granted—as it is a most pregnant and unforc'd position—who stands so eminent in the degree of this fortune as Cassio does? A knave very voluble; no further conscionable than in putting on the mere form of civil and humane seeming, for the better compassing of his salt and most hidden loose affection? Why, none; why, none. A slipper and subtle knave; a finder-out of occasion; that has an eye can stamp and counterfeit advantages, though true advantage never present itself; a devilish knave! Besides, the knave is handsome, young, and hath all those requisites in him that folly and green minds look after; a pestilent complete knave, and the woman hath found him already.

Rod. I cannot believe that in her; she's full of most blest condition.

lago. Blest fig's end! The wine she Till I am even'd with him, wife for wif drinks is made of grapes. If she had been Or failing so, yet that I put the Moor blest, she would never have lov'd the At least into a jealousy so strong Moor. Blest pudding! Didst thou not see her paddle with the palm of his hand? Didst not mark that?

Rod. Yes, that I did; but that was but

Iago. Lechery, by this hand; an index and obscure prelogue to the history of lust and foul thoughts. They met so near with their lips that their breaths embrac'd to-Villainous thoughts, Roderigo! When these mutualities so marshal the way, hard at hand comes the master and main exercise, th' incorporate conclusion. Pish! But, sii, be you rul'd by me; I have brought you from Venice. Watch you to-night; for your command, I'll lay't upon you. Cassio knows you not; I'll not be far from you. Do you find some occasion to anger Cassio, either by speaking too loud, or tainting his discipline, or from what other course you please, which the time shall more favourably minister.

Rod. Well. Iago. Sir, he's rash, and very sudden in choler, and haply with his truncheon may strike at you; provoke him that he may; for even out of that will I cause these of Cyprus to mutiny, whose qualification shall come into no true taste a ain but by the displanting of Cassio So shall you have a shorter journey to your desires by the means I shall then have to prefer them; and the impediment most profitably remov'd, without the which there were no expectation of our prosperity.

Rod. I will do this, if you can bring it to any opportunity.

Iago. I warrant thee. Meet me by and I must fetch his by at the citadel. necessaries ashore. Farewell.

Rod. Adieu. [Exit. Iago. That Cassio loves her, I do well believe it; That she loves him, 'tis apt and of great credit. The Moor, howbeit that I endure him not, Is of a constant, loving, noble nature;

And I dare think he'll prove to Desdemona A most dear husband. Now I do love her too ;

Not out of absolute lust, though peradventure

I stand accountant for as great a sin, But partly led to diet my revenge, For that I do suspect the lustful Moor Hath leap'd into my seat; the thought whereof Scene II. Cyprus. A street.

Enter Othello's Herald with a proclamation; People following.

Her. It is Othello's pleasure, our noble and valiant general, that, upon certain udings now arriv'd, importing the mere perdition of the Turkish fleet, every man put himself into triumph; some to dance, some to make bonfires, each man to what sport and revels his addiction leads him; for, besides these beneficial news, it is the celebration of his nuptial. So much was his pleasure should be proclaimed. All offices are open; and there is full liberty of feasting from this present hour of five till the bell have told eleven. Heaven bless the isle of Cyprus and our noble general Othello! [Ĕxeunt.

SCENE III Cyprus. The citadel.

Enter Othello, Desdemona, Cassio, and Attendants.

Oth. Good Michael, look you to the guard to-night.

Let's teach ourselves that honourable stop, Not to outsport discretion.

Cas. Iago hath direction what to do: But, notwithstanding, with my personal eve

Will I look to't.

Let me have speech with you. [To Desdemonal Come, my dear love,

The purchase made, the fruits are to ensue; That profit's yet to come twixt me and vou.

Good night. [Exeunt Othello, Desdemona, and Attendants.

Enter IAGO.

Cas. Welcome, Iago; we must to the Iago. Not this hour, Lieutenant; 'tis not yet ten a clock. Our general cast us 1126 thus early for the love of his Desdemona: who let us not therefore blame. He hath not yet made wanton the night with her: and she is sport for Jove.

Cas. She is a most exquisite lady. Iago. And, I'll warrant her, full of game. Cas. Indeed, she is a most fresh and delicate creature.

Iago. What an eye she has! Methinks it sounds a parley to provocation. Cas. An inviting eye; and yet methinks right modest.

lago. And when she speaks, is it not an alarm to love?

Cas. She is indeed perfection. Iago. Well, happiness to their sheets! Come, Lieutenant, I have a stoup of wine; and here without are a brace of Cyprus gallants that would fain have a measure to the health of the black Othello.

Cas. Not to-night, good Iago. I have very poor and unhappy brains for drinking: I could well wish courtesy would invent some other custom of entertainment.

Iago. O, they are our friends—but one cup; I'll drink for you.

Cas. I have drunk but one cup to-night, and that was craftily qualified too, and behold what innovation it makes here. I am unfortunate in the infirmity, and dare not task my weakness with any more.

Iago. What, man! 'Tis a night of levels. The gallants desire it.

Cas. Where are they? Iago. Here at the door; I pray you call them in.

Cas. I'll do't; but it dislikes me. [Exit. Iago. If I can fasten but one cup upon

With that which he hath drunk to night already,

He'll be as full of quarrel and offence As my young mistress' dog. Now my sick fool Roderigo,

Whom love hath turn'd almost 19 side outward,

To Desdemona hath to-night carous's Potations pottle deep; and he's to watch. Three else of Cyprus-noble swelling spirits.

That hold their honours in a wary distance, The very elements of this warlike isle-Have I to-night fluster'd with flowing cups, And they watch too. Now, 'mongst this flock of drunkards

Am I to put our Cassio in some action That may offend the isle-but here they come.

Re-enter Cassio with Montano, and Gentlemen, followed by Servant with wine.

If consequence do but approve my dream. My boat sails freely, both with wind and stream.

Cas. Fore God, they have given me a rouse already.

Mon. Good faith, a little one; not past a pint, as I am a soldier.

Iago. Some wine, ho!

[Sings] And let me the canakin clink, clink: And let me the canakin clink.

A soldier's a man;

O, man's life's but a span; Why, then, let a soldier drink-

Some wine, boys.

Cas. Fore God, an excellent song! Iago. I learn'd it in England, where indeed they are most potent in potting: your Dane, your German, and your swag-bellied Hollander-Drink, ho !- are nothing to your English.

Cas. Is your Englishman so expert in his drinking?

Iago. Why, he drinks you with facility your Dane dead drunk; he sweats not to overthrow your Almain; he gives your Hollander a vomit ere the next pottle can be fill'd.

Cas. To the health of our General! Mon. I am for it, Lieutenant; and I'll do vou justice.

Iago. O sweet England! King Stephen was and a worthy peer,

His breeches cost him but a crown; He held 'em sixpence all too dear,

With that he call'd the tailor lown. 85

He was a wight of high renown,

And thou art but of low degree. 'Tis pride that pulls the country down;

Then take thy auld cloak about thee-Some wine, ho!

Cas. Fore God, this is a more exquisite song than the other.

Iago. Will you hear't again?

Cas. No: for I hold him to be unworthy of his place that does those things. Well, God's above all: and there be souls must be saved, and there be souls must not be saved.

lago. It's true, good Lieutenant.

Cas. For mine own part—no offence to the General, nor any man of quality-I hope to be saved.

lago. And so do I too, Lieutenant. 100 Cas. Ay, but, by your leave, not before me; the Lieutenant is to be saved before the Ancient. Let's have no more of this; let's to our affairs. God forgive us our sins. Gentlemen, let's look to our business. Do not think, gentlemen, I am drunk. This is my ancient; this is my right hand, and this is my left hand. I am not drunk now; I can stand well enough, and I speak well enough. All. Excellent well.

Cas. Why, very well, then. You must not think, then, that I am drunk. [Exit.

Mon. To the platform, masters; come, let's set the watch.

Iago. You see this fellow that is gone before:

He is a soldier fit to stand by Casar And give direction; and do but see his vice;

'Tis to his virtue a just equinox, The one as long as th' other. 'Tis pity of

I fear the trust Othello puts him in.

On some odd time of his infirmity, Will shake this island.

Mon. But is he often thus? lago. 'Tis evermore the prologue to his sleep:

He'll watch the horologe a double set. If drink rock not his cradle.

Mon. It were well

The General were put in mind of it. Perhaps he sees it not, or his good nature Prizes the virtue that appears in Cassio, And looks not on his evils. Is not this true?

Enter RODERIGO.

Iago. [Aside to him] How, now, Roderigo! I pray you, after the Lieutenant; go. [Exit Roderigo.

Mon. And 'tis great pity that the noble Moor

Should hazard such a place as his own second

With one of an ingraft infirmity: It were an honest action to say

So to the Moor.

Not I, for this fair island: Iago. do love Cassio well: and would do much

To cure him of this evil.

[Within: Help, help! But hark, what noise?

Re-enter Cassio, driving in Roderigo.

Cas. Zounds, you rogue, you rascal! Mon. What's the matter, Lieutenant?

Cas. A knave teach me my duty! But I'll beat the knave into a twiggen bottle.

Rod. Beat me! Cas. Dost thou prate, rogue?

(Strikes him. Mon. Nay, good Lieutenant; I pray you, sir, hold your hand.

Cas. Let me go, sir, or I'll knock you o'er the mazard.

Mon. Come, come, you're drunk.

[They fight. Cas. Drunk! Iago. [Aside to Roderigo] Away, I say! Go out and cry a mutiny. [Exit Roderigo. Nay, good Lieutenant. God's will, gentlemen!

ho!-Lieutenant-sir-Montano-Help, SIF-

Here's a goodly watch Help, masters! IA bell rung. indeed! Who's that which rings the bell? Diablo.

The town will rise. God's will, Lieutenant, Of all that I do know; nor know I aught hold.

You'll be asham'd for ever.

Re-enter OTHELLO and Gentlemen, with weapons.

Oth. What is the matter here?

the death—He dies.

Oth. Hold, for your lives!

Hold, ho! Lieutenant-sir-Iago.

Montano-gentlemen-

Have you forgot all sense of place and duty? Hold! The General speaks to you: hold. hold, for shame!

Oth. Why, how now, he! From whence ariseth this?

I had rather ha this tongue cut from my mouth

Than it should do offence to Michael Cassio; Yet, I persuade myself, to speak the truth Shall nothing wrong him. Thi; it is. General.

Montano and myself being in speech, There comes a fellow crying out for help, And Cassio following him with determin'd sword

To execute upon him. Sir, this gentleman Steps in to Cassio and entreats his pause: Myself the crying fellow did pursue. Lest by his clamour, as it so fell out.

The town might fall in fright; he, swift of foot.

I ne'er might see before. When I came back.

For this was brief, I found them close together

At blow and thrust, even as again they were 230

When you yourself did part them. More of this matter can I not report; Mon. Worthy Othello, I am hurt to But men are men; the best sometimes forget.

Yet surely Cassio, I believe, receiv'd From him that fled some strange indignity

Which patience could not pass. Oth.

I know, Iago. Thy honesty and love doth mince this matter.

Making it light to Cassio. Cassio, I love thee:

But never more be officer of mine.

Re-enter Desdemona, attended.

Look if my gentle love be not rais'd up. I'll make thee an example.

Des. What is the matter, dear?

All's well now, sweeting; Oth. Come away to bed. [To Montano] Sir, for vour hurts. Myself will be your surgeon. Lead him off.

[Montano is led off. Iago, look with care about the town,

And silence those whom this vile brawl distracted.

Come. Desdemona: 'tis the soldiers' life To have their balmy slumbers wak'd with strife.

[Exeunt all but Iago and Cassio. Iago. What, are you hurt, Lieutenant?

Cas. Ay, past all surgery. Iago. Marry, God forbid!

Cas. Reputation, reputation, reputation! O, I have lost my reputation! I have lost the immortal part of myself, and what remains is bestial. My reputation, Iago, my reputation!

Iago. As I am an honest man, I had thought you had receiv'd some bodily wound; there is more sense in that than in reputation. Reputation is an idle and most false imposition; oft got without merit, and lost without deserving. You have lost no reputation at all, unless you repute yourself such a loser. What, man! there are more ways to recover the General again; you are but now cast in his mood, a punishment more in policy than in malice; even so as one would beat his offenceless dog to affright an imperious lion. Sue to him again, and he's yours.

Cas. I will rather sue to be despis'd than to deceive so good a commander with so slight, so drunken, and so indiscreet an officer. Drunk! And speak parrot! And squabble, swagger, swear! And discourse fustian with one's own shadow! O thou invisible spirit of wine, if thou hast no name to be known by, let us call thee devil!

Iago. What was he that you follow'd with your sword? What had he done to you?

Cas. I know not. Iago. Is't possible?

Cas. I remember a mass of things, but nothing distinctly; a quarrel, but nothing In any honest suit: she's fram'd as fruitful wherefore. O God, that men should put an! As the free elements. And then for her enemy in their mouths to steal away their brains! That we should with joy, pleasance, revel and applause, transform ourselves into beasts!

Iago. Why, but you are now well enough. How come you thus recovered?

Cas. It hath pleas'd the devil drunkenness to give place to the devil wrath. One unperfectness shows me another, to make me frankly despise myself.

Iago. Come, you are too severe a moraller. As the time, the place, and the condition of this country stands, I could heartily wish this had not so befall'n; but since it is as it is, mend it for your own good. 292

Cas. I will ask him for my place again: he shall tell me I am a drunkard. Had I as many mouths as Hydra, such an answer would stop them all. To be now a sensible man, by and by a fool, and presently a beast! O strange! Every inordinate cup is unblest, and the ingredience is a devil.

Iago. Come, come, good wine is a good familiar creature if it be well us'd; exclaim no more against it. And, good Lieutenant, I think you think I love you.

Cas. I have well approv'd it, sir.

Iago. You or any man living may be drunk at a time, man. I'll tell you what you shall do. Our General's wife is now the General-I may say so in this respect, for that he hath devoted and given up himself to the contemplation, mark, and denotement, of her parts and gracesconfess yourself freely to her; importune her help to put you in your place again: she is of so free, so kind, so apt, so blessed a disposition, she holds it a vice in her goodness not to do more than she is requested. This broken joint between you and her husband entreat her to splinter; and, my fortunes against any lay worth naming, this crack of your love shall grow stronger than it was before.

Cas. You advise me well. Iago. I protest, in the sincerity of love and honest kindness.

Cas. I think it freely; and betimes in the morning I will beseech the virtuous Desdemona to undertake for me. I am desperate of my fortunes if they check me

Iago. You are in the right. Good night, Lieutenant; I must to the watch.

Cas. Good night, honest Iago. (Exit. Iago. And what's he, then, that says I play the villain?

When this advice is free I give and honest, Probal to thinking, and indeed the course To win the Moor again? For 'tis most easy The inclining Desdemona to subdue

To win the Moor-were't to renounce his Myself awhile to draw the Moor agart baptism, a villain To counsel Cassio to this parallel course, Directly to his good? Divinity of hell! When devils will their blackest sins put on, They do suggest at first with heavenly shows,

As I do now; for whiles thus honest fool Plies Desdemona to repair his fortunes, And she for him pleads strongly to the Moor,

I'll pour this pestilence into his ear-That she repeals him for her body's lust; And by how much she strives to do him good

She shall undo her credit with the Moor. So will I turn her virtue into pitch; And out of her own goodness make the net That shall enmesh them all.

Enter Roderigo.

How now, Roderigo! Rod. I do follow here in the chase, not like a hound that hunts, but one that fills up the cry. My money is almost spent; I have been to-night exceedingly well cudgell'd: and I think the issue will be-I shall have so much experience for my pains as that comes to; and so, with no money at all, and a little more wit, return again to Venice.

ACT THREE

Scene I. Cyprus. Before the citadel.

Enter Cassio, with Musicians.

Cas. Masters, play here; I will content your pains. Something that's bliet; and bid 'Good morrow, General'. [Music.

Enter Clown.

Clo. Why masters, ha your instruments been in Naples, that they speak i' th' nose thus?

1 Mus. How, sir, how? Clo. Are these, I pray, call'd wind instruments?

1 Mus. Ay, marry, are they, sir.

Clo. O, thereby hangs a tail.

1 Mus. Whereby hangs a tale, sir?

Clo. Marry, sir, by many a wind instru-ment that I know. But, masters, here's money for you; and the General so likes your music that he desires you, of all loves, to make no more noise with it.

1 Mus. Well, sir, we will not. Clo. If you have any music that may not be heard, to't again; but, as they say, to hear music the General does not greatly

1 Mus. We have none such, sir. Clo. Then put up your pipes in your bag, Iago. How poor are they that have not for I'll away. Go; vanish into air; away.

Exeunt Musicians. Cas. Dost thou hear, my honest friend? Clo. No, I hear not your honest friend; 360 I hear you.

Cas. Prithee keep up thy quillets. There's a poor piece of gold for thee. If the gentlewoman that attends the General's wife be stirring, tell her there's one Cassio entreats her a little favour of speech. Will thou do this?

Clo. She is stirring, sir; if she will stir hither, I shall seem to notify unto her.

Cas. Do, good my friend. [Exit Clown.

Enter IAGO.

In happy time, lago. Iago. You have not been abed, then? 30 Cas. Why, no; the day had broke before we parted.

I have made bold, Iago, To send in to your wife: my suit to her Is that she will to virtuous Desdemona Procure me some access.

I'll send her to you presently: And I'll devise a mean to draw the Moor 36 Scene 11 OTHELLO

Out of the way, that your converse and business

May be more free.

Cas. I humbly thank you for't. [Exit Iagol I never knew

A Florentine more kind and honest.

Enter EMILIA.

Emil. Good morrow, good Lieutenant. I am sorry

For your displeasure; but all will sure That, I being absent, and my place be well.

The General and his wife are talking of it; And she speaks for you stoutly: the Moor replies

That he you hurt is of great fame in Cyprus And great affinity, and that in wholesome wisdom

He might not but refuse you; but he protests he loves you,

And needs no other suitor but his likings To take the safest occasion by the front To bring you in again.

Yet, I beseech you, If you think fit, or that it may be done. 51 Give me advantage of some brief discourse

With Desdemona alone. I will bestow you where you shall have Than give thy cause away.

To speak your bosom freely.

Cas. I am much bound to you. IExeunt.

Scene II. Cybrus. The citadei.

Enter OTHELLO, IAGO, and Gentlemen.

Oth. These letters give, Iago, to the p lot; And by him do my duties to the Senate. That done, I will be walking on the works; Repair there to me.

Well, my good lord, I'll do't. Iago. Oth. This fortification, gentlemen-shall we see't ?

Gent. We'll wait upon your lordship. [Exeunt.

SCENE III. Cyprus. The garden of the citadel.

Enter DESDEMONA, CASSIO, and EMILIA.

Des. Be thou assur'd, good Cassio, I will do

All my abilities in thy behalf.

Emil. Good madam. do. I warrant it grieves my husband As if the case were his.

doubt, Cassio,

But I will have my lord and you again As friendly as you were.

Bounteous madam. Cas. Whatever shall become of Michael Cassio. He's never any thing but your true servant.

Des. I know't-I thank you You do love my lord: You have known him long, and be you well assur'd

He shall in strangeness stand no farther off Than in a politic distance

Cas. Ay, but, lady,

That policy may either last so long, Or feed upon such nice and waterish diet. Or breed itself so out of circumstances, 16

I give thee warrant of thy place. Assure thee.

If I do vow a friendship, I'll perform it To the last article. My lord shall never rest;

I'll watch him tame, and talk him out of patience;

His bed shall seem a school, his board a shrift:

I'll intermingle everything he does With Cassio's suit. Therefore be merry, Cassio:

Pray you come in. For thy solicitor shall rather die

Enter OTHELLO and IAGO.

Emil. Madam, here comes my lord. Cas. Madam, I'll take my leave.

Des. Why, stay, and hear me speak. Cas. Madam, not now. I am very ill at Unfit for mine own purposes.

Des. Well, do your discretion. [Exit Cassio.

Iago. Ha! I like not that. Oth. What dost thou say? Iago. Nothing, my lord; or if-I know not what.

Oth. Was not that Cassio parted from my wife?

Iago. Cassio, my lord! No, sure, I cannot think it, That he would sneak away so guilty-like, 40

Seeing your coming. I do believe 'twas he. Oth.

Des. How now, my lord!

I have been talking with a suitor here, A man that languishes in your displeasure. Oth. Who is't you mean?

Des. Why, your lieutenant, Cassio. Good my lord,

If I have any grace or power to move you, Des. O, that's an honest fellow. Do not His present reconciliation take;

For if he be not one that truly loves you, That errs in ignorance, and not in cunning, I have no judgment in an honest face. 51 prithee call him back.

Went he hence now? Des. Yes, faith; so humbled

That he hath left part of his grief with me But I do love thee; and when I love thee To suffer with him. Good love, call him back.

Oth. Not now, sweet Desdemona; some other time.

Des. But shall't be shortly?

Oth. The sooner, sweet, for you. Des. Shall't be to-night at supper?

No. not to-night. Oth.

Des. To-morrow dinner, then? Oth. I shall not dine at home;

I meet the captains at the citadel. Des. Why, then, to-morrow night, or Tuesday morn,

On Tuesday noon or night, on Wednesday morn.

Or sue to you to do a peculiar profit To your own person. Nay, when I have a suit

Wherein I mean to touch your love indeed, It shall be full of poise and difficult weight, And fearful to be granted.

Oth. I will deny thee nothing. Whereon I do beseech thee grant me this, To leave me but a little to myself.

Des. Shall I deny you? No; farewell, my lord.

Oth. Farewell, my Desdemona. I'll come to thee straight.

Des. Emilia, come.—Be as your fancies teach you;

Whate'er you be, I am obedient.

Exeunt Desdemona and Emilia. Oth. Excellent wretch! Perdition catch my soul

not

Chaos is come again.

Iago. My noble lord!

Oth. What dost thou say, lago? Iago. Did Michael Cassio, when you woo'd my lady,

Know of your love?

Oth. He did, from first to last. Why dost thou ask? But for a satisfaction of my Iago.

thought-No further harm.

Why of thy thought, Iago? Oth. Iago. I did not think he had been acquainted with her. Oth. O, yes; and went between us very often.

Iago. Indeed!

Oth. Indeed? Ay, indeed. Discern'st thou aught in that?

Is he not honest?

Iago. Honest, my lord? Oth. Honest? Ay, honest. My ford, for aught I know.

Oth. What dost thou think?

Iago. Think, my lord? Oth. Think, my lord! By heaven, he echoes me. IΙO

As if there were some monster in his thought Too hideous to be shown. Thou dost mean something: I heard thee say but now thou lik'st not that. When Cassio left my wife. What didst not like? And when I told thee he was of my counsel In my whole course of wooing, thou criedst 'Indeed!'

And didst contract and purse thy brow together.

As if thou then hadst shut up in thy brain Or feed on nourishing dishes, or keep you Some horrible conceit. If thou dost love

> Show me thy thought. Iago. My lord, you know I love you.

Oth. I think thou dost: And for I know thou art full of love and honesty, And weigh'st thy words before thou giv'st them breath.

Therefore these stops of thine affright me the more:

For such things in a false disloyal knave 125 Are tricks of custom; but in a man that's just

They are close delations, working from the heart

That passion cannot rule.

For Michael Cassio, Iago. I dare presume I think that he is honest. Oth. I think so too.

Men should be that they seem; Iago.

Scene 31 OTHELLO

Or those that be not, would they might Who, certain of his fate, loves not his seem none! 131

Oth. Certain, men should be what they seem.

Iago. Why then, I think Cassio's an honest man.

Oth. Nay, yet there's more in this. 131 I prithee speak to me as to thy thinkings As thou dost juminate; and give thy worst of thoughts

The worst of words.

Good my lord, pardon me Iago. Though I am bound to every act of duty I am not bound to that all slaves are free Utter my thoughts. Why, say they are vile and false.

As where's that palace whereinto foul things Sometimes intrude not? Who has that breast so pure

But some uncleanly apprehensions

Keep leets and law-days, and in sessions sit With meditations lawful? 145

Oth. Thou dost conspire against thy friend, Iago, mak'st his ear

A stranger to thy thoughts.

I do beseech vou, Iago. Though I perchance am vicious in my guess As, I confess, it is my nature's plague 150 To spy into abuses, and oft my jealousy Shapes faults that are not-that your wisdom

From one that so imperfectly conjects. Would take no notice; nor build yourself a trouble

Out of his scattering and unsure observance.

It were not for your quiet nor your good, Nor for my manhood, honesty, or wisdom, To let you know my thoughts.

Oth. Zounds! What dost thou mean? Iago. Good name in man and woman, dear my lord.

Is the immediate jewel of their souls: 160 Who steals my purse steals trash; 'tis something, nothing;

'Twas mine, 'tis his, and has been slave to thousands:

But he that filches from me my good name

Robs me of that which not enriches him And makes me poor indeed.

Oth. By heaven, I'll know thy thoughts. Iago. You cannot, if my heart were in your hand:

Nor shall not, whilst 'tis in my custody. Oth. Ha!

Iago. O, beware, my lord, of jealousy; It is the green-ey'd monster which doth mock 170

The meat it feeds on. That cuckold lives in bliss wronger.

But, O, what damned minutes tells he o'er Who dotes, yet doubts, suspects, yet strongly loves!

Oth. O misery! Iago. Poor and content is rich, and rich enough,

But tiches fineless is as poor as winter To him that ever fears he shall be poor. Good God, the souls of all my tribe defend From realousy!

OthWhy, why is this? Think'sr thou I'd make a life of jealousy, To follow still the changes of the moon

With fresh suspicions? No: to be once in doubt

Is once to be resolv'd. Exchange me for a goat

When I shall turn the business of my soul To such exsufficate and blown surmises Matching thy interence. 'Tis not to make me jealous

To say my wife is fair, feeds well, loves company,

If thou but think'st him wrong'd, and Is free of speech, sings, plays, and dances well:

Where viitue is, these are more virtuous. Nor from mine own weak merits will I diaw

The smallest fear or doubt of her revolt: For she had eyes, and chose me. No, Iago; I'll see before I doubt; when I doubt, prove:

And, on the proof, there is no more but this-

Away at once with love or jealousy! Iago. I am glad of this: icr now I shall have reason

To show the love and duty that I bear you With franker spirit. Therefore, as I am bound,

Receive it from me. I speak not yet of proof

Look to your wife; observe her well with Cassio;

Wear your eyes thus, not jealous nor secure. I would not have your free and noble nature

Out of self-bounty be abus'd; look to't. I know our country disposition well: In Venice they do let God see the pranks They dare not show their husbands; their best conscience

Is not to leave't undone, but keep't unknown.

Oth. Dost thou say so?

Iago. She did deceive her father, marrying you;

And when she seem'd to shake and lear your looks.

She lov'd them most.

Oth. And so she did. Iago. Why, go to then!

1133

She that, so young, could give out such a Withany strong or vehement importunity: seeming.

To seel her father's eves up close as oak-He thought 'twas witchcraft. But I am Let me be thought too busy in my fearsmuch to blame; 215

I humbly do beseech you of your pardon

For too much loving you. I am bound to thee for ever. Oth. Iago. I see this hath a little dash'd your spirits. Oth. Not a jot, not a jot.

I'faith, I fear it has. I hope you will consider what is spoke 220 Comes from my love; but I do see you are mov'd.

I am to pray you not to strain my speech I'd whistle her off and let her down the To grosser issues nor to larger reach Than to suspicion.

Oth. I will not.

Should you do so, my lord, 225 Iago. My speech should fall into such vile success Which my thoughts aim'd not. Cassio's my worthy friend-

My lord, I see you are mov'd.

No, not much mov'd. Oth. I do not think but Desdemona's honest. Iago. Long live she so! and long live you to think so! Oth. And yet, how nature erring from Iago. Ay, there's the point: as—to be bold with you—

Not to affect many proposed matches Of her own clime, complexion, and degree, Whereto we see in all things nature tends-Foh! one may smell in such a will most rank,

Foul disproportion, thoughts unnatural. But pardon me—I do not in position Distinctly speak of her; though I may fear Her will, recoiling to her better judgment, May fall to match you with her country forms.

And happily repent.

Farewell, farewell. If more thou dost perceive, let me know more ;

Set on thy wife to observe. Leave me, lago.

Iago. My lord, I take my leave. [Going. Oth. Why did I marry? This honest creature doubtless Sees and knows more—much more than he unfolds.

Iago. [Returning] My lord, I would I might entreat your honour

To scan this thing no further; leave it to time.

Although 'tis fit that Cassio have his place, For, sure, he fills it up with great ability, Yet if you please to hold him off awhile, You shall by that perceive him and his 253

Much will be seen in that. In the mean time

As worthy cause I have to fear I am-And hold her free, I do beseech your honour.

Prerogativ'd are they less than the base: 'Tis destiny unshunnable, like death: 279 Even then this forked plague is fated to us When we do quicken. Look where she comes.

Re-enter DESDEMONA and EMILIA.

If she be false, O, then heaven mocks itself! I'll not believe it.

Des. How now, my dear Othello? Your dinner, and the generous islanders By you invited, do attend your presence.

Oth. I am to blame.

Des. Why do you speak so faintly? Are you not well?

Oth. I have a pain upon my forehead here.

Des. Faith, that's with watching; 'twill away again. Let me but bind it hard, within this hour

It will be well. [He puts the handkerchief from him, and she drops it.

Your napkin is too little. Let it alone. Come, I'll go in with you. Des. I am very sorry that you are not well.

[Exeunt Othello and Desdemona. Emil. I am glad I have found this napkin. This was her first remembrance from the token-

For he conjur'd her she shou d ever keep it-

That she reserves it evermore about her To kiss and talk to. I'll ha the work ta'en out.

And give't lago. What he'll do with it Heaven knows, not I; I nothing but to please his fantasy.

Re-enter IAGO.

Iago. How now! What do you here alone?

Emil. Do not you chide; I have a thing for you.

Iago. You have a thing for me? It is a common thing!

Emil. Ha!

Iago. To have a foolish wife.

me now

For that same handkerchief? What handkerchief?

Emil. What handkerchief! Why that the Moor first gave to Desdemona:

Iago. Hast stole it from her?

Emil. No, faith; she let it drop by Farewell the plumed troops, and the big negligence.

And to the advantage, I, being here, took't up.

Look, here it is.

A good wench! Give it me. Iago. Emil. What will you do with't, that you have been so earnest

To have me filch it?

Why, what's that to you? Iago. [Snatching it.

Emil. If it be not for some purpose of import, 320 Give me't again. Poor lady, she'll run mad

When she shall lack it.

Iago. Be not acknown on't; I have use for it.

[Exit Emilia. Go, leave me. I will in Cassio's lodging lose this napkin, And let him find it. Trifles light as air 326 Are to the jealous confirmations strong As proofs of holy writ; this may do something.

The Moor already changes with my poison. Dangerous concerts are in their natures poisons

Which at the first are scarce found to distaste But, with a little act upon the blood,

Burn like the mines of sulphur.

Re-enter OTHELLO.

My wayward husband hath a hundred Look where he comes! Not poppy, nor mandragora.

Woo'd me to steal it; but she so loves the Nor all the drowsy syrups of the world. 335 Shall ever medicine thee to that sweet sleep Which thou owed'st yesterday.

Oth. Ha! ha! false to me, to me?

Iago. Why, how now, General? No more of that.

Oth. Avaunt! be gone! Thou hast set me on the rack.

I swear 'tis better to be much abus'd 340 Than but to know 't a little.

How now, my lord! Iago. Oth. What sense had I in her stol'n hours of lust?

I saw 't not, thought it not, it harm'd not

I slept the next night well, fed well, was free and merry;

I found not Cassio's kisses on her lips. 345 He that is robb'd, not wanting what is stol'n, Emil. O, is that all? What will you give Let him not know't, and he's not robb'd at all.

Iago. I am sorry to hear this.

Oth. I had been happy if the general Pioneers and all, had tasted her sweet body. So I had nothing known. O, now for ever That which so often you did bid me steal. Farewell the tranquil mind! farewell content!

That makes ambition virtue! O, farewell! Farewell the neighing steed and the shull trump.

The spirit-stirring drum, th' ear-piercing fife.

The royal banner, and all quality, Pride, pomp, and circumstance, of glorious war !

And O ye mortal engines whose rude throats

Jove's dread Th' immortal clamours counterfeit,

Farewell! Othello's occupation's gone. Iago. Is't possible, my lord?

Oth. Villain, be sure thou prove my love a whore-

[Taking him by the throat. Be sure of it; give me the ocular proof; Or, by the worth of man's eternal soul, Thou hadst been better have been born a dog

Than answer my wak'd wrath.

Is't come to this? Iago. Oth. Make me to see't; or, at the least, so prove it

That the probation bear no hinge nor loop To hang a doubt on; or woe upon thy life! Iago. My noble lord-Oth. If thou dost slander her and torture

I did say so. Never pray more; abandon all remorse;

On horror's head horrors accumulate: Do deeds to make heaven weep, all earth amaz'd;

For nothing canst thou to damnation add Greater than that.

O grace! O heaven forgive me Have you a soul or Are you a man? sense ?-

God buy you; take mine office. O wretched fool.

That liv'st to make thine honesty a vice O monstrous world! Take note, take note. O world.

To be direct and honest is not safe.

I thank you for this profit; and from hence I'll love no friend, sith love breeds such offence.

Oth. Nay, stay. Thou shouldst be honest. fool,

And loses that it works for.

By the world. I think my wife be honest, and think she is not:

I think that thou art just, and think thou art not.

I'll have some proof. Her name, that was as fresh

As Dian's visage, is now begrim'd and black As mine own face. If there be cords or knives.

Poison, or fire, or suffocating streams. I'll not endure it. Would I were satisfied!

Iago. I see, sir, you are eaten up with passion :

I do repent me that I put it to you.

You would be satisfied?

Would! Nay, and I will. Oth. Iago. And may; but how—how satisfied, my lord?

Would you, the supervisor, grossly gape

Behold her topp'd?

Oth. Death and damnation! O! Iago. It were a tedious difficulty, I think, To bring them to that prospect. Damn them, then,

If ever mortal eyes do see them bolster More than their own! What then? How then? What shall I say? Where's satisfaction? It is impossible you should see this.

Were they as prime as goats, as hot as monkeys.

As salt as wolves in pride, and fools as gross As ignorance made drunk. But yet, I say, If imputation and strong circumstances 410 Which lead directly to the door of truth Will give you satisfaction, you might have't.

Oth. Give me a living reason she's disloyal.

Iago. I do not like the office; 414 But, sith I am enter'd in this cause so far, Whose icy current and compulsive course 1136

Prick'd to't by foolish honesty and love, I will go on. I lay with Cassio lately, And, being troubled with a raging tooth. I could not sleep.

There are a kind of men so loose of soul 420 That in their sleeps will mutter their affairs: One of this kind is Cassio.

In sleep I heard him say 'Sweet Desdemona,

Let us be wary, let us hide our loves '. And then, sir, would he gripe and wring my hand, Crv 'O sweet creature!' then kiss me hard,

As if he pluck'd up kisses by the roots. That grew upon my lips-then laid his leg Over my thigh—and sigh'd, and kiss'd, and then

Iago. I should be wise; for honesty's a Cried 'Cursed fate that gave thee to the Moor I

Oth. O monstrous! monstrous!

Iago. Nay, this was but his dream. Oth. But this denoted a toregone conclusion.

Iago. 'Tis a shrewd doubt, though it be but a dream,

And this may help to thicken other proofs That do demonstrate thinly.

Oth. I'll tear her all to pieces.

Iago. Nay, but be wise; yet we see nothing done;

She may be honest yet. Tell me but this: Have you not sometimes seen a handkerchief

Spotted with strawberries in your wife's hand?

Oth. I gave her such a one; 'twas my first gift. Iago. I know not that; but such a handkerchief-I am surge it was your wife's-did I to-day

See Cassio wipe his beard with.

If it be that-Iago. If it be that, or any that was hers. It speaks against her with the other proofs. Oth. O that the slave had forty thousand lives ! One is too poor, too weak for my revenge. Now do I see 'tis true. Look here, Iago-All my fond love thus do I blow to heaven. 'Tis gone.

Arise, black vengeance, from the hollow hell.

Yield up, O love, thy crown and hearted throne

To tyrannous hate! Swell, bosom, with thy fraught,

For 'tis of aspics' tongues.

Yet be content. I ago. Oth. O, blood, blood, blood! Iago. Patience, I say; your mind perhaps may change. Oth. Never, Iago. Like to the Pontic sea, Ne'er feels retiring ebb, but keeps due on To the Propontic and the Hellespont; 460 the doing it. Even so my bloody thoughts, with violent pace, Shall ne'er look back, ne'er ebb to humble love.

Till that a capable and wide revenge Swallow them up. [He kneels] Now, by youd marble heaven.

In the due reverence of a sacred vow I here engage my words.

Iago. [Kneeling] Do not rise yet. Witness, you ever-burning lights above, You elements that clip us round about, Witness that here Iago doth give up The execution of his wit, hands, heart, 470 To wrong'd Othello's service! Let him command. And to obey shall be in me remorse, What bloody business ever. They rise.

I greet thy love, Oth. Not with vain thanks, but with acceptance bounteous,

And will upon the instant put thee to't. 475 Within these three days let me hear thee How do you, Desdemona?

That Cassio's not alive.

My friend is dead: 'Tis done at your request. But let her live. Oth. Damn her, lewd minx! O, damn her, damn her! Come, go with me apart; I will withdraw To furnish me with some swift means of death

For the fair devil. Now art thou my lieutenant.

Iago. I am your own for ever. [Exeunt.

Scene IV. Cyprus. Before the citadel.

Enter DESDEMONA, EMILIA, and Clown.

Lieutenant Cassio lies ?

Clo. I dare not say he lies anywhere.

Des. Why, man? Clo. He's a soldier; and for one to say a soldier lies, 'tis stabbing.

Des. Go to. Where lodges he?

Clo. To tell you where he lodges is to tell you where I lie. Des. Can anything be made of this?

Clo. I know not where he lodges; and for me to devise a lodging, and say he lies here or he lies there, were to lie in mine own throat.

Des. Can you inquire him out, and be edified by report?

Clo. I will catechize the world for him; that is, make questions, and by them answer.

Des. Seek him; bid him come hither: tell him I have mov'd my lord on his behalf, and hope all will be well.

Clo. To do this is within the compass of man's wit; and therefore I will attempt Exit. Des. Where should I lose the handkerchief, Emilia?

Emil. I know not, madam. Des. Believe me, I had rather lose my purse Full of crusadoes; and but my noble Moor

Is true of mind, and made of no such baseness

As jealous creatures are, it were enough 25 To put him to ill thinking.

Ēmil. Is he not jealous? Des. Who, he? I think the sun where he was born Drew all such humours from him.

Enter OTHELLO.

Emil. Look where he comes. Des. I will not leave him now till Cassio Be call'd to him. How is't with you, my lord?

Oth. Well, my good lady. [Aside] O.

hardness to dissemble !-

Well, my good lord.

Oth. Give me your hand. This hand is moist, my lady.

Des. It yet hath felt no age nor known no sorrow. Oth. This argues fruitfulness and liberal heart: Hot, hot, and moist. This hand of yours requires sequester from liberty, fasting and praver.

Much castigation, exercise devout;

For here's a young and sweating devil here That commonly rebels. 'Tis a good hand, A frank one.

Des. You may indeed say so; Des. Do you know, sirrah, where the For 'twas that hand that gave away my heart.

Oth. A liberal hand. The hearts of old gave hands;

But our new heraldry is hands, not hearts. Des. I cannot speak of this. Come now, your promise.

Oth. What promise, chuck?

Des. I have sent to bid Cassio come speak with you.

Oth. I have a salt and sorry rheum offends me;

Lend me thy handkerchief.

Here, my lord. 50 Oth. That which I gave you.

I have it not about me. Des.

Oth. Not? Des. No, faith, my lord.

Oth. That's a fault. That handkerchief 55 Did an Egyptian to my mother give.

She was a charmer, and could almost read The thoughts of people: she told her, while she kept it,

OTHELLO Act 3

'Twould make her amiable, and subdue my father Entirely to her love; but if she lost it, 60 Or made a gift of it, my father's eye Should hold her loathely, and his spirits They eat us hungerly, and when they are should hunt After new fancies. She, dying, gave it me, And bid me, when my fate would have me wive, To give it her. I did so; and take heed on't; Make it a darling like your precious eye; To lose't or give't away were such perdition As nothing else could match. Is't possible? Des. Oth. 'Tis true. There's magic in the web of it. A sibyl that had numb'red in the world 70 The sun to course two hundred compasses In her prophetic fury sew'd the work; The worms were hallowed that did breed the silk; And it was dy'd in mummy which the skilful Conserv'd of maidens' hearts. I'faith! Is't true? 75 Des. Oth. Most veritable; therefore look to't Des. Then would to God that I had never seen't! Oth. Ha! Wherefore? Des. Why do you speak so startingly and Oth. Is't lost? Is't gone? Speak. Is 't out o' th' way ? Des. Heaven bless us! Oth. Sav you? Des. It is not lost; but what an if it were? Oth. How! Des. I say it is not lost. Oth. Fetch't, let me see't. Des. Why, so I can, sir, but I will not now. This is a trick to put me from my suit: Pray you let Cassio be receiv'd again. Oth. Fetch me the handkerchief: my mind misgives. Des. Come, come; You Il never meet a more sufficient man. Oth. The handkerchief! I pray talk me of Cassio. Des. Oth. The handkerchief! A man that all his time Hath founded his good fortunes on your love, Shar'd dangers with you-Oth. The handkerchief! Des. I'faith, you are to blame. Oth. Zounds! Exit Othello. Emil. Is not this man jealous? Des. I ne'er saw this before. Sure there's some wonder in this handkerchief; I am most unhappy in the loss of it.

Emil. 'Tis not a year or two shows us a man. They are all but stomachs, and we all but food: full. They belch us. Enter CASSIO and IAGO. Look you, Cassio and my husband. Iago. There is no other way; 'tis she must do 't. And, lo, the happiness! Go and importune her. Des. How now, good Cassio, what's the news with you? Cas. Madam, my former suit. beseech you That by your virtuous means I may again Exist, and be a member of his love Whom I, with all the office of my heart, Entirely honour. I would not be delay'd. If my offence be of such mortal kind That nor my service past, nor present soriows. Nor purpos'd ment in futurity, Can ransom me into his love again, But to know so must be my benefit: So shall I clothe me in a forc'd content, And shut myself up in some other course. To fortune's alms. Des. Alas, thrice-gentle Cassio! My advocation is not now in tune: My lord is not my lord; nor should I know him. Were he in favour as in humour alter'd. So help me every spirit sanctified, As I have spoken for you all my best. And stood within the blank of his displeasure For my free speech! You must awhile be patient. What I can do I will; and more I will Than for myself I dare: let that suffice you. Iago. Is my lord angry? He went hence but now. Emil. And certainly in strange unquietness. Iago. Can he be angry? I have seen the cannon When it hath blown his ranks into the air. And, like the devil, from his very arm Puff'd his own brother—and is he angry? Something of moment, then. I will go meet him. There's matter in't indeed, if he be angry. Des. I prithee do so. [Exit Iago. Nor of them look for such observancy As fits the bridal. Beshrew me much. Emilia.

I was-unhandsome warrior as I am-Arraigning his unkindness with my soul; But now I find I had suborn'd the witness, And he's indicted falsely.

Emil. Pray heaven it be state matters, as you think,

And no conception nor no jealous toy Concerning you.

Des. Alas the day, I never gave him cause!

Emil. But jealous souls will not be answer'd so;

They are not ever jealous for the cause. But jealous for they are jealous. 'Tıs a monster

Begot upon it self, born on it self.

Des. Heaven keep that monster from For I attend here; but I'll see you soon. Othello's mind!

Emil. Lady, amen. Des. I will go seek him. Cassio, walk hereabout. If I do find him fit, I'll move your suit,

And seek to effect it to my uttermost. Cas. I humbly thank your ladyship. 169 [Exeunt Desdemona and Emilia.

Enter BIANCA.

Bian. Save you, friend Cassio! What make you from home?

How is it with you, my most fair Bianca? I' faith, sweet love, I was coming to your house.

Bian. And I was going to your lodging, Cassio.

What, keep a week away? seven days and nights? Eightscore eight hours? and lovers' absent hours, More tedious than the dial eight score times?

O weary reckoning!

Cas. Pardon me. Bianca. I have this while with leaden thoughts been press'd;

But I shall in a more continuate time Strike off this score of absence. Sweet Bianca, [Giving her Desdemona's handkerchief. Take me this work out.

O Cassio, whence came this? This is some token from a newer friend: To the felt absence now I feel a cause. Is't come to this? Well, well.

Cas.

'Tis Throw your vile guesses in the devil's teeth. From whence you have them. You are jealous now

That this is from some mistress, some remembrance.

No, by my faith, Bianca.

Why, whose is it? Bian. Cas. I know not neither; I found it in my chamber.

I like the work well; ere it be demanded-As like enough it will-I would have it copied.

Take it, and do't: and leave me for this tıme.

Bian. Leave you! Wherefore?

Cas. I do attend here on the General; And think it no addition, nor my wish, 195

To have him see me woman'd. Bian. Why, I pray you?

Cas. Not that I love you not.

 $B\iota an.$ But that you do not love me. I pray you bring me on the way a little; And say if I shall see you soon at night.

Cas. 'Tis but a little way that I can bring

Bian. 'Tis very good; I must be circumstanc'd. [Exeunt.

ACT FOUR

Scene I. Cyprus. Before the citadel.

Enter OTHELLO and IAGO.

Iago. Will you think so?

Oth. Think so, Iago? What, Iago.

To kiss in private?

Oth. An unauthoriz'd kiss. Iago. Or to be naked with her friend abed

An hour or more, not meaning any harm? Oth. Naked abed, Iago, and not mean harm!

It is hypocrisy against the devil.

They that mean virtuously and yet do so, The devil their virtue tempts, and they tempt heaven.

Iago. So they do nothing, 'tis a venial slip:

But if I give my wife a handkerchief- 10 Oth. What then?

Iago. Why, then 'tis hers, my lord; and, being hers,

She may, I think, bestow't on any man. Oth. She is protectress of her honour too: May she give that?

Iago. Her honour is an essence that's not seen;

They have it very oft that have it not. But, for the handkerchief-

Oth. By heaven, I would most gladly have forgot it. Go to, woman! Thou said'st—O, it comes o'er my memory

As doth the raven o'er the infected house, Boding to all-he had my handkerchief. Iago. Ay, what of that?

Oth. That's not so good now.

Ĭago. What If I had said I had seen him do you wrong? Or heard him say-as knaves be such abroad.

Who having, by their own importunate suit.

Or voluntary dotage of some mistress, Convinced or supplied them, cannot choose But they must blab-

Oth. Hath he said anything? Iago. He hath, my lord; but be you well assur'd.

No more than he'll unswear.

What hath he said? Oth. Iago. Faith, that he did-I know not what he did.

Oth. What? what? Iago. Lie-

With her? Oih.

With her, on her; what you will. Iago. We say Oth. Lie with her-lie on her? lie on her when they belie her. Lie with her. Zounds, that's fulsome. Handkerchief -confessions-handkerchief! To confess, and be hang'd for his labour-first, to be hang'd, and then to confess. I tremble at it. Nature would not invest herself in such shadowing passion without some instruction. It is not words that shakes me thuspish!—noses, ears, and lips. Is't possible? Confess! Handkerchief! O devil!

[Falls in a trance.

Iago. Work on, My medicine, work. Thus credulous fools are caught;

And many worthy and chaste dames even thus.

All guiltless, meet reproach. my lord!

My lord, I say! Othello!

Enter Cassio.

How now, Cassio! Cas. What's the matter?

lago. My lord is fall'n into an epilepsy. 50 This is his second fit; he had one yesterday.

Cas. Rub him about the temples.

No, forbear. The lethargy must have his quiet course; If not, he foams at mouth, and by and by Breaks out to savage madness. Look, he stirs.

Do you withdraw yourself a little while; He will recover straight; when he is gone.

I would on great occasion speak with you. [Exit Cassic.

How is it, General? Have you not hurt your head?

Oth. Dost thou mock me?

I mock you? No, by heaven! Iago. Would you would bear your fortune like a man!

Oth. A horned man's a monster and a beast.

Iago. There's many a beast then in a populous city,

And many a civil monster.

Oth. Did he contess it?

Good sir, be a man; 65 Iago. Think every bearded fellow that's but vok'd

May draw with you; there's millions now alive

That nightly lie in those unproper beds Which they dare swear peculiar: your case is better.

O, 'tis the spite of hell, the fiend's archmock.

To lip a wanton in a secure couch. And to suppose her chaste! No. let me know;

And knowing what I am, I know what she shall be.

Oth. O, thou art wise; 'tis certain. Iago. Stand you awhile apart.

Confine yourself but in a patient list. Whilst you were here o'erwhelmed with vour grief-

A passion most unsuiting such a man-Cassio came hither: I shifted him away. And laid good 'scuse upon your ecstasy: Bade him anon return, and here speak with me; The which he promis'd. Do but encave yourself.

And mark the fleers, the gibes, and notable scorns,

That dwell in every region of his face; For I will make him tell the tale anew-What, ho! Where, how, how oft, how long ago, and when,

He hath, and is again to cope your wife. I say, but mark his gesture. patience:

Or I shall say you are all in all in spleen, And nothing of a man.

Oth. Dost thou hear, Iago? I will be found most cunning in my patience:

But-dost thou hear?-most bloody. Lago. That's not amiss; But yet keep time in all. Will you with-[Othello withdraws. draw?

Now will I question Cassio of Bianca, A huswife that by selling her desires Buys herself bread and clothes; it is a creature That dotes on Cassio, as 'tis the strumpet's plague

To beguile many and be beguil'd by one. He, when he hears of her, cannot restrain From the excess of laughter.

*60

Re-enter Cassio.

Here he comes. As he shall smile Othello shall go mad; 100 And his unbookish jealousy must construe Poor Cassio's smiles, gestures, and light behaviours.

Quite in the wrong. How do you now. Lieutenant?

Cas. The worser that you give me the addition

Whose want even kills me.

Iago. Ply Desdemona well, and you are sure on't.

Now, if this suit lay in Bianca's dower,

How quickly should you speed!

Alas, poor cartiff! Cas. Oth. Look how he laughs already! Iago. I never knew a woman love man so. Cas. Alas, poor rogue! I think, i' faith, she loves me.

Oth. Now he denies it faintly, and laughs it out.

Iago. Do you hear, Cassio?

Now he importunes him Oth. To tell it o'er. Go to; well said, well said. Iago. She gives it out that you shall marry her.

Do you intend it?

Cas. Ha, ha, ha!

Oth. Do you triumph, Roman? Do you

Cas. I marry her! What, a customer! I prithee bear some charity to my wit; do not think it so unwholesome. Ha, ha, ha!

Oth. So, so, so-they laugh that Iago. Faith, the cry goes that you marry her.

Cas. Prithee say true.

Iago. I am a very villain else. Oth. Ha you scor'd me? Well.

Cas. This is the monkey's own giving out: she is persuaded I will marry her, out of her own love and flattery, not out of my promise.

Oth. Iago beckons me; now he begins the story.

Cas. She was here even now; she haunts me in every place. I was t'other day talking on the sea-bank with certain Venetians, and thither comes the bauble-by this hand, she falls me thus about my neck.

Oth. Crying 'O dear Cassio!' as it were:

his gesture imports it.

Cas. So hangs, and lolls, and weeps upon me; so hales, and pulls me. Ha, ha, ha! Oth. Now he tells how she pluck'd him to my chamber. O, I see that nose of yours, but not that dog I shall throw't to. Cas. Well, I must leave her company.

Enter BIANCA.

Iago. Before me! Look where she comes.

Cas. 'Tis such another fitchew! marry, a perfum'd one. What do you mean by this haunting of me?

Bian. Let the devil and his dam haunt What did you mean by that same vou. handkerchief you gave me even now? I was a fine fool to take it. I must take out the whole work-a likely piece of work that you should find it in your chamber and know not who left it there! This is some minx's token, and I must take out the work? There—give it your hobbyhorse. Wheresoever you had it, I'll take out no work on't.

Cas. How now, my sweet Bianca! how now! how now!

Oth. By heaven, that should be my handkerchief!

Bian. An you'll come to supper to-night, you may; an you will not, come when you are next prepar'd for. [Exit.

Iago. After her, after her. Cas. Faith, I must; she'll rail i' th' street else.

Iago. Will you sup there? Cas. Faith, I intend so.

Iago. Well, I may chance to see you; for

I would very fain speak with you. Cas. Prithee come; will you?

Iago. Go to; say no more. [Exit Cassio. Oth. [Coming forward] How shall I murder him, Iago?

Iago. Did you perceive how he laugh'd at his vice ?

Oth. O Iago!

Iago. And did you see the handkerchief?

Oth. Was that mine?

lago. Yours, by this hand. And to see how he prizes the foolish woman your wife! She gave it him, and he hath giv'n it his whore.

Oth. I would have him nine years akilling. A fine woman! a fair woman! a sweet woman!

Iago. Nay, you must forget that. Oth. Ay, let her rot, and perish, and be damn'd to-night; for she shall not live. No, my heart is turn'd to stone; I strike it, and it hurts my hand. O, the world hath not a sweeter creature; she might lie by an emperor's side and command him tasks.

Iago. Nay, that's not your way. Oth. Hang her! I do but say what she is: so delicate with her needle, an admirable musician—O, she will sing the savageness out of a bear !—of so high and plenteous wit and invention. Iago. She's the worse for all this.

Oth. O, a thousand, a thousand timesand then of so gentle a condition.

Iago. Ay, too gentle. Oth. Nay, that's certain. But yet the pity of it, Iago! O, Iago, the pity of it, For, as I think, they do command him lago! lago. If you be so fond over her iniquity. give her patent to offend: for, if it touch not you, it comes near nobody. Oth. I will chop her into messes. Cuckold me! Iago. O, 'tis foul in her. Oth. With mine officer! Iago. That's fouler. Oth. Get me some poison, Iago-this night. I'll not expostulate with her, lest her body and beauty unprovide my mind again-this night, lago. Iago. Do it not with poison; strangle her in her bed, even the bed she hath contaminated. Oth. Good, good; the justice of it pleases; very good. lago. And for Cassio-let me be his undertaker. You shall hear more by midnight. Oth. Excellent good. IA trumbet. What trumpet is that same? Iago. I warrant, something from Venice. Enter Lodovico, Despemona, and Attendants. 'Tis Lolovico-this comes from the Duke. See, your wife 's with him. Lod. God save thee, worthy General! Oth. With all my heart, sir Lod. The Duke and Senators of Venice greet you. [Gives him a backet. Oth. I kiss the instrument of their 10 bens the backet and reads. pleasures. Des. And what's the news, good cousin Lodovico? Iago. I am very glad to see you, signior; Welcome to Cyprus. Lod. I thank you. How does Lieutenant Cassio? Lives, sir. Iago. and my lord An unkind breach; but you shall make all well. Oth. Are you sure of that? Des. My ford? Oth. [Reads] 'This fail you not to do as you will '-Lod. He did not call; he's busy in the paper. Is there division 'twixt thy lord and Cassio? Des. A most unhappy one. I would do much T' atone them, for the love I bear to Cassio. Oth. Fire and brimstone ! Des. My lord? Oth. Are you wise? 230 Des. What, is he angry? Lod. May be the letter mov'd him;

[Act 4 home. Deputing Cassio in his government. Des. By my troth, I am glad on't. Oth. Indeed! Des. My lord? Oth. I am glad to see you mad. Des. Why, sweet Othello? Oth. Devil! [Striking her. Des. I have not deserv'd this. Lod. My lord, this would not be believ'd in Venice. Though I should swear I saw't. 'Tis very much. Make her amends; she weeps. O devil, devil! 240 OH. If that the earth could teem with woman's tears. Each drop she falls would prove a crocodile. Out of my sight! I will not stay to offend you. Des. Going. Lod. Truly, an obedient lady. 244 I do beseech your loidship, call her back. Oth. Mistress! Des. My lord? Oth. What would you with her, sir? Lod. Who, I, my lord? Oth. Ay; you did wish that I would make her turn. Sir, she can turn, and turn, and yet go on. And turn again; and she can weep, sir, weep; And she's obedient, as you say, obedient, Very obedient .- Proceed you in your Concerning this, sir,-O, well-painted passion !-I am commanded home. Get you away: I'll send for you anon.—Sir, I obey the mandate, And will return to Venice.—Hence, avaunt! Exit Desdemona. Des. Cousin, there's fall'n between him Cassio shall have my place. And, sir, tonight. I do entreat that we may sup together. You are welcome, sir, to Cyprus.-Goats and monkeys! Lod. Is this the noble Moor whom our full Senate Call all in all sufficient? Is this the nature Whom passion could not shake, whose solid virtue The shot of accident nor dart of chance Could neither graze nor pierce? He is much chang'd. Iago. Lod. Are his wits safe? Is he not light of brain? Iggo. He's that he is. I may not breathe my censure. What he might be, if what he might he is not, I would to heaven he were!

What, strike his wife!

Lod.

Iago. Faith, that was not so well; yet would I knew 270
That stroke would prove the worst!

Lod. Is it his use?
Or did the letters work upon his blood,
And new-create this fault?

Iago. Alas, alas!
It is not honesty in me to speak

What I have seen and known. You shall observe him; 275
And his own courses will denote him so

And his own courses will denote him so That I may save my speech. Do but go after.

And mark how he continues.

Lod. I am sorry that I am deceiv'd in him. [Exeunt.

Scene II. Cyprus. The citadel.

Enter Othello and Emilia.

Olh. You have seen nothing, then? Emil. Nor ever heard, nor ever did suspect.

Oth. Yes, you have seen Cassio and she together.

Emil. But then I saw no harm, and then I heard

Each syllable that breath made up between them. 5

Oth. What, did they never whisper?
Emil. Never, my lord.
Oth. Nor send you out o' th' way?
Emil. Never.

Oth. To fetch her fan, her gloves, her mask, nor nothing?

Emil. Never, my lord.

Oth. That's strange.

Emil. I durst, my lord, to wager she is honest.

Lay down my soul at stake. If you think other,

Remove your thought—it doth abuse your bosom.

If any wretch have put this in your head, 15 Let heaven requite it with the serpent's curse;

For if she be not honest, chaste, and true,

There's no man happy; the purest of their wives

Is foul as slander.

whore.

Oth. Bid her come hither. Go. [Exit Emilia. She says enough; yet she's a simple bawd That cannot say as much. This is a subtle

A closet-lock-and-key of villainous secrets; And yet she'll kneel and pray; I have seen her do't.

Re-enter EMILIA with DESDEMONA.

Des. My lord, what is your will?
Oth. Pray you chuck, come hither.
Des. What is your pleasure?

Qth. Let me see your eyes; look in my face.

Des. What horrible fancy's this?

Oth. [To Emilia] Some of your function, mistress:

Leave procreants alone, and shut the door;

Cough, or cry hem, if any body come. 29 Your mystery, your mystery; nay, dispatch. [Exit Emilia.

Des. Upon my knees, what doth your speech import?

I understand a fury in your words, But not the words.

Oth. Why, what art thou?

Des. You wife, my lord; your true and loyal wife.

Oth. Come, swear it, damn thyself; lest, being like one of heaven, the devils themselves should fear to seize thee; therefore be double-damn'd—swear thou art honest.

Des. Heaven doth truly know it.

Oth. Heaven truly knows that thou art false as hell.

Des. To whom, my lord? With whom? How am I false?

Oth. Ah, Desdemona! away! away! away!

Des. Alas the heavy day! Why do you weep?

Am I the motive of these tears, my lord? If haply you my father do suspect

An instrument of this your calling back,
Lay not your blame on me; if you have lost him,

Why, I have lost him too.

Oih. Had it pleas'd heaven To try me with affliction; had they rain'd All kind of sores and shames on my bare head.

Steep'd me in poverty to the very lips, Given to captivity me and my utmost hopes.

I should have found in some place of my soul

A drop of patience; but, alas, to make me The fixed figure for the time of scorn 55 To point his slow unmoving finger at!— O, O!

Yet could I bear that too; well, very well; But there, where I have garner'd up my heart.

Where either I must live or bear no life, The fountain from the which my current

Or else dries up—to be discarded thence! Or keep it as a cistern for foul toads

To knot and gender in! Turn thy complexion there,

Patience, thou young and rose-lipp'd cherubin—

Ay, here, look grim as hell.

65

Des. I hope my noble lord esteems me honest.

OTHELLO Act 4

shambles.

That quicken even with blowing. O thou And call thy husband hither. weed

Who art so lovely fair and smell'st so sweet That the sense aches at thee!

Would thou had'st never been born! Des. Alas, what ignorant sin have I committed?

Oth. Was this fair paper, this most goodly book.

Made to write 'whore 'upon? What committed!

Committed! O thou public commoner! I should make very torges of my cheeks as That would to cinders burn up modesty, Did I but speak thy deeds. What committed!

Heaven stops the nose at it, and the moon winks:

The bawdy wind, that kisses all it meets, Is hush'd within the hollow mine of earth And will not hear it. What committed! 8. Impudent strumpet!

By heaven, you do me wrong Des. Oth. Are not you a strumpet?

No, as I am a Christian If to preserve this vessel for my lord From any other foul unlawful touch

Be not to be a strumpet, I am none. Oth. What, not a whore?

Des. No, as I shall be sav'd. Oth. Is't possible?

Des. O, heaven forgive us!

Oth. I cry you mercy, then. I took you for that cunning whore of Ýenice

That married with Othello.—You, mistress, That have the office opposite to Saint Peter

And keeps the gate of hell!

Re-enter EMILIA.

You, you, av you! We ha done our course; there's money for your pains.

I pray you turn the key, and keep our Exit. counsel.

Emil. Alas, what does this gentleman conceive?

How do you, madam? How do you, my good lady?

Des. Faith, half asleep.

Emil. Good madam, what's the matter with my lord? Des. With who? TOC

Emil. Why, with my lord, madam. Des. Who is thy lord?

Emil. He that is yours, sweet lady. Des. I have none. Do not talk to me, Emilia;

I cannot weep, nor answers have I none But what should go by water. Prithee, to-night

Olh. O, ay; as summer flies are in the Lay on my bed my wedding sheets-remember:

Emil. Here's a change indeed! [Exit. Des. 'Tis meet I should be us'd so, very meet.

How have I been behav'd, that he might stick

The small'st opinion on my great'st abuse?

Re-enter EMILIA with IAGO.

Iago. What is your pleasure, madam? How is't with you?

Des. I cannot tell. Those that do teach young babes

Do it with gentle means and easy tasks. He might have child me so; for, in good faith. I am a child to chiding.

Iago. What is the matter, lady? Emil. Alas, Iago, my lord hath so bewhou'd her,

Thrown such despite and heavy terms upon

That true hearts cannot bear it.

Des. Am I that name, Iago?

What name, fair lady? Des. Such as she says my lord did say I was.

Emil. He call'd her whose. A beggar in his drink

Could not have laid such terms upon his callat.

Iago. Why did he so?

Des. I do not know: I am sure I am none such.

Iago. Do not weep, do not weep. Alas, the day!

Emil. Hath she forsook so many noble matches. Her father, and her country, and her friends. To be call'd whore? Would it not make one ween? Des. It is my wretched fortune.

Beshrew him for't! Iago. How comes this trick upon him?

Des. Nay, heaven doth know. Emil. I will be hang'd if some eternal villain.

Some busy and insinuating rogue, Some cogging, cozening slave, to get some office. Have not devis'd this slander; I'll be hang'd else.

lago. Fie, there is no such man; it is impossible.

Des. If any such there be, heaven pardon him!

Emil. A halter pardon him! and hell gnaw his bones!

Why should he call her whore? Who keeps her company?

What place, what time, what form, what likelihood?

The Moor's abus'd by some outrageous up in peace what already I have foolishly knave.

Some base notorious knave, some scurvy fellow.

O heaven, that such companions thou'ds: unfold.

And put in every honest hand a whip To lash the rascals naked through the world Even from the east to the west!

Speak within door. Emil. O, fie upon them! Some such squire he was

That turn'd your wit the seamy side without

And made you to suspect me with the Moor. Iago. You are a tool: go to.

Des-O God! Iago.

What shall I do to win my lord again? 150 Good friend, go to him; for, by this light of heaven.

I know not how I lost him. Here I kneel. If e'er my will did trespass 'gainst his love,

Either in discourse of thought or actual deed,

Or that mine eyes, mine ears, or any sense Delighted them in any other form,

Or that I do not yet, and ever did.

And ever will-though he do shake me off To beggarly divorcement—love him dearly, Comfort forswear me! Unkindness may do much:

And his unkindness may defeat my life, But never taint my love. I cannot say 'whore';

It does abhor me now I speak the word; To do the act that might the addition earn, Not the world's mass of vanity could make Iago. I pray you be content; 'tis but his humour.

The business of the state does him offence, And he does chide with you.

Des. If 'twere no other!

It is but so, I warrant. Iago. [Trumpets within.

Hark how these instruments summon you to supper.

The messengers of Venice stay the meat. Go in, and weep not; all things shall be well.

[Exeunt Desdemona and Emilia.

Enter RODERIGO.

How now, Roderigo!

Rod. I do not find that thou deal'st justly with me.

Iago. What in the contrary?

Rod. Every day thou daff'st me with some device, Iago; and rather, as it seems to me now, keep'st from me all conveniency than suppliest me with the least advantage of hope. I will indeed, no longer endure it; nor am I yet persuaded to put suffer'd.

Iago. Will you hear me, Roderigo? Rod. Faith, I have heard too much; for your words and performances are no kin together.

Iago. You charge me most unjustly. Rod. With nought but truth. wasted myself out of my means. The jewels you have had from me to deliver to Desdemona would half have corrupted a votarist. You have told me she hath receiv'd them, and return'd me expectations and comforts of sudden respect and acquaintance; but I find none.

lago. Well; go to; very well.

Rod. Very well! go to! I cannot go to, man, nor 'tis not very well; by this hand I say 'tis very scurvy, and begin to find myself fopt in it.

Iago. Very well. Rod. I tell you 'tis not very well. I will make myself known to Desdemona. If she will return me my jewels. I will give over my suit and repent my unlawful solicitation; if not, assure yourself I will seek satisfaction of you.

Iago. You have said now. Rod. Ay, and said nothing but what I protest intendment of doing.

Iago. Why, now I see there's mettle in thee: and even from this instant do build on thee a better opinion than ever before. Give me thy hand, Roderigo. Thou hast taken against me a most just exception; but yet, I protest, I have dealt most directly in thy affair.

Rod. It hath not appear'd. Iago. I grant, indeed, it hath not appear'd; and your suspicion is not without wit and judgment. But, Roderigo, if thou hast that in thee indeed, which I have greater reason to believe now than purpose, courage, and ever—I mean valour-this night show it; if thou the next night following enjoy not Desdemona, take me from this world with treachery, and devise engines for my life.

Rod. Well, what is it? Is it within reason and compass?

Iago. Sir, there is especial commission come from Venice to depute Cassio in Othello's place.

Rod. Is that true? Why, then Othello and Desdemona return again to Venice.

Iago. O, no; he goes into Mauritania, and taketh away with him the fair Desdemona, unless his abode be linger'd here by some accident; wherein none can be so determinate as the removing of Cassio. 226

Rod. How do you mean removing of him? Iago. Why, by making him uncapable of Othello's place—knocking out his brains. Rod. And that you would have me to do?

lago. Ay, an if you dare do yourself a profit and right. He sups to-night with a harlotry, and thither will I go to him—he knows not yet of his honourable fortune. If you will watch his going thence, which I will fashion to fall out between twelve and one, you may take him at your pleasure. I will be near to second your attempt, and he shall fall between us. Come, stand not an 12'd at it, but go along with me; I will show you such a necessity in his death that you shall think yourself bound to put it on him. It is now high supper-time, and the night grows to waste. About it. 241 Rod. I will hear further reason for this.

lago. And you shall be satisfied. [Exeunt.

Scene III. Cyprus. The citadel.

Enter Othello, Desdemona, Lodoyico, Emilia, and Attendants.

Lod. I do beseech you, sir, trouble yourself no further.

Oth. O, pardon me; 'tw ll do me good to walk.

Lod. Madam, good night; I humbly thank your ladyship.

Des. Your honour is most welcome. Oth. Will you walk, sir? O, Desdemona

Des. My lord?
Oth. Get you to bed on th' instant;

will be return'd forthwith. Dispatch your attendant there. Look 't be done.

Des. I will, my lord. [Exeunt Othello Lodovico, and Attendants Emil. How goes it now? He looks gentle than he did.

Des. He says he will return incontinent. He hath commanded me to go to bed, And bade me to dismiss you.

Emil. Dismiss me!

Des. It was his bidding; therefore, good Emilia,

Give me my nightly wearing, and adieu. We must not now displease him.

Emil. I would you had never seen him.

Des. So would not I: my love doth so approve him

That even his stubbornness, his checks, his frowns—

Prithee unpin me—have grace and favou

in them.

Emil. I have laid those sheets you bad me on the bed.

Des. All's one. Good faith, how foolis are our minds!

If I do die before thee, prithee shroud me In one of these same sheets.

Emil. Come, come, you talk Des. My mother had a maid call' Barbary:

She was in love; and he she lov'd provimad,

And did forsake her. She had a song of 'willow';

IAct 4

35

An old thing 'twas, but it express'd her fortune, and she died singing it. That song to-night Will not go from my mind; I have much to do

But to go hang my head all at one side and sing it like poor Barbary. Prithee dispatch.

Emil. Shall I go fetch your night-gown? Des. No, unpin me here.

This Lodovico is a proper man.

Emil. A very handsome man.

Des. He speaks well.

Emil. I know a lady in Venice would have walk'd barefoot to Palestine for a touch of his nether lip.

Des. [Sings] The poor soul sat sighing by a sycamore tree,

Sing all a green willow; 40 Her hand on her bosom, her head on her knee.

Sing willow, willow, willow.
The fresh streams ran by her, and murmur'd her moans;

Sing willow, willow, willow:

Her salt tears fell from her and soft ned the stones;

Sing willow— Lay by these—willow, willow.-- .

Prithee, hie thee; he'll come anon.— Sing all a green willow must be my garland.

Let nobody blame him; his scorn I approve—

Nay, that's not next. Hark! who is't that knocks?

Emil. It is the wind.

Des. [Sings] I call'd my love false love; but what said he then?

Sing willow, willow, willow:

If I court moe women, you'll couch with moe men—

So, get thee gone; good night. Mine eyes do itch;

Doth that bode weeping?

Emil. 'Tis neither here nor there.

Des. I have heard it said so. O, these men. these men!

Dost thou in conscience think—tell me, Emilia—

That there be women do abuse their husbands

In such gross kind?

Emil. There be some such, no question.

Des. Wouldst thou do such a deed for all the world?

Emil. Why, would not you?

Des. No, by this heavenly light!

Emil. Nor I neither by this heavenly light;

I might do't as well i' th' dark.

Scene 31 OTHELLO

Des. Wouldst thou do such a deed for all Wear thy good rapier bare, and put it the world?

Emil. The world's a huge thing. It is a great price for a small vice.

Des. Good troth, I think thou woulds not.

Emil. By my troth, I think I should and undo't when I had done it. Marry, I would not do such a thing for a joint-ring, nor for measures of lawn, nor for gowns petticoats, nor caps, nor any petty exhibition: but for all the whole world—ud's pity, who would not make her husband a cuckold to make him a monarch? I should venture purgatory for't.

Des. Beshrew me, if I would do such a wrong for the whole world.

Emil. Why, the wrong is but a wrong i th' world; and having the world for your labour, 'tis a wrong in your own world, and you might quickly make it right.

Des. I do not think there is any such woman.

Emil. Yes, a dozen: and as many to th vantage as would store the world they play'd for. But I do think it is their husbands' faults

If wives do fall. Say that they slack their duties.

And pour our treasures into foreign laps: May unfold me to him; there stand I in Or else break out in peevish jealousies, Throwing restraint upon us: or say they No, he must die. Be 't so, I hear him strike us,

I know this act shows horrible and grim. Gra. Poor Desdemona! I am glad thy father's dead.

Thy match was mortal to him, and pure grief

Shore his old thread atwain. Did he live now.

This sight would make him do a desperate turn.

Yea, curse his better angel from his side, And fall to reprobance.

Oth. 'Tis pitiful; but yet Iago knows That she with Cassio hath the act of shame A thousand times committed; Cassio confess'd it:

And she did gratify his amorous works With that recognizance and pledge of love Which I first gave her; I saw it in his hand.

It was a handkerchief, an antique token My father gave my mother. 220

Emil. O God! O heavenly God!

Iago. Zounds, hold your peace.

Emil. 'Twill out, 'twill out. I, peace!

No, I will speak as liberal as the north. Let heaven and men and devils, let them all, All, all, cry shame against me, yet I'll speak.

Iago. Be wise, and get you home. Emil.

[Iago offers to stab his wife Gra. Fie! Your sword upon a woman? Emil. O thou dull Moor! That handkerchief thou speak'st of

I found by fortune, and did give my husband:

For often with a solemn earnestness- 230 More than indeed belong'd to such a trifle-He begg'd of me to steal it.

Villamous whore! lago. Emil. She give it Cassio! No, alas, I found it.

And I did give't my husband.

Filth, thou liest. Iago. Emil. By heaven, I do not, I do not, gentlemen.

O murderous coxcomb! What should such a fool

Do with so good a wife? [The Moor runs at Iago: Montano and others disarm the Moor. Iago kills his wife and escapes. Oth. Are there no stones in heaven but what serves for the thunder? Precious villain!

Gra. The woman falls; sure he hath kıll'd his wıfe.

Emil. Ay, ay. O, lay me by my mistress' side.

Gra. He's gone, but his wife's kill'd. 'Tis a notorious villain. Take you this weapon,

Which I have here recover'd from the Moor. Come, guard the door without; let him Blow me about in winds, roast me in not pass.

But kill him rather. I'll after that same villan For 'tis a damaed slave.

[Exeunt Montano, Grat: ano, and others.

Oth. I am not valiant neither-But every puny whipster gets my sword.

But why should honour outlive honesty? Let it go all.

Emil. What did thy song bode, lady? Hark, canst thou hear me? I will play the And die in music. [Sings] Willow, willow.

willow.-Moor, she was chaste; she lov'd thee, cruel

Moor: So come my soul to bliss, as I speak true:

So speaking as I think, alas, I die. She dies.

Oth. I have another weapon in this chamber: It was a sword of Spain, the ice-brook's temper.

O, here it is. Uncle, I must come forth. Gra. [Within] If thou attempt it, it will cost thee dear:

Thou hast no weapon, and perforce must suffer.

Oth. Look in upon me, then, and speak with me. I will not. Or, naked as I am, I will assault thee.

Re-enter GRATIANO.

Gra. What is the matter?

Behold, I have a weapon: A better never did itself sustain Upon a soldier's thigh. I have seen the day

That with this little arm and this good sword I have made my way through more impediments

Than twenty times your stop. But, O vain boast!

Who can control his fate? 'Tis not so now. Be not afraid though you do see me weapon'd;

Here is my journey's end, here is my butt. And very sea-mark of my utmost sail. Do you go back dismay'd? 'Tis a lost fear:

Man but a rush against Othello's breast, And he retires. Where should Othello go? Now, how dost thou look now? O illstarr'd wench!

Pale as thy smock! When we shall meet at compt,

This look of thine will hurl my soul from heaven,

And fiends will snatch at it. Cold. cold. my girl !

THE SCENE: The Roman Empire.

ACT ONE

Scene I. Alexandria. Cleopatra's palace.

Enter Demetrius and Philo.

Phi. Nay, but this dotage of our general's O'erflows the measure. Those his goodly eyes,

That o'er the files and musters of the war
Have glow'd like plated Mars, now bend, now turn,

The office and devotion of their view 5 Upon a tawny front. His captain's heart, Which in the scuffles of great fights hath burst

The buckles on his breast, reneges all temper,

And is become the bellows and the fan To cool a gipsy's lust.

Flourish. Enter Antony, Cleopatra, her Ladies, the Train, with Eunuchs fanning her.

Take but good note, and you shall see in him

The triple pillar of the world transform'd Into a strumpet's fool. Behold and see.

Cleo. If it be love indeed, tell me how much.

Ant. There's beggary in the love that can be reckon'd.

Cleo. I'll set a bourn how far to be belov'd.

Ant. Then must thou needs find out new heaven, new earth.

Enter a Messenger.

Mcss. News, my good lord, from Rome.
Ant. Grates me the sum.
Cleo. Nay, hear them, Antony.
Fulvia perchance is angry; or who knows
If the scarce-bearded Cæsar have not sent His pow'rful mandate to you: 'Do this or this:

Take in that kingdom and enfranchise that; Perform't, or else we damn thee'.

Ant. How, my love? Cleo. Perchance? Nay, and most like, 25
You must not stay here longer; your dismission

Is come from Cæsar; therefore hear it,
Antony.

Where's Fulvia's process? Cæsar's I would say? Both?

Call in the messengers. As I am Egypt's Queen, Thou blushest, Antony, and that blood of thine 30

Is Cæsar's homager. Else so thy cheek pays shame

When shrill-tongu'd Fulvia scolds. The messengers!

Ant. Let Rome in Tiber melt, and the wide arch

Of the rang'd empire fall! Here is my space.

34
Kingdoms are clay; our dungy earth alike

1155

ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA

Feeds beast as man. The nobleness of life Is to do thus [embracing], when such a mutual pair

And such a twain can do't, in which l bind,

On pain of punishment, the world to weet We stand up peerless.

Cleo. Excellent falsehood! 40
Why did he marry Fulvia, and not love her?
I'll seem the fool I am not. Antony
Will he himself.

Ant. But stirr'd by Cleopatra.

Now for the love of Love and her soft old.

Let's not confound the time with conference harsh;

There's not a minute of our lives should stretch

Without some pleasure now. What sport to-night?

Cleo. Hear the ambassadors.

Ant. Fig., wrangling queen! Whom everything becomes—to chide, to laugh,

To weep; whose every passion fully strives To make itseli in thee fair and admir'd. No messenger but thine, and all alone To-night we'll wander through the streets and note

The qualities of people. Come, my queen;
Last night you did desire it. Speak not [Exeun: Antony and Cleopatra, with the Train.

Dem. Is Cæsar with Antonius priz'd so slight?

Phi. Sir, sometimes when he is not

Antony, He comes too short of that great property Which still should go with Antony.

Dem. I am full sorry
That he approves the common lar, who 60
Thus speaks of him at Rome; but I will hope

Of better deeds to-morrow. Rest you happy! [Exeunt.

Scene II. Alexandria. Cleopatra's palace. Enter Charmian, Iras, Alexas, and a Soothsayer.

Char. Lord Alexas, sweet Alexas, most anything Alexas, almost most absolute Alexas, where's the soothsayer that you prais'd so to th' Queen? O that I knew this husband, which you say must charge his horns with garlands!

Alex. Soothsayer!

Sooth. Your will?

Char. Is this the man? Is't you, sir, that fortune.
know things?
Sooth.

Sooth. In nature's infinite book of secrecy A little I can read.

Alex. Show him your hand.

Enter ENOBARBUS.

Eno. Bring in the banquet quickly;

Cleopatra's health to drink.

Char. Good sir, give me good fortune. Sooth. I make not, but foresee.

Char. Pray, then, foresee me one. 25 Sooth. You shall be yet far fairer than you are.

Char. He means in fiesh.

Iras. No. you shall paint when you are

Char. Wrinkles forbid:

Alex. Vex not his prescience; be attentive.

Char. Hush!

Sooth. You shall be more beloving than beloved.

Char. I had rather heat my hver with drinking.

Alex. Nav, hear him.

Char. Good now, some excellent fortune!
Let me be married to three kings in a forenoon, and widow them all. Let me have a child at fifty, to whom Herod of Jewry may do homage. Find me to marry me with Octavus Cæsar, and companion me with my mistress.

Sooth. You shall outlive the lady whom you serve.

Char. O, excellent! I love long life better than figs.

Sooth. You have seen and prov'd a fairer former fortune

Than that which is to approach.

Char. Then belike my children shall have no names. Prithee, how many boys and wenches must I have?

Sooth. If every of your wishes had a womb,

And fertile every wish, a million.

Char. Out, fool! I forgive thee for a witch.

Alex. You think none but your sheets are privy to your wishes.

Char. Nay, come, tell Iras hers.

Alex. We'll know all our fortunes.

Eno. Mine, and most of our fortunes, to-night, shall be—drunk to bed.

Iras. There's a palm presages chastity, if nothing else.

45
Char. E'en as the o'erflowing Nilus presageth famine.

Iras. Go, you wild bedfellow, you cannot soothsay.

Char. Nay, if an oily palm be not a fruitful prognostication, I cannot scratch mine ear. Prithee, tell her but a worky-day

Sooth. Your fortunes are alike.

Iras. But how, but how? Give me particulars.

Sooth. I have said.

10

Iras. Am I not an inch of fortune better than she?

Char. Well, if you were but an inch of fortune better than I, where would you choose it?

Iras. Not in my husband's nose.

Char. Our worser thoughts heavens Alexas-come, his fortune, his fortune! O, let him marry a woman that cannot go, sweet Isis, I beseech thee! And let her die too, and give him a worse! And let worse follow worse, till the worst of all follow him laughing to his grave, fiftyfold a cuckold! Good Isis, hear me this prayer, though thou deny me a matter of more weight; good Isis, I beseech thee !

Iras. Amen. Dear goddess, hear that prayer of the people! For, as it is a heartbreaking to see a handsome man loosewiv'd, so it is a deadly sorrow to behold a foul knave uncuckolded. Therefore, dear Isis, keep decorum, and fortune him accordingly!

Char. Amen.

Alex. Lo now, if it lay in their hands to make me a cuckold, they would make themselves whores but they'ld do't!

Enter CLEOPATRA.

Eno. Hush! Here comes Antony.

Not he: the Queen.

Cleo. Saw you my lord?

Eno. No. ladv.

Cleo. Was he not here?

Char. No. madam.

Cleo. He was dispos'd to mirth; but on the sudden

A Roman thought hath struck him. Enobarbus I

Eno. Madam ? Cleo. Seek him, and bring him hither.

Where's Alexas? Alex. Here, at your service. My lord approaches.

Enter ANTONY, with a Messenger and Attendants.

Cleo. We will not look upon him. Go with us. [Exeunt Cleopatra, Enobarbus, and the rest.

Mess. Fulvia thy wife first came into the field.

Ant. Against my brother Lucius? Mess. Av.

But soon that war had end, and the time's state

Made friends of them, jointing their force 'gainst Cæsar,

Whose better issue in the war from Italy 90 Upon the first encounter drave them.

Well, what worst? Ant. teller.

Ant. When it concerns the fool or coward. On! Things that are past are done with me.

'Tis thus:

I hear him as he flatter'd.

Mess. Labienus-This is stiff news-hath with his Parthian force general tongue: Name Cleopatra as she is call'd in Rome. Rail thou in Fulvia's phrase, and taunt my faults With such full licence as both truth and malice Have power to utter. O, then we bring forth weeds

When our quick minds lie still, and our ills told us

Is as our earing. Fare thee well awhile. Mess. At your noble pleasure. [Exit. Ant. From Sicyon, ho, the news ! Speak there!

1 Att. The man from Sicyon-is there such an one?

2 Att. He stays upon your will.

Let him appear. Ant. These strong Egyptian fetters I must break, Or lose myself in dotage.

Enter another Messenger with a letter.

What are you?

2 Mess. Fulvia thy wife is dead. Ant. Where died she? 2 Mess. In Sicyon.

Her length of sickness, with what else more serious

Importeth thee to know, this bears.

[Gives the letter. Forbear me. Ant. Exit Messenger.

There's a great spirit gone! Thus did I desire it.

What our contempts doth often hurl from us

We wish it ours again; the present pleasure.

By revolution low'ring, does become The opposite of itself. She's good, being gone;

The hand could pluck her back that shov'd her on.

I must from this enchanting queen break off.

Mess. The nature of bad news infects the Ten thousand harms, more than the ills I know,

My idleness doth hatch. Enobarbus I

Re-enter ENOBARBUS.

Eno. What's your pleasure, sir?

Ant. I must with haste from hence.

Eno. Why, then we kill all our women. We see how mortal an unkindness is to them: if they suffer our departure, death's the word.

Ant. I must be gone.

Eno. Under a compelling occasion, let women die. It were pity to cast them away for nothing, though between them and a great cause they should be esteemed nothing. Cleopatra, catching but the least noise of this, dies instantly: I have seen her die twenty times upon far poorer moment. I do think there is mettle in death, which commits some loving act upon her, she hath such a celerity in dying.

Ant. She is cunning past man's thought. Eno. Alack, sir, no! Her passions are made of nothing but the finest part of pure love. We cannot call her winds and waters aighs and tears; they are greater storms and tempests than almanacs can report. This cannot be cunning in her; if it be, she makes a show'r of rain as well as Jove.

Ant. Would I had never seen her! Eno. O sir, you had then left unseen a wonderful piece of work, which not to have been blest withal would have discredited vour travel.

Ant. Fulvia is dead.

Eno. Sir?

Ant. Fulvia is dead.

Eno. Fulvia? Ant. Dead.

Eno. Why, sir, give the gods a thankful sacrifice. When it pleaseth their deities to take the wife of a man from him, it shows to man the tailors of the earth; comforting therein that when old robes are worn out there are members to make new. If there were no more women but Fulvia, then had you indeed a cut, and the case to be lamented. This grief is crown'd with consolation: your old smock brings forth a new petticoat: and indeed the tears live in an onion that should water this sorrow. Ant. The business she hath broached in the state

Cannot endure my absence.

Eno. And the business you have broach'd here cannot be without you; especially that of Cleopatra's, which wholly depends on your abode.

Ant. No more light answers. Let our officers

Cleo. Where is he?

I did not see him since. Char. Cleo. See where he is, who's with him. what he does.

I did not send you. If you find him sad. Say I am dancing; if in mirth, report That I am sudden sick. Quick, and return. Exit Alexas.

Char. Madam, methinks, if you did love him dearly,

Cleo. What should I do I do not? Char. In each thing give him way; cross him in nothing.

Cleo. Thou teachest like a fool-the way to lose him.

Char. Tempt him not so too far; I wish, forbear:

In time we hate that which we often fear.

Enter ANTONY.

But here comes Antony.

Cleo. I am sick and sullen. Ant. I am sorry to give breathing to my purpose-

Cleo. Help me away, dear Charmian; I shall fall.

It cannot be thus long: the sides of nature Will not sustain it.

Ant. Now, my dearest queen-Cleo. Pray you, stand farther from me.

Ant. What's the matter? Cleo. I know by that same eye there's some good news.

What says the married woman? You may

Cleo. Though age from folly could not give me freedom.

It does from childishness. Can Fulvia die? Ant. She's dead, my queen. Look here, and at thy sovereign leisure read The garboils she awak'd. At the last, best.

See when and where she died.

Cleo. O most false love! Where be the sacred vials thou shouldst fill With sorrowful water? Now I see, I see, In Fulvia's death how mine receiv'd shall be.

Scene IV. Rome. Casar's house.

Enter OCTAVIUS CASAR, reading a letter; LEPIENS, and their Ttain.

Cas. You may see, Lepidus, and henceforth know.

It is not Cæsar's natural vice to hate Our great competitor. From Alexandria This is the news: he fishes, drinks, and wastes

The lamps of night in revel; is not more manlike

Than Cleopatra, nor the queen of Ptolemy More womanly than he; hardly gave audience, or Vouchsaf'd to think he had partners. You shall find there

A man who is the abstract of all faults. That all men follow.

Lep. I must not think there are Evils enow to darken all his goodness. His faults, in him, seem as the spots of heaven,

More fiery by night's blackness; hereditary Rather than purchas'd; what he cannot change

Than what he chooses.

Cæs. You are too indulgent. Let's grant it is not

Amiss to tumble on the bed of Ptolemy,
To give a kingdom for a mirth, to sit
And keep the turn of tippling with a slave,
To reel the streets at noon, and stand the buffet

With knaves that smell of sweat. Say this becomes him—

As his composure must be rare indeed Whom these things cannot blemish—yet must Antony

No way excuse his foils when we do bear So great weight in his lightness. If he Scene V. Alexandria. Cleopatra's balace.

Enter CLEOPATRA, CHARMIAN, IRAS, and MARDIAN.

Cleo. Charmian! Char. Madam? Cleo. Ha. ha!

Give me to drink mandragora.

Why, madam? Cleo. That I might sleep out this great gap of time

My Antony is away.

Char. You think of him too much. Cleo. O, 'tis treason!

Char. Madam, I trust, not so.

Cleo. Thou, eunuch Mardian! Mar. What's your Highness' pleasure? Cleo. Not now to hear thee sing; I take no pleasure

In aught an eunuch has. 'Tis well for

That, being unseminar'd, thy freer thoughts May not fly forth of Egypt. Hast thou affections?

Mar. Yes, gracious madam.

Cleo. Indeed?

Mar. Not in deed, madam: for I can do nothing

But what indeed is honest to be done. Yet have I fierce affections, and think What Venus did with Mars.

Alex. Sovereign of Egypt, hail! Cleo. How much unlike art thou Mark

Yet, coming from him, that great med'cine hath

How goes it with my brave Mark Aptony? Alex. Last thing he did, dear Queen, He kiss'd-the last of many doubled

This orient pearl. His speech sticks in my heart.

Cleo. Mine ear must pluck it thence.

Alex. ' Good friend,' quoth he 'Say the firm Roman to great Egypt sends This treasure of an oyster; at whose foot,

Of hot and cold; he was nor sad nor merry. Cleo. O well-divided disposition! Note him,

ACT TWO

Scene I. Messina. Pompey's house.

Enter Pompey, Menecrates, and Menas, in warlike manner.

Pom. If the great gods be just, they shall assist

The deeds of justest men.

Know, worthy Pompey, That what they do delay they not deny. Pom. Whiles we are suitors to their throne, decays

The thing we sue for.

We, ignorant of ourselves, 5 Beg often our own harms, which the wise pow'rs

Deny us for our good; so find we profit

By losing of our prayers.

I shall do well. The people love me, and the sea is mine; My powers are crescent, and my auguring hope

Says it will come to th' full. Mark Antony In Egypt sits at dinner, and will make No wars without doors. Cæsar gets money where He loses hearts. Lepidus flatters both, 14 Of both is flatter'd; but he neither loves, Nor either cares for him.

Men. Cæsar and Lepidus Are in the field. A mighty strength they carry.

How now, Varrius? Var. This is most certain that I shall deliver:

Mark Antony is every hour in Rome Expected. Since he went from Egypt 'tis A space for farther travel.

Pom. I could have given less matter A better ear. Menas, I did not think This amorous surfeiter would have donn'd his helm

For such a petty war; his soldiership Is twice the other twain. But let us rear 35 The higher our opinion, that our stirring Can from the lap of Egypt's widow pluck The ne'er-lust-wearied Antony.

I cannot hope Cæsar and Antony shall well greet together. His wife that's dead did trespasses to Cæsar;

His brother warr'd upon him; although, I think.

Not mov'd by Antony.

I know not, Menas, Pom. How lesser enmities may give way to greater.

Were't not that we stand up against them

Twere pregnant they should square between themselves:

For they have entertained cause enough To draw their swords. But how the fear

May cement their divisions, and bind up The petty difference we yet not know. Be't as our gods will have't! It only stands Our lives upon to use our strongest hands. Come, Menas. [Exeunt.

SCENE II. Rome. The house of Lepidus. Enter Enobarbus and Lepidus.

Lep. Good Enobarbus, 'tis a worthy deed. And shall become you well, to entreat your captain To soft and gentle speech.

Mæc. Eight wild boars roasted whole at a breakfast, and but twelve persons there. Is this true? 78 t

Eno. This was but as a fly by an eagle. We had much more monstrous matter of feast, which worthily deserved noting.

Mæc. She's a most triumphant lady, if report be square to her.

Eno. When she first met Mark Antony

she purs'd up his heart, upon the liver of Cydnus. TOI

Agr. There she appear'd indeed! Or my reporter devis'd well for her.

Eno. I will tell you.

The barge she sat in, like a burnish'd throne,

Burn'd on the water. The poop was beaten gold;

Purple the sails, and so perfumed that The winds were love-sick with them: the oars were silver, Which to the tune of flutes kept stroke, and made

The water which they beat to follow faster, As amorous of their strokes. For her own person.

It beggar'd all description. She did lie In her pavilion, cloth-of-gold, of tissue, O'erpicturing that Venus where we see The fancy out-work nature. On each side her Stood pretty dimpled boys, like smiling Cupids.

With divers-colour'd fans, whose wind did

To glow the delicate cheeks which they did cool. And what they undid did.

O, rare for Antony! Eno. Her gentlewomen, like the Nereides,

And made their bends adornings. At the neim

A seeming merniage steers. The silken tackle Swell with the touches of those nower-soft hands

That yaidly frame the office. From the barge

A strange invisible perfume hits the sense Of the adjacent wharfs. The city cast Her people out upon her; and Antony, Enthron'd i' th' market-place, did sit alone, Whistling to th' air; which, but for vacancy,

Had gone to gaze on Cleopatra too.

And made a gap in nature.

Rare Egyptian! Eno. Upon her landing, Antony sent to her, lavited her to supper. She replied It should be better he became her guest; Which she entreated. Our courteous Antony.

Whom he er the word of 'No 'woman heard speak,

Being barber'd ten times o'er, goes to the feast.

And for his ordinary pays his heart

For what his eyes cat only.

Royal wench! 230 She made great Cæsar lav his sword to bed. He ploughed her, and she cropp'd.

I saw her once Hop forty paces through the public street : And, having jost her breath, she spoke, and panted,

That she did make defect perfection. And, breathless, pow': breathe forth.

Mæc. Now Antony must leave her utterly.

Eno. Never! He will not.

Age cannot wither her, nor custom stale Her infinite variety. Other women cloy 240 The appetites they feed, but she makes hungry

Where most she satisfies: for vilest things Become themselves in her, that the holy priests

Bless her when she is riggish.

Mæc. If beauty, wisdom, modesty, can settle 245

The heart of Antony, Octavia is A blessed lottery to him.

Agr. Let us go. Good Enobarbus, make yourself my guest Whilst you abide here.

Eno. Humbly, sir, I thank you. [Exeuni.

Scene III. Rome. Cæsar's house.

Enter ANTONY, CÆSAR, OCTAVIA between them.

Ant. The world and my great office will sometimes

Divide me from your bosom.

Octa. All which time Before the gods my knee shall bow my pravers

To them for you.

Ant. Good night, sir. My Octavia, Read not my blemishes in the world's report.

I have not kept my square; but that to come

Shall all be done by th' rule. Good night, dear lady.

Octa. Good night, sir. Cæs. Good night.

Exeunt Cæsar and Octavia. Enter Soothsayer.

Ant. Now, sirrah, you do wish yourself in Egypt?

Sooth. Would I had never come from thence, nor you thither!

Ant. If you can-your reason.

Sooth. I see it in my motion, have it not in my tongue; but yet hie you to Egypt again.

Ant. Say to me,

Whose fortunes shall rise higher, Cæsar's or mine?

Sooth. Cæsar's.

Therefore, O Antony, stay not by his side. Thy dæmon, that thy spirit which keeps thee, is Noble, courageous, high, unmatchable, Where Cæsar's is not; but near him thy Becomes a fear, as being o'erpow'r'd. Therefore

Make space enough between you.

Speak this no more. Ant. Sooth. To none but thee; no more but when to thee.

If thou dost play with him at any game, Thou art sure to lose; and of that natural luck

He beats thee 'gainst the odds. Thy lustre As with a woman. Come, you'll play with thickens

When he shines by. I say again, thy spirit Is all afraid to govern thee near him; But, he away, 'tis noble.

Get thee gone. Ant. Say to Ventidius I would speak with him. [Exit Soothsayer.

He shall to Parthia.—Be it art or hap, He hath spoken true. The very dice obey

And in our sports my better cunning faints Under his chance. If we draw lots, he speeds;

His cocks do win the battle still of mine, When it is all to nought, and his quails ever Beat mine, inhoop'd, at odds. I will to Egypt;

And though I make this marriage for my peace.

I' th' East my pleasure lies.

Enter VENTIDIUS.

O, come, Ventidius. You must to Parthia. Your commission's ready:

Follow me and receive't.

Exeunt.

Scene IV. Rome. A street.

Enter LEPIDUS, MÆCENAS, and AGRIPPA.

Lep. Trouble yourselves no further. Prav you hasten

Your generals after.

Agr. Sir, Mark Antony Will e'en but kiss Octavia, and we'll follow. Lep. Till I shall see you in your soldier's dress.

Which will become you both, farewell. Mæc.

We shall, 5 As I conceive the journey, be at th' Mount Before you, Lepidus.

Your way is shorter: Let. My purposes do draw me much about.

You'll win two days upon me. Both. Sir, good success! Lep. Farewell. [Exeunt.

Scene V. Alexandria. Cleobatra's balace. Enter CLEOPATRA, CHARMIAN, IRAS, and ALEXAS.

Cleo. Give me some music—music, moody food

Of us that trade in love.

All. The music, ho!

Enter MARDIAN the Eunuch.

Cleo. Let it alone! Let's to billiards. Come. Charmian.

Char. My arm is sore; best play with Mardian.

Cleo. As well a woman with an eunuch play'd me, sir?

Mar. As well as I can, madam.

Cleo. And when good will is show'd, though't come too short,

The actor may plead pardon. I'll none now. Give me mine angle—we'll to th' river. There,

My music playing far off, I will betray Tawny-finn'd fishes; my bended hook shall pierce

Their slimy jaws; and as I draw them up I'll think them every one an Antony, And say 'Ah ha! Y'are caught'.

Char. 'Twas merry when 15 You wager'd on your angling; when your diver

Did hang a salt fish on his hook, which he With fervency drew up. That time? O times! Cleo.

I laugh'd him out of patience; and that night

I laugh'd him into patience; and next He's bound unto Ocravia. morn.

Ere the ninth hour. I drunk him to his bed. Then put my tires and mantles on him. whilst

I wore his sword Philippan.

Enter a Messenger.

O! from Italy? Ram thou thy fruitful tidings in mine ears. That long time have been barren.

Mess. Madam, madam— 25 Cleo. Antony's dead! If thou say so, villain.

Thou kill'st thy mistress; but well and

It thou so yield him, there is gold, and here My bluest veins to kiss-a hand that kings Have lipp'd, and trembled kissing. Mess. First, madam, he is well.

Why, there's more gold. Cleo.

But, sirrah, mark, we use
To say the dead are well. Bring it to

The gold I give thee will I melt and pour Down thy ill-uttering throat.

Mess. Good madam, hear me.

Well, go to, I will. But there's no goodness in thy face. Antony

Be free and healthful-why so tart a favour To trumpet such good tidings? If not well, Thou shouldst come like a Fury crown'd with snakes,

Not like a formal man.

Will't please you hear me? Mess. Cleo. I have a mind to strike thee ere thou speak'st.

Yet, if thou say Antony lives, is well, Or friends with Cæsar, or not captive to

I'll set thee in a shower of gold, and hail 45 Rich pearls upon thee.

Mess. Madam, he's well.

Cleo. Well said.

Mess. And friends with Cæsar.

Cleo. Th'art an honest man. Mess. Cæsar and he are greater friends than ever.

Cleo. Make thee a fortune from me.

Mess. But yet, madam— Cleo. I do not like 'but vet'. It does

The good precedence; fie upon 'but yet'! 'But yet' is as a gaoler to bring forth Some monstrous malefactor. Prithee. friend,

Pour out the pack of matter to mine ear, The good and bad together. He's friends with Cæsar :

In state of health, thou say'st; and, thou say'st, free.

Mess. Free, madam! No: I made no such report.

Clea. For what good turn? Mess. For the best turn i' th' bed.

I am pale, Charmian. Mess. Madam, he's married to Octavia. Cleo. The most infectious pestilence upon thee! [Strikes him down.

Mess. Good madam, patience.

Cleo. What say you? Hence. [Strikes him.

Horrible villain! or I'li spurn thine eyes Like balls before me; I'll unhair thy head: [She hales him up and down.

Thou shalt be whipp'd with wire and stew'd in brine.

Smarting in ling'ring pickle.

Mess. Gracious madam. I that do bring the news made not the match.

Cleo. Say 'tis not so, a province I will give thee,

And make thy fortunes proud. The blow thou hadst

Shall make thy peace for moving me to

And I will boot thee with what gift beside Thy modesty can beg Mess. He's marned, madam. Cleo. Rogue, thou hast liv'd too long. Draws a knife.

Mess. Nay, then I'll run. What mean you, madam? I have made no fault. Exit. Char. Good madam, keep yourself within vourself: The man is innocent.

Cleo. Some innocents scape not the thunderbolt.

Melt Egypt into Nile! and kindly creatures Turn all to serpents! Call the slave again. Though I am mad, I will not bite him. Call!

Char. He is afear'd to come. Cleo. I will not hurt him.

These hands do lack nobility, that they strike

A meaner than myself; since I myself Have given myself the cause.

Enter the Messenger again.

Come hither, sir. Though it be honest, it is never good To bring bad news. Give to a gracious message

An host of tongues; but let ill tidings tell Themselves when they be felt.

Mess. Í have done my duty. Cleo. Is he married?

I cannot hate thee worser than I do If thou again say 'Yes'.

Mess. He's married, madam. Cleo. The gods confound thee! Dost thou hold there still?

ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA

Mess. Should I lie, madam? O. I would thou didet. Cleo. So half my Egypt were submerg'd and made A cistern for scal'd snakes! Go, get thee hence. Hadst thou Narcissus in thy face, to me Thou wouldst appear most ugly. He is married?

Mess. I crave your Highness' paidon. He is married? Cieo. Mess. Take no offence that I would not offend you;

To punish me for what you make me do 100 Seems much unequal. He's married to Made Octavia.

Cleo. O, that his fault should make a knave of thee

That art not what th'art sure of! Get thee

from Rome

Are all too dear for me. Lie they upon thy hand.

And be undone by 'em! [Exit Messenger. Good your Highness, patience. Char. Cleo. In praising Antony I have disprais'd Cæsar.

Char. Many times, madam.

Cleo. I am paid for't now. Lead me from hence, IOH

I faint. O Iras. Charmian! "Tis no marrer. Go to the fellow, good Alexas; bid him Report the feature of Octavia, her years. Her inclination: let him not leave out The colour of her hair. Bring me word quickly. IExt Alexas.

him for ever go-let him not, Charmian-

Though he be painted one way like a Gorgon,

The other way's a Mars. [To Mardian] Bid you Alexas

Bring me word how tall she is .- Pity me, Charmian,

But do not speak to me. Lead me to my chamber. [Exeunt.

SCENE VI. Near Misenum.

Flourish. Enter Pompey and Menas at one deor, with drum and trumpet; at another, CÆSAR, ANTONY, LEPIDUS, ENO-BARBUS. MÆCENAS. AGRIPPA, Soldiers marching.

Pom. Your hostages I have, so have you mine;

And we shall talk before we fight.

Most meet That first we come to words; and therefore have we

Our written purposes before us sent; Which if thou hast considered, let us know If 'twill tie up thy discontented sword 2011

And carry back to Sicily much tall youth That else must perish here.

Pin. To you all three. The cenators arone of this great world. Chief factors for the gods: I do not know Wherefore my father should revengers want,

Having a son and friends, since Julius Cæsar.

Who at Philippi the good Brutus ghosted. There saw you labouring for him. What wasit

That mov'd pale Cassius to conspire? and what the all-honour'd honest Roman.

Bintus. With the arm'd rest, courtiers of beauteous freedom.

To drench the Capitol, but that they would Have one man but a man? And that is it The merchandise which thou hast brought Hath made me rig my navy, at whose burden The anger'd ocean foams; with which I meant To scourge th' ingiatifude that despiteful

Cast on my noble father.

Take your time. Rome

Ant. Thou canst not fear us, Pompey, with thy sans;

We'll speak with thee at sea; at land thou know'st

How much we do o'er-count thee. Pom. At land, indeed. Thou dost o'er-count me of my tather's house. But since the cuckoo builds not for himself.

Remain in't as thou mayst. Leb. Be pleas'd to tell us-For this is from the present—how you take

The offers we have sent you. Cws. There's the point. Ant. Which do not be entreated to, but weigh What it is worth embrac'd.

Cæs. And what may follow. To try a larger tortune.

Pom. You have made me offer Ot Sicily, Sardinia; and I must Rid all the sea of pirates; then to send Measures of wheat to Rome; this 'greed upon.

To part with unhack'd edges and bear back Our targes undinted.

All. That's our offer. Pom. Know, then, I came before you here a man prepar'd 40 To take this ofter; but Mark Antony Put me to some impatience. Though I lose The praise of it by telling, you must know, When Cæsar and your brother were at blows,

Your mother came to Sicily and did find Her welcome friendly.

85

Ant I have heard it, Pompey, And am well studied for a liberal thanks Which I do owe you.

Let me have your hand. Pom. I did not think, sir, to have met you here. Ant. The beds i' th' East are soft; and thanks to you. That call'd me timelier than my purpose hither:

For I gave gained by't.

Cæs. Since I saw you last There is a change upon you.

Well, I know not What counts harsh fortune casts upon my face : But in my bosom shall she never come 55

To make my heart her vassal. Lep. Well met here.

Pom. I hope so. Lepidus. Thus we are agreed.

I crave our composition may be written, And seal'd between us.

That's the next to do. Cæs. Pom. We'll feast each other ere we part, and let's 60

Draw lots who shall begin.

That will I, Pompey. Ant. Pom. No. Antony, take the lot;

But, first or last, your fine Egyptian cookery

Shall have the fame. I have heard that Julius Cæsar

Grew fat with feasting there.

You have heard much. 65 Ant. Pom. I have fair meanings, sir. And fair words to them.

Pom. Then so much have I heard; And I have heard Apollodorus carried-Eno. No more of that! He did so.

What, I pray you? Pom. Eno. A certain queen to Cæsar in a mattress.

Pom. I know thee now. How far'st thou, soldier?

Eno. Well:

And well am like to do, for I perceive Four feasts are toward.

Pom. Let me shake thy hand. I never hated thee: I have seen thee fight,

When I have envied thy behaviour.

Sir. I never lov'd you much; but I ha' prais'd ye

When you have well deserv'd ten times as much

As I have said you did.

Pom. Enjoy thy plainness; It nothing ill becomes thee. Aboard my galley I invite you all.

Will you lead, lords?

All. Show's the way sir.

Men. [Aside] Thy father, Pompey, would ne'er have made this treaty .--You and I have known, sir.

Eno. At sea, I think.

Men. We have, sir.

Eno. You have done well by water. Men. And you by land.

Eno. I will praise any man that will praise me; though it cannot be denied what I have done by land.

Men. Nor what I have done by water. Eno. Yes, something you can deny for your own safety: you have been a great thief by sea. Men. And you by land.

Eno. There I deny my land service. But give me your hand, Menas; if our eyes had authority, here they might take two thieves kissing.

Men. All men's faces are true, whatsome-

'er their hands are.

Eno. But there is never a fair woman has a true face.

Men. No slander: they steal hearts, oo Eno. We came hither to fight with you. Men. For my part, I am sorry it is turn'd to a drinking. Pompey doth this day laugh away his fortune.

Eno. If he do, sure he cannot ween't back again.

Men. Y'have said, sir. We look'd not for Mark Antony here. Pray you, is he married to Cleopatra?

Eno. Cæsar's sister is call'd Octavia. Men. True, sir; she was the wife of Caius Marcellus.

Eno. But she is now the wife of Marcus Antonius.

Men. Pray ye, sir?

Eno. 'Tis true. Men. Then is Cæsar and he for ever knit together. Eno. If I were bound to divine of this unity, I would not prophesy so.

Men. I think the policy of that purpose made more in the marriage than the love of the parties.

Eno. I think so too. But you shall find the band that seems to tie their friendship together will be the very strangler of their amity: Octavia is of a holy, cold, and still conversation.

Men. Who would not have his wife so? Eno. Not he that himself is not so; which is Mark Antony. He will to his Egyptian dish again; then shall the sighs of Octavia blow the fire up in Cæsar, and, as I said before, that which is the strength of their amity shall prove the immediate author of their variance. Antony will use his affection where it is; he married but his occasion here.

Men. And thus it may be. Come, sir, will [Exeunt all but Enobarbus and Menas. you aboard? I have a health for you.

Eno. I shall take it, sir. We have us'd our throats in Egypt.

Men. Come, let's away.

[Exeunt.

ΙO

Scene VII. On board Pompey's galley, off Misenum.

Music plays. Enter two or three Servants with a banquet.

1 Serv. Here they'll be, man. Some o' their plants are ill-rooted already; the least wind i' th' world will blow them down.

2 Serv. Lepidus is high-colour'd. 1 Serv. They have made him drink almsdrink.

2 Serv. As they pinch one another by the disposition, he cries out 'No more!'; reconciles them to his entreaty and himself to th' drink.

1 Serv. But it raises the greater war between him and his discretion.

2 Serv. Why, this it is to have a name in great men's fellowship. I had as lief have a reed that will do me no service as a Do as I bid you.—Where's this cup I call'd partizan I could not heave.

1 Serv. To be call'd into a huge sphere, and not to be seen to move in't, are the holes where eyes should be, which pitifully disaster the cheeks.

A sennet sounded. Enter CÆSAR, ANTONY, LEPIDUS, POMPEY, ACRIPPA, MÆCENAS, ENOBARBUS, MENAS, with other Captains.

Ant. [To Cæsar] Thus do they, sir: they take the flow o' th' Nile

By certain scales i' th' pyramid: they

By th' height, the lowness, or the mean, if dearth

Or foison follow. The higher Nilus swells 20 The more it promises; as it ebbs, the seedsman

Upon the slime and ooze scatters his grain, And shortly comes to harvest.

Lep. Y'have strange serpents there.

Ant. Av. Lepidus.

Lep. Your serpent of Egypt is bred now of your mud by the operation of your sun; so is your crocodile.

Ant. They are so.

Pom. Sit—and some wine! A health to Lepidus!

Lep. I am not so well as I should be, but I'll ne'er out.

Eno. Not till you have slept. I fear me you'll be in till then.

Lep. Nay, certainly, I have heard the tolemies' pyramises are very goodly ings. Without contradiction I have Ptolemies' things. heard that.

Men. [Aside to Pompey] Pompey, a word. what is't?

Men. [Aside to Pompey] Forsake thy seat. I do beseech thee, Captain, And hear me speak a word.

Pom. [Whispers in's ear] Forbear me till anon-

This wine for Lepidus!

Lep. What manner o' thing is your crocodile?

Ant. It is shap'd, sir, like itself, and it is as broad as it hath breadth; it is just so high as it is, and moves with it own organs. It lives by that which nourisheth it, and the elements once out of it, it transmigrates.

Lep. What colour is it of?

Ant. Of it own colour too.

Leb. 'Tis a strange serpent.

Ant. 'Tis so. And the tears of it are wet. Cas. Will this description satisfy him? Ant. With the health that Pompey gives him, else he is a very epicure.

Pom. [Aside to Menas] Go, hang, sir, hang! Tell me of that! Away!

for ?

Men. [Aside to Pompey] If for the sake of merit thou wilt hear me. Rise from thy stool.

Pom. [Aside to Menas] I think th'art mad. [Rises and walks aside] The matter?

Men. I have ever held my cap off to thy fortunes.

Pom. Thou hast serv'd me with much faith. What's else to say ?-

Be jolly, lords. Ant. These quicksands, Lepidus.

Keep off them, for you sink. Men. Wilt thou be lord of all the world? What say'st thou? Men. Wilt thou be lord of the whole world? That's twice. Pom. How should that be?

Men. But entertain it. And though thou think me poor, I am the

Will give thee all the world.

Pom. Hast thou drunk well? Men. No, Pompey, I have kept me from the cup.

Thou art, if thou dar'st be, the earthly Jove;

Whate'er the ocean pales or sky inclips Is thine, if thou wilt ha't.

Pom. Show me which wav. Men. These three world-sharers, these competitors,

Are in thy vessel. Let me cut the cable; And when we are put off, fall to their throats.

All there is thine.

Pom. Ah, this thou shouldst have done. Pom. [Aside to Menas] Say in mine ear; And not have spoke on't. In me 'tis villainy:

In thee't had been good service. Thou must know

'Tis not my profit that does lead mine honour: Mine honour, it. Repent that e'er thy tongue Hath so betray'd thine act. Being done unknown, I should have found it afterwards well done, But must condemn it now. Desist, and drink.

Men. [Aside] For this, I'll never follow thy pall'd fortunes more. Who seeks, and will not take when once 'tis offer'd.

Shall never find it more.

Pom. This health to Lepidus!

Ant. Bear him ashore, I'll pledge it for him, Pompey.

Eno. Here's to thee, Menas!

Men. Enobarbus, welcome! 85 Pom. Fill till the cup be hid.

Eno. There's a strong fellow, Menas. [Pointing to the Servant who carries off Lepidus.

Eno. 'A bears the third part of the world, man; see'st not?

The third part, then, is drunk. Would it were all,

That it might go on wheels!

Eno. Drink thou: increase the reels. Men. Come.

Pom. This is not yet an Alexandrian

Ant. It ripens towards it. Strike the vessels, ho!

Here's to Cæsar!

(could well forbear 't. Cæs. It's monstrous labour when I wash my brain

And it grows fouler.

Be a child o' th' time. Ant. Cæs. Possess it, I'll make answer. But I had rather fast from all four days 100

Than drink so much in one. Eno. [To Antony] Ha, my brave emperor!

Shall we dance now the Egyptian Bacchanals

And celebrate our drink?

Let's ha't, good soldier. Ant. Come, let's all take hands.

our sense

In soft and delicate Lethe.

All take hands. Make battery to our ears with the loud music,

The while I'll place you; then the boy shall sing;

The holding every man shall bear as loud As his strong sides can volley. [Music plays. Enobarbus places them

The Song.

Come, thou monarch of the vine. Plumpy Bacchus with pink eyne! In thy fats our cares be drown'd, With thy grapes our hairs be crown'd. Cup us till the world go round, Cup us till the world go round!

Cæs. What would you more? Pompey. good night. Good brother, Let me request you off; our graver busi-

Frowns at this levity. Gentle lords, let's part; You see we have burnt our cheeks. Strong

Enobarb Is weaker than the wine, and mine own tongue Splits what it speaks. The wild disguise hath almost Antick'd us all. What needs more words? Good night.

Good Antony, your hand.

Pom. I'll try you on the shore. Ant. And shall, sir. Give's your hand. Pom. O Antony,

You have my father's house-but what? We are friends.

Come, down into the boat.

Take heed you fall not. Eno. [Exeunt all but Enobarbus and Menas. Menas, I'll not on shore.

No, to my cabin. These drums! these trumpets, flutes! what! Let Neptune hear we bid a loud farewell To these great fellows. Sound and be hang'd, sound out! [Sound a flourish, with drums. Eno. Hoo! says 'a. There's my cap. Men. Hoo! Noble Captain, come.

Exeunt.

ACT THREE

Scene I. A plain in Syria.

Enter VENTIDIUS, as it were in triumph, with SILIUS and other Romans, Officers and Soldiers; the dead body of PACORUS borne before him.

Ven. Now, darting Parthia, art thou struck, and now

Till that the conquering wine hath steep'd Pleas'd fortune does of Marcus Crassus' death

> Make me revenger. Bear the King's son's body

Before our army. Thy Pacorus, Orodes, Pays this for Marcus Crassus.

Noble Ventidius, Whilst yet with Parthian blood thy sword is warm fugitive Parthians follow: The spur through Media, hand in hand. Mesopotamia, and the shelters whither

1171

The routed fly. So thy grand captain, Antony,

Shall set thee on triumphant chariots and Put garlands on thy head.

O Silius, Silius, I have done enough. A lower place, note well.

May make too great an act; for learn this, Silius:

Better to leave undone than by our deed Acquire too high a fame when him we serve's away.

Cæsar and Antony have ever won More in their officer, than person. Sossius. One of my place in Syria, his lieutenant, For quick accumulation of renown,

Which he achiev'd by th' minute, lost his favour.

Who does i' th' wars more than his captain can

Becomes his captain's captain; and ambition.

The soldier's virtue, rather makes choice of loss

Than gain which darkens bim.

I could do more to do Antonius good, But 'twould offend him; and in his offence Should my performance perish.

Sil. Thou hast, Ventidius, that Without the which a soldier and his sword Grants scarce distinction. Thou wilt write to Antony?

Ven. I'll humbly signify what in his

That magical word of war, we have effected: How, with his banners, and his well-paid ranks. The ne'er-yet-beaten horse of Parthia We have jaded out o' th' field.

Sıl. Where is he now? Ven. He purposeth to Athens; whither, with what haste permit,

We shall appear before him.—On, there; pass along. [Exeunt.

Scene II. Rome. Cæsær's house.

Enter AGRIPPA at one door, ENOBARBUS at another.

Agr. What, are the brothers parted? Eno. They have dispatch'd with Pompey: he is gone;

The other three are sealing. Octavia weeps To part from Rome: Cæsar is sad: and Lepidus,

Since Pompey's feast, as Menas says, is troubled

With the green sickness.

Tis a noble Lepidus. Eno. A very fine one. O, how he loves Cæsar i Agr. Nay, but how deaily he adores Mark Antony!

Eno. Cæsar? Why he's the Jupiter of men. What's Antony? Agr. The Jupiter.

Eno. Spake you of Cæsar? How! the nonpareil!

Agr. O. Antony! O thou Arabian bird! Would you praise Cæsar, say 'Cæsar'—go no further.

Agr. Indeed, he plied them both with excellent praises.

Eno. But he loves Cæsar best. Yet he loves Antony.

Hoo! hearts, tongues, figures, scribes, bards, poets, cannot Think, speak, cast, write, sing, numberhoo!-

His love to Antony. But as for Casar. Kneel down, kneel down, and wonder.

Agr. Both he loves. Eno. They are his shards, and he their beetle. [Trumpets within] So- 20

This is to horse. Adieu, noble Agrippa. Agr. Good fortune, worthy soldier, and farewell.

Enter CÆSAR, ANTONY, LEPIDUS, and OCTAVIA.

Ant. No further, sir.

Cæs. You take from me a great part of myself;

Use me well in't. Sister, prove such a wife As my thoughts make thee, and as my farthest band Shall pass on thy approof. Most noble Antony,

Let not the piece of virtue which is set Betwixt us as the cement of our love To keep it builded be the ram to batter 30 The fortress of it; for better might we The weight we must convey with's will Have lov'd without this mean, if on both parts

This be not cherish'd.

Ant. Make me not offended In your distrust.

Čæs. I have said.

Ant. You shall not find.

Though you be therein curious, the least cause For what you seem to fear. So the gods keep you, And make the hearts of Romans serve your ends! We will here part.

Cæs. Farewell, my dearest sister, fare thee well. The elements be kind to thee and make 40 Thy spirits all of comfort! Fare thee well. Octa. My noble brother!

Ant. The April's in her eyes. It is love's spring,

And these the showers to bring it on. Be cheerful.

Octa. Sir. look well to my husband's house: and-

Cæs.

What.

Octavia?

Octa. I'll tell you in your ear.

Ant. Her tongue will not obey her heart. nor can

Her heart inform her tongue-the swan's down feather.

That stands upon the swell at the full of tide.

And neither way inclines.

Eno. [Aside to Agrippa] Will Cæsar ween? Agr. [Aside to Enobarbus] He has a cloud in's face.

Eno. [Aside to Agrippa] He were the worse for that, were he a horse; So is he, being a man.

Agr. [Aside to Enobarbus] Why, Enobarbus.

When Antony found Julius Cæsar dead, He cried almost to roaring; and he wept 55 When at Philippi he found Brutus slain. Eno. [Aside to Agrippa] That year, indeed, he was troubled with a rheum; What willingly he did confound he wail'd, Believe't-till I weep too.

Cæs. No, sweet Octavia,

You shall hear from me still; the time shall not

Out-go my thinking on you.

Come, sir, come; I'll wrestle with you in my strength of love. Look here I have you; thus I let you go, And give you to the gods.

Cæs. Adieu: be happy! Lep. Let all the number of the stars give light To thy fair way!

Cæs. Farewell, farewell! [Kisses Octavia.

Ant. Farewell! [Trumpets sound. Exeunt.

Scene III. Alexandria. Cleopatra's palace. Enter CLEOPATRA, CHARMIAN, IRAS, and ALEXAS.

Cleo. Where is the fellow?

Alex.

Half afeard to come. Cleo. Go to, go to.

Enter the Messenger as before.

Come hither, sir. Alex. Good Majesty, Herod of Jewry dare not look upon you But when you are well pleas'd.

That Herod's head I'll have. But how, when Antony is gone, 5 Through whom I might command it? Come thou near.

Mess. Most gracious Majesty! Cleo. Didst thou behold Octavia?

Mess. Ay, dread Queen. Cleo. Where? Mess. Madam, in Rome

I look'd her in the face, and saw her led 45 Between her brother and Mark Antony. 10 Cleo. Is she as tall as me?

Mess. She is not, madam. Cleo. Didst hear her speak? Is she shrilltongu'd or low?

Mess. Madam, I heard her speak: she is low voic'd.

Cleo. That's not so good. He cannot like her long. Char. Like her? O Isis! 'tis impossible.

Cleo. I think so, Charmian. Dull of tongue and dwarfish!

What majesty is in her gait? Remember. if e'er thou look'dst on majesty.

Mess. She creeps. Her motion and her station are as one: She shows a body rather than a life.

A statue than a breather.

Cleo. Is this certain? Mess. Or I have no observance.

Char Three in Egypt Cannot make better note.

Cleo. He's very knowing; I do perceive't. There's nothing in her yet.

The fellow has good judgment. Excellent. Cleo. Guess at her years, I prithee.

Mess. Madam.

She was a widow.

Cleo. Widow? Charmian, hark! Mess. And I do think she's thirty. Cleo. Bear'st thou her face in mind? Is't long or round? Mess. Round even to faultiness. Cleo. For the most part, too, they are foolish that are so.

Her hair, what colour?

Mess. Brown, madam; and her forehead As low as she would wish it.

There's gold for thee. Cleo. Thou must not take my former sharpness

I will employ thee back again; I find thee Most fit for business. Go make thee ready; Our letters are prepar'd. [Exit Messenger. Char. A proper man.

Cleo. Indeed, he is so. I repent me much That so I harried him. Why, methinks, by him.

This creature's no such thing.

Nothing, madam. Char. Cleo. The man hath seen some majesty, and should know.

Char. Hath he seen majesty? Isis else defend,

And serving you so long!

Cleo. I have one thing more to ask him yet, good Charmian.

But 'tis no matter; thou shalt bring him to me

Where I will write. All may be well enough.

Char. I warrant you, madam. [Exeunt Choose your own company, and command Scene IV. Athens. Antony's house.

Enter ANTONY and OCTAVIA.

Ant. Nay, nay, Octavia, not only that— That were excusable; that and thousands more

Of semblable import—but he hath wag'd New wars 'gainst Pompey; made his will, and read it

To public ear:

Spoke scantly of me; when perforce he could not

But pay me terms of honour, cold and sickly

He vented them, most narrow measure lent me;

When the best hint was given him, he not took't,

Or did it from his teeth.

Octa.

O my good lord,
Believe not all; or if you must believe,
Stomach not all. A more unhappy lady,
If this division chance, ne'er stood between,
Praying for both parts.
The good gods will mock me presently

The good gods will mock me presently When I shall pray 'O, bless my lord and husband!'

Undo that prayer by crying out as loud
'O, bless my brother!' Husband win, win brother.

Prays, and destroys the prayer; no mid-

Twixt these extremes at all.

Ant. Gentle Octavia, Let your best love draw to that point which seeks

Best to preserve it. If I lose mine honour,

I lose myself; better I were not yours
Than yours so branchless. But, as you requested,

Yourself shall go between's. The meantime, lady, 25

I'll raise the preparation of a war Shall stain your brother. Make your soonest haste;

So your desires are yours.

Octa. Thanks to my lord.

The Jove of power make me, most weak, most weak,

Your reconciler! Wars 'twixt you twain would be 30

As if the world should cleave, and that slain men
Should solder up the rift.

Ant. When it appears to you where this begins.

begins, Turn your displeasure that way, for our faults

Scene V. Athens. Antony's house.

Enter Enobarbus and Eros, meeting.

Eno. How now, friend Eros i

Eros. There's strange news come, sir Eno. What, man?

Eros. Cæsar and Lepidus have made wars upon Pompey.

Eno. This is old. What is the success?

Eros. Cæsar, having made use of him in the wars 'gainst Pompev, presently demed him rivality, wou'd not let him partake in the glory of the action; and not resting here, accuses him of letters he had formerly wrote to Pompey; upon his own appeal, seizes him. So the poor third is up, till death enlarge his confine.

Eno. Then, world, thou hast a pair of chaps—no more;

And throw between them all the food thou hast,

They'll grind the one the other. Where's

Antony?

Eros. He's walking in the garden—thus,
and spurns

The rush that lies before him; cries 'Fool Lepidus!'

And threats the throat of that his officer That murd'red Pompey.

Eno. Our great navy's rigg'd.
Eros. For Italy and Cæsar. More,

Domitius:

My lord desires you presently; my news
I might have told hereafter.

Eno. 'Twill be naught;
But let it be. Bring me to Antony.

Eros. Come, sir. [Exeunt.

SCENE VI. Rome. Cæsar's house.

Enter CÆSAR, AGRIPPA, and MÆCENAS.

Cæs. Contemning Rome, he has done all this and more

In Alexandria. Here's the manner of't: I' th' market-place, on a tribunal silver'd, Cleopatra and himself in chairs of gold Were publicly enthron'd; at the feet sat 5 Cæsarion, whom they call my father's son, And all the unlawful issue that their lust Since then hath made between them. Unto

Of lower Syria, Cyprus, Lydia, Absolute queen.

Mæc. This in the public eye? Cæs. I' th' common show-place, where they exercise.

His sons he there proclaim'd the kings of A market-maid to Rome, and have prekings:

Great Media, Parthia, and Armenia,

He gave to Alexander; to Ptolemy he assign'd

Syria, Cllicia, and Phœnicia. She In th' habiliments of the goddess Isis

That day appear'd; and oft before gave audience.

As 'tis reported, so.

Mæc. Let Rome be thus Inform'd.

Who, queasy with his insolence 20 Agr. Already, will their good thoughts call from him.

Cæs. The people knows it, and have now receiv'd

His accusations.

Who does he accuse? Agr. Cæs. Cæsar; and that, having in Sicily Sextus Pompeius spoil'd, we had not rated him

His part o' th' isle. Then does he say he lent me

Some shipping, unrestor'd. Lastly, he frets That Lepidus of the triumvirate Should be depos'd; and, being, that we detain

All his revenue.

Sir, this should be answer'd, 30 Cæs. 'Tis done already, and the messenger cruel.

That he his high authority abus'd, And did deserve his change. For what I have conquer'd I grant him part; but then, in his Armenia And other of his conquer'd kingdoms, I 30

Demand the like. Mæc. He'll never yield to that. Cæs. Nor must not then be yielded to in this.

Enter Octavia, with her Train.

Octa. Hail, Cæsar, and my lord ' hail, most dear Cæsar! Cæs. That ever I should call thee cast-away!

Octa. You have not call'd me so, nor have vou cause.

Cæs. Why have you stol'n upon us thus? You come not Like Cæsar's sister. The wife of Antony Should have an army for an usher, and The neighs of horse to tell of her approach Long ere she did appear. The trees by th'

Should have borne men, and expectation fainted.

Longing for what it had not. Nay, the dust Should have ascended to the roof of heaven, Rais'd by your populous troops. But you And ever welcome to us are come vented

The ostentation of our love, which left unshown

Is often left unlov'd. We should have met you

By sea and land, supplying every stage With an augmented greeting.

Good my lord, 55 To come thus was I not constrain'd, but did it

On my free will. My lord, Mark Antony, Hearing that you prepar'd for war, acquainted

My grieved ear withal; whereon I begg'd His pardon for return.

Cæs. Which soon he granted, 60 Being an obstruct 'tween his lust and him. Octa. Do not say so, my lord.

Cæs. I have eves upon him. And his affairs come to me on the wind. Where is he now?

Octa. My lord, in Athens.

Caes. No, my most wronged sister: Cleopatra

Hath nodded him to her. He hath given his enioire

Up to a whore, who now are levying The kings o' th' earth for war. He hath assembled

Bocchus, the king of Libya; Archelaus Of Cappadocia; Philadelphos, king I have told him Lepidus was grown too Of Paphlagonia; the Thracian king, Adallas :

King Mancaus of Arabia; King of Pont; Herod of Jewry; Mithridates, king Of Comagene; Polemon and Amyntas, The kings of Mede and Lycaonia, with a 75 More larger list of sceptres.

Octa. Ay me most wretched, That have my heart parted betwixt two friends.

That does afflict each other!

Welcome hither. Cæs. Your letters did withhold our breaking forth.

Till we perceiv'd both how you were wrong led

And we in negligent danger. Cheer your heart;

Be you not troubled with the time, which drives

O'er your content these strong necessities, But let determin'd things to destiny Hold unbewail'd their way. Welcome to Rome; Nothing more dear to me. You are abus'd Beyond the mark of thought, and the high gods, To do you justice, make their ministers Of us and those that love you. Best of comfort.

Welcome, ladv. 🦠 Agr.

ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA

Mæc. Welcome, dear madam. Each heart in Rome does love and pity you; Only th' adulterous Antony, most large In his abominations, turns you off, And gives his potent regiment to a trull That noises it against us.

Octa. Is it so, sir? Sister, welcome. Most certain.

Pray you My dear'st Be ever known to patience. sister! [Exeunt.

Eno. But why, why, why?

these wars.

And say'st it is not fit.

Well, is it, is it? Eno. Cleo. Is't not denounc'd against us? Why should not we

Be there in person?

Eno. [Aside] Well, I could reply: If we should serve with horse and mares together

The horse were merely lost; the mares would bear

A soldier and his horse.

What is't you say? Cleo. Eno. Your presence needs must puzzle Antonv:

Take from his heart, take from his brain, from 's time.

What should not then be spar'd. He is already Traduc'd for levity; and 'tis said in Rome That Photinus an eunuch and your maids Manage this war.

Cleo. Sink Rome, and their tongues rot That speak against us! A charge we bear i' th' war.

And, as the president of my kingdom, will Appear there for a man. Speak not against it:

I will not stay behind.

Enter ANTONY and CANIDIUS.

Nay, I have done. Here comes the Emperor. Is it not strange, Canidius, That from Tarentum and Brundusium He could so quickly cut the Ionian sea, And take in Toryne?-You have heard on't, sweet?

Cleo. Celerity is never more admir'd Than by the negligent.

A good rebuke, 25 Which might have well becom'd the best of

To taunt at slackness. Canidius, we Will fight with him by sea.

Cleo. By sea! What else? Can. Why will my lord do so?

For that he dares us to 't. Ant. Eno. So hath my lord dar'd him to single fight.

Can. Ay, and to wage this battle at Pharsalia, Where Cæsar fought with Pompey. But these offers. Which serve not for his vantage, he shakes off:

And so should you.

Your ships are not well mann'd: Your mariners are muleteers, reapers. people

Cleo. I will be even with thee, doubt it Ingross'd by swift impress. In Casar's fleet Are those that often have 'gainst Pompey fought:

Cleo. Thou hast forspoke my being in Their ships are yare; yours heavy. No disgrace Shall fall you for refusing him at sea. Being prepar'd for land.

Ant. By sea, by sea. 40 Eno. Most worthy sir, you therein throw

The absolute soldiership you have by land: Distract your army, which doth most consist

Of war-mark'd footmen: leave unexecuted

Your own renowned knowledge: forgo

The way which promises assurance; and Give up yourself merely to chance and hazard

From firm security.

I'll fight at sea. Ant.

Cleo. I have sixty sails, Cæsar none better.

Ant. Our overplus of shipping will we burn. And, with the rest full-mann'd, from th' head of Actium Beat th' approaching Cæsar. But if we fail, We then can do't at land.

Enter a Messenger.

Thy business?

Mess. The news is true, my lord: he is descried;

Cæsar has taken Toryne. Ant. Can he be there in person? 'Tis impossible-Strange that his power should be. Canidius, Our nineteen legions thou shalt hold by land, And our twelve thousand horse. We'll to our ship. Away, my Thetis!

Enter a Soldier.

How now, worthy soldier? 60 Sold. O noble Emperor, do not fight by sea;

Trust not to rotten planks. Do you misdoubt

This sword and these my wounds? Let th'
Egyptians

And the Phoenicians go a-ducking; we 64
Have us'd to conquer standing on the earth
And fighting foot to foot.

Well. well—away.

Well, well—away. [Exeunt Aniony, Cleopatra, and Ênobarbus. Sold. By Hercules, I think I am i' th' right.

Can. Soldier, thou art; but his whole action grows

Not in the power on't. So our leader's led, And we are women's men.

Sold. You keep by land
The legions and the horse whole, do you not?

Can. Marcus Octavius, Marcus Justerus, Publicola, and Cælius are for sea; But we keep whole by land. This speed of

Cæsar's

Carries beyond belief.
Sold. While he was yet in Rome,
His power went out in such distractions as Beguil'd all spies.

Can. Who's his lieutenant, hear you? Sold. They say one Taurus.

Sold. They say one Taurus.

Can. Well I know the man.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. The Emperor calls Canidius.

Can. With news the time's with labour and throes forth

Each minute some.

SCENE VIII. A plain near Actium.

Enter CÆSAR, with his Army, marching.

Cæs. Taurus!

Taur. My lord?
Cæs. Strike not by land; keep whole;
provoke not battle

Till we have done at sea. Do not exceed 4 The prescript of this scroll. Our fortune lies Upon this jump. [Exeunt.

Scene IX. Another part of the plain.

Enter ANTONY and ENOBARBUS.

Ant. Set we our squadrons on youd side o' th' hill.

In eye of Cæsar's battle; from which place We may the number of the ships behold, And so proceed accordingly. [Exeunt.

Scene X. Another part of the plain.

Canidius marcheth with his land Army one way over the stage, and Taurus, the Lieutenant of Cæsar, the other way. After their going in is heard the noise of a sea-fight.

Alarum. Enter Enobarbus.

Eno. Naught, naught, all naught! I can behold no longer.

Th' Antoniad, the Egyptlan admiral, With all their sixty, fly and turn the rudder. To see't mine eyes are blasted.

Enter Scarus.

Scar. Gods and goddesses, All the whole synod of them!

Eno. What's thy passion? 5 Scar. The greater cantle of the world is lost

With very ignorance; we have kiss'd away Kingdoms and provinces.

Eno. How appears the fight?
Scar. On our side like the token'd pestilence,

Where death is sure. You ribaudred nag of Egypt— 10 Whom leprosy o'ertake!—i' th' midst o'

th' fight,
When vantage like a pair of twins appear'd,
Both as the same, or rather ours the elder—
The breese upon her, like a cow in June—
Hoists salls and flies.

Eno. That I beheld; Mine eyes did sicken at the sight and could not Endure a further view.

Scar. She once being loof'd,
The noble ruin of her magic, Antony,
Claps on his sea-wing, and, like a doting mallard.

Leaving the fight in height, flies after her. I never saw an action of such shame; Experience, manhood, honour, ne'er before Did violate so itself.

Eno. Alack, alack!

Enter CANIDIUS.

Can. Our fortune on the sea is out of breath, 25
And sinks most lamentably. Had our

general
Been what he knew himself, it had gone well.

O, he has given example for our flight Most grossly by his own!

Eno. Ay, are you thereabouts?
Why then, good night indeed.

Can. Toward Peloponnesus are they fled.

Scar. 'Tis easy to't; and there I will attend

What further comes.

Can. To Cæsar will I render My legions and my horse; six kings already Show me the way of yielding.

Scene XI. Alexandria. Cleopatra's palace. Enter Antony with Attendants.

Ant. Hark! the land bids me tread no more upon't;

It is asham'd to bear me. Friends, come hither.

I am so lated in the world that I

Have lost my way for ever. I have a ship Laden with gold; take that; divide it.

And make your peace with Cæsar.

All. Fly? Not we!
Ant. I have fled myself, and have instructed cowards

To run and show their shoulders. Friends, be gone:

I have myself resolv'd upon a course
Which has no need of you; be gone.
My treasure's in the harbour, take it. O,
I follow'd that I blush to look upon.
My very hairs do mutiny; for the white Reprove the brown for rashness, and they them

For fear and doting. Friends, be gone;
you shall

Have letters from me to some friends that will Sweep your way for you. Pray you look not sad,

Nor make replies of loathness; take the

Which my despair proclaims. Let that be

Which leaves itself. To the sea-side straight way.

I will possess you of that ship and treasure. Leave me, I pray, a little; pray you now; Nay, do so, for indeed I have lost command; Therefore I pray you. I'll see you by and by. ISits down.

Enter CLEOPATRA, led by CHARMIAN and IRAS, EROS following.

Eros. Nay, gentle madam, to him! Comfort him.

Iras. Do, most dear Queen. Char. Do? Why, what else? Cleo. Let me sit down. O Juno!

Ant. No, no, no, no, no. Eros. See you here, sir ?

Ant. O, fie, fie, fie! Char. Madam!

Iras. Madam, O good Empress!

Eros. Sir, sir!
Ant. Yes, my lord, yes. He at Philippi

His sword e'en like a dancer, while I struck
The lean and wrinkled Cassius; and 'twas I
That the mad Brutus ended; he alone
Dealt on lieutenantry, and no practice had
In the brave squares of war. Yet now—no matter.

Cleo. Ah, stand by !

Eros. The Queen, my lord, the Queen!

Iras. Go to him, madam, speak to him.

He is unqualitied with very shame.

Cleo. Well then, sustain me. O! 45
Eros. Most noble sir, arise; the Queen approaches.

Her head's declin'd, and death will seize her but

Your comfort makes the rescue.

Ant. I have offended reputation—A most unnoble swerving.

Eros. Sir, the Queen. 50
Ant. O, whither hast thou led me, Egypt?
See

How I convey my shame out of thine eyes

By looking back what I have left behind 'Stroy'd in dishonour.

Cleo. O my lord, my lord, 54 Forgive my fearful sails! I little thought You would have followed.

Ant. Egypt, thou knew'st too well My heart was to thy rudder tied by th' strings,

And thou shouldst tow me after. O'er my spirit

Thy full supremacy thou knew'st, and that Thy beck might from the bidding of the gods

Command me.

Cleo. O, my pardon!

Ant. Now I must
To the young man send humble treaties, dodge

And palter in the shifts of lowness, who With half the bulk o' th' world play'd as I pleas'd,

Making and marring fortunes. You did know

How much you were my conqueror, and that

My sword, made weak by my affection, would

Obev it on all cause.

Cleo. Pardon, pardon! Ant. Fall not a tear, I say; one of them rates

All that is won and lost. Give me a kiss; 70
Even this repays me.

We sent our schoolmaster; is 'a come back? Love, I am full of lead. Some wine,

Within there, and our viands! Fortune knows

We scorn her most when most she offers blows. [Exeunt.

Scene XII. Cæsar's camp in Egypt.

Enter Cæsar, Agrippa, Dolabella, Thyreus, with Others.

Cæs. Let him appear that's come from Antony.

Know you him?

Dol. Cæsar, 'tis his schoolmaster:

An argument that he is pluck'd, when hither

He sends so poor a pinion of his wing. Which had superfluous kings for messengers Lord of his reason. What though you Not many moons gone by.

Enter EUPHRONIUS, Ambassador from Antonv.

Cæs. Approach, and speak. Eub. Such as I am, I come from Antony. I was of late as petty to his ends As is the morn-dew on the myrtle leaf

To his grand sea.

Be't so. Declare thine office. 10 Cæs. Eup. Lord of his fortunes he salutes thee. and Requires to live in Egypt; which not granted,

He lessens his requests and to thee sues To let him breathe between the heavens and earth,

A private man in Athens. This for him. 15 Next. Cleopatra does confess thy greatness, Submits her to thy might, and of thee craves The circle of the Ptolemies for her heirs. Now hazarded to thy grace.

For Antony, Cæs. I have no ears to his request. The Queen 20 Of audience nor desire shall fail, so she From Egypt drive her all-disgraced friend, Or take his life there. This if she perform, She shall not sue unheard. So to them both. Eup. Fortune pursue thee!

Bring him through the bands. [Exit Euphronius. [To Thyreus] To try thy eloquence, now 'tis time. Dispatch; From Antony win Cleopatra, Promise, And in our name, what she requires: add more, From thine invention, offers. Women are May be a coward's, whose ministers would not

In their best fortunes strong: but want will perjure The ne'er-touch'd vestal. Try thy cunning, Thyreus;

Make thine own edict for thy pains, which

Will answer as a law.

Thyr. Cæsar, I go.

Cæs. Observe how Antony becomes his

And what thou think'st his very action speaks In every power that moves.

Thyr. Cæsar, I shall. [Exeunt.

Scene XIII. Alexandria. Cleopatra's palace.

Enter CLEOPATRA, ENOBARBUS, CHARMIAN. and IRAS.

Cleo. What shall we do, Enobarbus? Eno.

Cleo. Is Antony or we in fault for this F Eno. Antony only, that would make his will fled From that great face of war, whose several ranges Frighted each other?

Why should he follow?

The itch of his affection should not then Have nick'd his captainship, at such a point.

When half to half the world oppos'd, he being

The mered question. 'Twas a shame no less Than was his loss, to course your flying flags And leave his navy gazing.

Prithee, peace. Cleo.

Enter EUPHRONIUS, the Ambassador: with ANTONY.

Ant. Is that his answer?

Eup. Ay, my lord.
Ant. The Queen shall then have courtesy.

Will yield us up. Eup.

He says so. Ant. Let her know't. To the boy Cæsar send this grizzled head. And he will fill thy wishes to the brim

With principalities. That head, my lord? Cleo. Ant. To him again. Tell him he wears the rose

Of youth upon him; from which the world should note

Something particular. His coin, ships, legions, prevail

Under the service of a child as soon As i' th' command of Cæsar. I dare him therefore To lay his gay comparisons apart, And answer me declin'd, sword against sword. Ourselves alone. I'll write it. Follow me.

[Exeunt Antony and Euphronius. Eno. [Aside] Yes, like enough high-battled Cæsar will Unstate his happiness, and be stag'd to th' show

Against a sworder! I see men's judgments are

A parcel of their fortunes, and things out-

Do draw the inward quality after them, To suffer all alike. That he should dream,

Knowing all measures, the full Cæsar will 35 Answer his emptiness! Cæsar, thou hast subdu'd Think, and die. His judgment too.

Enter a Servant.

Serv. A messenger from Cæsar. women!

nose

That kneel'd unto the buds. Admit him, [Exit Servant. sir.

Eno. [Aside] Mine honesty and I begin to square.

The loyalty well held to fools does make Our faith mere folly. Yet he that can endure

To follow with allegiance a fall'n lord Does conquer him that did his master conquer,

And earns a place i' th' story.

Enter THYREUS.

Cleo. Cæsar's will?

Hear it apart. Thyr.

Cleo. None but friends: say boldly. Thyr. So, haply, are they friends to Antony.

Eno. He needs as many, sir, as Cæsar has, Or needs not us. If Cæsar please, our master

Will leap to be his friend. For us, you know Whose he is we are, and that is Cæsar's, Thyr.

Thus then, thou most renown'd: Cæsar entreats

Not to consider in what case thou stand'st Further than he is Cæsar.

Go on. Right royal! 55 Thyr. He knows that you embrace not Antony yet. Antony

As you did love, but as you fear'd him. Cleo. 0!

Thyr. The scars upon your honour, therefore, he Does pity, as constrained blemishes, Not as deserv'd.

Cleo. He is a god, and knows 60 What is most right. Mine honour was not yielded,

But conquer'd merely.

Eno. [Aside] To be sure of that, I will ask Autony. Sir, sir, thou art so

That we must leave thee to thy sinking, for Thy dearest quit thee. [Exit. Thvr. Shall I say to Cæsar 65 What you require of him? For he partly begs To be desir'd to give. It much would please

That of his fortunes you should make a staff To lean upon. But it would warm his spirits To hear from me you had left Antony, 70 And put yourself under his shroud, The universal landlord.

Cleo.

Thyr. My name is Thyreus.

Most kind messenger. Cleo. Say to great Cæsar this: in deputation Cleo. What, no more ceremony? See, my I kiss his conquiring hand. Tell him I am prompt

Against the blown rose may they stop their To lay my crown at 's feet, and there to kneel.

Tell him from his all-obeying breath I hear The doom of Egypt.

'Tis your noblest course. Thyr. Wisdom and fortune combating together, If that the former dare but what it can, so No chance may shake it. Give me grace to lay

My duty on your hand.

Cleo. Your Cæsar's father oft. When he hath mus'd of taking kingdoms in. Bestow'd his lips on that unworthy place. As it rain'd kisses.

Re-enter ANTONY and ENOBARBUS.

Ant. Favours, by Jove that thunders! What art thou, fellow?

Thyr.One that but performs The bidding of the fullest man, and worthiest

To have command obey'd.

Eno. [Aside] You will be whipt. Ant. Approach there .-- Ah, you kite !--Now, gods and devils!

Authority melts from me. Of late, when I cried 'Ho! Like boys unto a muss, kings would start forth And cry 'Your will?' Have you no ears?

I am

Enter Servants.

Take hence this Jack and whip him. Eno. 'Tis better playing with a lion's whelp

Than with an old one dving.

Ant. Moon and stars! os Whip him. Were't twenty of the greatest tributaries

That do acknowledge Cæsar, should I find them

So saucy with the hand of she here-what's her name

Since she was Cleopatra? Whip him, fellows.

Till like a boy you see him cringe his face, And whine aloud for mercy. Take him hence.

Thyr. Mark Antony-

Ant. Tug him away. Being whipt, Bring him again: the Jack of Cæsar's shall Bear us an errand to him.

[Exeunt Servants with Thyreus. You were half blasted ere I knew you. Ha! Have I my pillow left unpress'd in Rome, Forborne the getting of a lawful race, What's your name? And by a gem of women, to be abus'd

By one that looks on feeders?

Cleo. Good my lord-Ant. You have been a boggler ever. 110 But when we in our viciousness grow hard-

O misery on't !- the wise gods seel our eyes, Hence with thy stripes, be gone. In our own filth drop our clear judgments, make us

Adore our errors, laugh at's while we strut To our confusion.

O, is't come to this? Cleo. Ant. I found you as a morsel cold upon Dead Cæsar's trencher. Nay, you were a fragment

Of Cneius Pompey's, besides what hotter With one that ties his points? hours.

Unregist'red in vulgar fame, you have Luxuriously pick'd out; for I am sure, 120 should be.

You know not what it is.

Cleo. Wherefore is this? To let a fellow that will take Ant. rewards.

And say 'God quit you!' be familiar with My playfellow, your hand, this kingly seal And plighter of high hearts! O that I were Upon the hill of Basan to outroar

The horned herd! For I have savage cause, Have buried them for prey. And to proclaim it civilly were like A halter'd neck which does the hangman

thank

For being yare about him.

Re-enter a Servant with THYREUS.

Is he whipt?

Serv. Soundly, my lord.

Cried he? and begg'd 'a pardon? Serv. He did ask favour.

Ant. If that thy father live, let him repent

Thou wast not made his daughter: and be thou sorry

To follow Cæsar in his triumph, since 136 Thou hast been whipt for following him. Henceforth

The white hand of a lady fever thee! Shake thou to look on't. Get thee back to Cæsar;

Tell him thy entertainment; look thou say He makes me angry with him; for he Let's have one other gaudy night. Call to seems Proud and disdainful, harping on what I All my sad captains; fill our bowls once am.

Not what he knew I was. He makes me Let's mock the midnight bell.

And at this time most easy 'tis to do't, When my good stars, that were my former guides, Have empty left their orbs and shot their fires

Into th' abysm of hell. If he mislike My speech and what is done, tell him he Hipparchus, my enfranched bondman, whom

He may at pleasure whip or hang or torture. As he shall like, to quit me. Uige it thou.

[Exit Thyreus. Cleo. Have you done yet?

Ant. Alack, our terrene moon Is now eclips'd, and it portends alone The fall of Antony.

Cleo. I must stay his time. 155 Ant. To flatter Cæsar, would you mingle eves Cleo. Not know me vet? Ant. Cold-hearted toward me?

Cleo. Ah, dear, if I be so. Though you can guess what temperance From my cold heart let heaven engender hail.

And poison it in the source, and the first stone

Drop in my neck; as it determines, so Dissolve my life! The next Cæsarion smite! Till by degrees the memory of my womb. Together with my brave Egyptians all, 164 By the discandying of this pelleted storm, Lie graveless, till the flies and gnats of Nile

I am satisfied.

Cæsar sits down in Alexandria, where I will oppose his fate. Our force by land Hath nobly held; our sever'd navy too 170 Have knit again, and fleet, threat'ning most sea-like.

Where hast thou been, my heart? Dost thou hear, lady?

If from the field I shall return once more To kiss these lips, I will appear in blood. I and my sword will earn our chronicle. 175 There's hope in't vet.

Cleo. That's my brave lord!

Ant. I will be treble-sinew'd, hearted, breath'd.

And fight maliciously. For when mine hours

Were nice and lucky, men did ransom lives Of me for jests; but now I'll set my teeth, And send to darkness all that stop me.

Come, me

more:

It is my birthday. 185 Cleo. I had thought t'have held it poor; but since my lord

Is Antony again, I will be Cleopatra.

Ant. We will yet do well.

Cleo. Call all his noble captains to my lord.

Ant. Do so, we'll speak to them; and to-night I'll force 190

1181

The wine peep through their scars. Come Shall make it live again. Woo't thou fight on, my queen,

There's sap in't vet. The next time I do fight

I'll make death love me : for I will contend Even with his pestilent scythe.

Eno. Now he'll outstare the lightning. To be furious

Is to be frighted out of fear, and in that mood

The dove will peck the estridge; and I see

A diminution in our captain's brain Restores his heart. When valour preys on reason.

It eats the sword it fights with. I will seek Some way to leave him. [Exit.

ACT FOUR

Scene I. Cæsar's camp before Alexandria.

Enter Cæsar, Agrippa, and Mæcenas. with his Army; Cæsar reading a letter.

Cæs. He calls me boy, and chides as he had power

To beat me out of Egypt. My messenger personal combat.

Cæsar to Antony. Let the old ruffian know I have many other ways to die, meantime Laugh at his challenge.

Mæc. Cæsar must think. 6 When one so great begins to rage, he's hunted

Even to falling. Give him no breath, but now

Make boot of his distraction. Never anger Made good guard for itself.

Cæs. Let our best heads Know that to-morrow the last of many battles

We mean to fight. Within our files there

Of those that serv'd Mark Antony but late Enough to fetch him in. See it done: And feast the army; we have store to do't, And they have earn'd the waste. Poor Antony! [Exeunt.

well?

Eno. I'll strike, and cry ' Take all'. Ant. Well said; come on.

Call forth my household servants; let's to-night

[Exeunt all but Enobarbus. Be bounteous at our meal.

Enter three or four Servitors.

Give me thy hand, 10 Thou hast been rightly honest. So hast thou:

Thou, and thou, and thou. You have serv'd me well,

And kings have been your fellows.

Cleo. [Aside to Enobarbus] What means this?

Eno. [Aside to Cleopatra] 'Tis one of those odd tricks which sorrow shoots Out of the mind.

Ant. And thou art honest too. 14 I wish I could be made so many men, And all of you clapp'd up together in An Antony, that I might do you service So good as you have done.

Serv. The gods forbid! Ant. Well, my good fellows, wait on me to-night.

He hath whipt with rods; dares me to Scant not my cup,, and make as much of me

As when mine empire was your fellow too, And suffer'd my command.

Cleo. [Aside to Enobarbus] What does he mean?

Eno. [Aside to Cleopatra] To make his followers weep.

Ant. Tend me to-night: May be it is the period of your duty. Haply you shall , ot see me more; or if, A mangled shadow. Perchance to-morrow You'll serve another master. I look on vou

As one that takes his leave. Mine house friends,

I turn you not away; but, like a master 30 Married to your good service, stay till death. Tend me to-night two hours, I ask no more. And the gods yield you for't!

Eno. What mean you, sir, To give them this discomfort? Look, they weep;

And I, an ass, am onion-ey'd. For shame! Transform us not to women.

Ant. Ho, ho, ho i Now the witch take me if I meant it thus! Grace grow where those drops fall! My hearty friends.

You take me in too dolorous a sense; Eno. He thinks, being twenty times of For I spake to you for your comfort, did desire you To burn this night with torches. Know, my hearts, I hope well of to-morrow, and will lead you Where rather I'll expect victorious life

Than death and honour. Let's to supper, come.

And drown consideration.

Scene III. Alexandria. Before Cleobatra's Enter a Company of Soldiers.

1 Sold. Brother, good night. To-morrow is the day.

2 Sold. It will determine one way. Fare vou well.

Heard you of nothing strange about the streets?

1 Sold. Nothing. What news?

2 Sold. Belike 'tis but a rumour. Good night to you.

1 Sold. Well, sir, good night.

They meet other Soldiers.

2 Sold. Soldiers, have careful watch.

1 Sold. And you. Good night, good night. [The two companies separate and place themselves in every corner of the stage.

2 Sold. Here we. And if to-morrow Our navy thrive. I have an absolute hope Our landmen will stand up. 3 Sold. 'Tis a brave army,

And full of purpose.

[Music of the hautboys is under the stage. 2 Sold. Peace, what noise? 3 Sold. List, list!

2 Sold. Hark!

3 Sold. Music i' th' air.

4 Sold. Under the earth. 5 Sold. It signs well, does it not?

4 Sold.

No. Sold. Peace, I say!

What should this mean? 2 Sold. 'Tis the god Hercules, whom Antony lov'd.

Now leaves him.

3 Sold. Walk; let's see if other watchmen Do hear what we do.

2 Sold. How now, masters! 19 Soldiers. [Speaking together] How now! How now! Do you hear this?

1 Sold. Ay; is't not strange? 3 Sold. Do you hear, masters? Do you hear?

1 Sold. Follow the noise so far as we have quarter:

Let's see how it will give off. Soldiers. Content. 'Tis strange. [Exeunt.

Scene IV. Alexandria. Cleopatra's palace.

Enter ANTONY and CLEOPATRA, CHARMIAN, IRAS, with Others.

Ant. Eros! mine armour, Eros! Cleo Sleep a little. Ant. No, my chuck. Eros! Come, mine armour, Eros!

Enter Eros with armour.

Come, good fellow, put mine iron on. If fortune be not ours to-day, it is Because we brave her. Come.

Cleo. Nay, I'll help too. What's this for ?

Ant. Ah, let be, let be! Thou are The armourer of my heart. False, false: this, this.

Cleo. Sooth, la, I'll help. Thus it must be, Ant. Well, well; We shall thrive now. Seest thou, my good fellow? Go put on thy defences.

Eros. Briefly, sir. Cleo. Is not this buckled well?

Raiely, rarely! He that unbuckles this, till we do please To daff't for our repose, shall hear a storm. Thou fumblest, Eros, and my queen's a squire

More tight at this than thou. Dispatch, O. love,

That thou couldst see my wars to-day, and knew'st

The royal occupation! Thou shouldst see A workman in't.

Enter an armed Soldier.

Good-morrow to thee. Welcome. Thou look'st like him that knows a warlike charge.

To business that we love we rise betime, 20 And go to't with delight.

Sold. A thousand, sir. Early though't be, have on their riveted trim.

And at the port expect you.

[Shout. Flourish of trumpets within.

Enter Captains and Soldiers.

Capt. The morn is fair. Good morrow, General.

All. Good morrow, General. Ant. 'Tis well blown, lads. 25 This morning, like the spirit of a youth That means to be of note, begins betimes. Come, give me that. This way. So, so.

Well said. Fare thee well, dame, whate'er becomes of

This is a soldier's kiss. Rebukeable. And worthy shameful check it were, to stand On more mechanic compliment; I'll leave thee

Now like a man of steel. You that will fight,

Follow me close; I'll bring you to't. Adieu. [Exeunt Antony, Eros, Captains and Soldiers.

Char. Please you retire to your chamber? Cleo. Lead me.

1183

He goes forth gallantly. That he and Cæsar might Determine this great war in single fight! Then, Antony—but now. Well, on.

[Exeunt.

Scene V. Alexandria. Antony's camp. Trumpets sound. Enter Anton x and Eros, a Soldier meeting them.

Sold. The gods make this a happy day to Antony!

Ant. Would thou and those thy scars had once prevail'd

To make me fight at land!

Sold. Hadst thou done so
The kings that have revolted, and the soldier

That has this morning left thee, would have still 5

Followed thy heels.

Ant. Who's gone this morning? Sold. Who?

One ever near thee. Call for Enobarbus, He shall not hear thee; or from Cæsar's camp

Say 'I am none of thine'.

Ant. What say'st thou? Sold. Sir,

He is with Cæsar.

Eros. Sir, his chests and treasure He has not with him.

Ant. Is he gone?

Sold. Most certain.

Ant. Go, Eros, send his treasure after;
do it:

Detain no jot, I charge thee. Write to

I will subscribe—gentle adieus and greetings;

Say that I wish he never find more cause 15 To change a master. O, my fortunes have Corrupted honest men! Dispatch. Enobarbus! [Exeunt.

Scene VI. Alexandria. Cæsar's camp. Flourish. Enter Agrippa. Cæsar, with Flourish. Enter Agrippa, Cæsar, with Dolabella and Enobarbus.

Cæs. Go forth, Agrippa, and begin the fight.

Our will is Antony be took alive; Make it so known.

ake it so known. Agr. Cæsar, I shall.

Cæs. The time of universal peace is near.
Prove this a prosp'rous day, the three-nook'd world

6

Shall bear the olive freely.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Antony
Is come into the field.

Cæs. Go charge Agrippa
Plant those that have revolted in the vant,

That Antony may seem to spend his fury to Upon himself. [Exeunt all but Enobarbus. Eno, Alexas did revolt and went to

Jewry on Affairs of Antony; there did dissuade Great Herod to incline himself to Cæsar

And leave his master Antony. For this pains

Cæsar hath hang'd him. Canidius and the

No honourable trust. I have done ill

Inat fell away have entertainment, but No honourable trust. I have done ill, Of which I do accuse myself so sorely That I will joy no more.

Enter a Soldier of Cæsar's.

Sold. Enobarbus, Antony 20 Hath after thee sent all thy treasure, with His bounty overplus. The messenger Came on my guard, and at thy tent is now Unloading of his mules. Eno. I give it you.

Sold. Mock not, Enobarbus.

1 tell you true. Best you saf'd the bringer
Out of the host. I must attend mine office,

Out of the host. I must attend mine office, Or would have done't myself. Your emperor Continues still a Jove. [Exit.

Eno. I am alone the villain of the earth, And feel I am so most. O Antony, 3x Thou mine of bounty, how wouldst thou have paid

My better service, when my turpitude Thou dost so crown with gold! This blows my heart.

If swift thought break it not, a swifter mean Shall outstrike thought; but thought will do't, I feel.

I fight against thee? No! I will go seek Some ditch wherein to die; the foul'st best fits

My latter part of life.

[Exit.

Scene VII. Field of battle between the camps.

Alarum. Drums and trumpets. Enter AGRIPPA and Others.

Agr. Retire. We have engag'd ourselves too far.

Cæsar himself has work, and our oppression Exceeds what we expected. [Excunt.

Alarums. Enter ANTONY, and SCARUS wounded.

Scar. O my brave Emperor, this is fought indeed!

Had we done so at first, we had droven them home

With clouts about their heads.

Ant. Thou bleed'st apace. Scar. I had a wound here that was like a T, Go charge Agrippa But now 'tis made an H. evolted in the vant, Ant. They do retire.

Scar. We'll beat 'em into bench-holes. have vet

Room for six scotches more.

Enter Eros.

And snatch 'em up, as we take hares, behind.

'Tis sport to maul a runner.

I will reward thee Ant. Once for thy sprightly comfort, and tenfold For thy good valour. Come thee on.

Scar, I'll halt after. [Exeunt.

Scene VIII. Under the walls of Alexandria. Alarum. Enter ANTONY, again in a march; SCARUS with Others.

Ant. We have beat him to his camp. Run Applauding our approach. one before

And let the Queen know of our gests. To-morrow,

Before the sun shall see's, we'll spill the blood

That has to-day escap'd. I thank you all: For doughty-handed are you, and have tought

Not as you serv'd the cause, but as't had been

Each man's like mine; you have shown all Hectors.

Enter the city, clip your wives, your friends, Tell them your feats; whilst they with joyful tears

Wash the congealment from your wounds and kiss

The honour'd gashes whole.

Enter CLFOPATRA, attended.

[To Scarus] Give me thy hand. To this great fairy I'll commend thy acts,

Make her thanks bless thee. O thou day o' th' world, Chain mine arm'd neck. Leap thou, attire and all, Through proof of harness to my heart, and there

Ride on the pants triumphing.

Lord of lords! O infinite virtue, com'st thou smiling from The world's great snare uncaught?

Mine nightingale, Ant. We have beat them to their beds. What, girl! though grey

Do something mingle with our younger brown, yet ha' we

A brain that nourishes our nerves, and can Get goal for goal of youth. Behold this man: Commend unto his lips thy favouring hand---

Kiss it, my waitior-he hath fought today

As if a god in hate of mankind had Destroyed in such a shape.

Cleo. I'll give thee, friend, Eros. They are beaten, sir, and our An armour all of gold; it was a king's.

Ant. He has deserv'd it, were it carbuncled

Like holy Phœbus' car. Give me thy hand. Through Alexandria make a jolly march: Bear our hack'd targets like the men that owe them.

Had our great palace the capacity To camp this host, we all would sup together,

And drink carouses to the next day's fate, Which promises royal peril. Trumpeters, 35 With brazen din blast you the city's ear; Make mingle with our rattling tabourines. That heaven and earth may strike their sounds together.

[Exeunt.

Scene IX. Cæsar's camb.

Enter a Centurion and his Company: ENOBARBUS follows.

Cent. If we be not reliev'd within this hour.

We must return to th' court of guard. The

Is shiny, and they say we shall embattle By th' second hour i' th' morn. 1 Watch. This last day was A shrewd one to's.

Eno. O, bear me witness, night-2 Watch. What man is this?

1 Watch Stand close and list him. Eno. Be witness to me, O thou blessed moon,

When men revolted shall upon record Bear hateful memory, poor Enobarbus did Before thy face repent!

Cent. Enobarbus? 2 Watch. Peace! 10

Hark turther.

Eno. O sovereign mistress of true melancholy.

The poisonous damp of night disponge upon me,

That life, a very rebel to my will,

May hang no longer on me. Throw my heart

Against the flint and hardness of my fault.

Which, being dried with grief, will break to powder,

And finish all foul thoughts. O Antony, Nobler than my revolt is infamous, Forgive me in thine own particular, 20 But let the world rank me in register A master-leaver and a fugitive !

O Antony! O Antony! 1 Watch. Let's speak to him.

Cent. Let's hear him, for the things he speaks May concern Cæsar.

Let's do so. But he sleeps. 2 Watch. Cent. Swoons rather: for so bad a prayer as his

Was never yet for sleep.

1 Watch. Go we to him.

2 Watch. Awake, sir, awake; speak to us. 1 Watch. Hear you, sir?

Cent. The hand of death hath raught him.

[Drums afar off] Hark! the drums Demurely wake the sleepers. Let us bear him

To th' court of guard; he is of note. Our hour

Is fully out.

2 Watch. Come on, then:

He may recover yet. [Exeunt with the body.

Scene X. Between the two camps.

Enter ANTONY and SCARUS, with their Army.

Ant. Their preparation is to-day by sea: We please them not by land.

For both, my lord. Scar. Ant. I would they'd fight i' th' fire or i' th' air: We'd fight there too. But this it is, our foot Upon the hills adjoining to the city Shall stay with us-Order for sea is given;

They have put forth the haven-Where their appointment we may best discover

And look on their endeavour. [Exeunt.

SCENE XI. Between the cambs.

Enter CÆSAR and his Army.

Cæs. But being charg'd, we will be still by land.

Which, as I take't, we shall; for his best

Is forth to man his galleys. To the vales, And hold our best advantage. Exeunt.

Scene XII. A hill near Alexandria.

Enter ANTONY and SCARUS.

Ant. Yet they are not join'd. Where yond pine does stand

I shall discover all. I'll bring thee word Straight how 'tis like to go. [Exit. Swallows have built

In Cleopatra's sails their nests. The augurers Say they know not, they cannot tell; look grimly,

And dare not speak their knowledge. Antony

Is valiant and dejected; and by starts His fretted fortunes give him hope and fear Of what he has and has not.

[Alarum afar off, as at a sea-fight.

Re-enter ANTONY.

Ant. All is lost!

This foul Egyptian hath betrayed me. My fleet hath yielded to the foe, and vonder cast their caps up and carouse Thev together

Like friends long lost. Triple-turn'd whore! 'tis thou

Hast sold me to this novice; and my heart Makes only wars on thee. Bid them all fly: For when I am reveng'd upon my charm, I have done all. Bid them all fly; begone. [Exit Scarus.

O sun, thy uprise shall I see no more! Fortune and Antony part here; even here Do we shake hands. All come to this? The

That spaniel'd me at heels, to whom I gave Their wishes, do discandy, melt their sweets On blossoming Cæsar; and this pine is bark'd That overtopp'd them all. Betrav'd I am. O this false soul of Egypt! this grave charm-Whose eye beck'd forth my wars and call'd them home,

Whose bosom was my crownet, my chief end-

Like a right gipsy hath at fast and loose Beguil'd me to the very heart of loss. What, Eros, Eros!

Enter CLEOPATRA.

Ah, thou spell! Avaunt! 30 Cleo. Why is my lord enrag'd against his love?

Ant. Vanish, or I shall give thee thy deserving

And blemish Cæsar's triumph. Let him take thee

And hoist thee up to the shouting plebeians; Follow his chariot, like the greatest spot 35 Of all thy sex: most monster-like, be shown

For poor'st diminutives, for doits, and let Patient Octavia plough thy visage up With her prepared nails. [Exit Cleopatra.

'Tis well th'art gone, If it be well to live; but better 'twere 40 Thou tell'st into my fury, for one death Might have prevented many. Eros, ho! The shirt of Nessus is upon me; teach me, Alcides, thou mine ancestor, thy rage; Let me lodge Lichas on the horns o' th' moon.

And with those hands that grasp'd the heaviest club

Subdue my worthiest self. The witch shall die.

To the young Roman boy she hath sold me, and I fall

Under this plot. She dies for't. Eros, ho! (Fxit.

SCENE XIII. Alexandria. Cleobatra's balace.

MARDIAN.

Cleo. Help me, my women. O. he is more mad

Than Telamon for his shield; the boar of Thessalv

Was never so emboss'd.

To th' monument! Char. There lock yourself, and send him word you are dead.

The soul and body rive not more in parting

Than greatness going off.

Cleo. To th' monument! Mardian, go tell him I have slain myself; Say that the last I spoke was 'Antony' And word it, prithee, piteously. Hence, Thy name so buried in her.

Mardian. And bring me how he takes my death. To th' monument! -! Exeunt.

Scene XIV. Cleobatra's balace.

Enter ANTONY and Eros.

Ant. Eros, thou yet behold'st me? Ay, noble lord. Eros. Ant. Sometime we see a cloud that's dragonish :

A vapour sometime like a bear or lion,

A tower'd citadel, a pendent rock. A forked mountain, or blue promontory 5 With trees upon't that nod unto the world

And mock our eyes with air. Thou hast seen these signs;

They are black vesper's pageants. Eros.

Ay, my lord. Ant. That which is now a horse, even with a thought

The rack dislimns, and makes it indistinct, As water is in water.

Eros. It does, my lord. Ant. My good knave Eros, now thy captain is Even such a body. Here I am Antony; Yet cannot hold this visible shape, my knave.

I made these wars for Egypt; and the Queen-

Whose heart I thought I had, for she had

Which, whilst it was mine, had annex'd unto't

A million moe, now lost—she, Eros, has Pack'd cards with Cæsar, and false-play'd my glory

Unto an enemy's triumph. Nay, weep not, gentle Eros; there is left us Ourselves to end ourselves.

Enter MARDIAN.

O, thy vile lady ! She has robb'd me of my sword.

No. Antony:

Enter CLEOPATRA, CHARMIAN, IRAS, and My mistress lov'd thee, and her fortunes mingled

With thine entirely.

Hence, saucy eunuch: peace! 25 She hath betray'd me, and shall die the death.

Mar. Death of one person can be paid but once,

And that she has discharg'd. What thou wouldst do

Is done unto thy hand. The last she spake Was 'Antony! most noble Antony! Then in the midst a tearing groan did break The name of Antony; it was divided Between her heart and lips. She rend'red life,

Ant. Dead then?

Dead. Ant. Unarm, Eros: the long day's task is done. And we must sleep. That thou depart'st hence safe

Does pay thy labour richly. Go.

Exit Mardian. Off, pluck off!

The sevenfold shield of Ajax cannot keep The battery from my heart. O, cleave, my sides!

Heart, once be stronger than thy continent, Crack thy fiail case. Apace, Eros, apace.-No more a soldier. Bruised pieces, go;

You have been nobly borne.—From me [Exit Eros. awhile.

I will o'ertake thee, Cleopatra, and Weep for my pardon. So it must be, for now

All length is torture. Since the torch is out, Lie down, and stray no farther. Now all labour

Mars what it does; yea, very force entangles

Itself with strength. Seal then, and all is done.

Eros !- I come, my queen.- Eros !- Stay for me;

Where souls do couch on flowers, we'll hand in hand,

And with our sprightly port make the ghosts gaze.

Dido and her Æneas shall want troops, And all the haunt be ours.—Come, Eros, Eros!

Re-enter Eros.

Eros. What would my lord?

Since Cleopatra died, 55 Ant. I have liv'd in such dishonour that the gods Detest my baseness. I, that with my sword Quarter'd the world, and o'er green Of Antony's death. [Kills himself. Ant. Thrice nobler than myself! Enter four or five of the Guard of Antony.

Bear me, good friends, where Cleopatra bides :

'Tis the last service that I shall command you.

All your true followers out.

Scene XV. Alexandria. A monument. Enter CLEOPATRA and her Maids aloft, with CHARMIAN and IRAS.

Cleo. O Charmian. I will never go from hence!

Char. Be comforted, dear madam.

No. I will not. All strange and terrible events are welcome, But comforts we despise; our size of sorrow, Proportion'd to our cause, must be as great As that which makes it.

Enter DIOMEDES, below.

How now! Is he dead? Dio. His death's upon him, but not dead. Look out o' th' other side your monument; His guard have brought him thither.

Enter, below, ANTONY, borne by the Guard.

Cleo. O sun.

Burn the great sphere thou mov'st in! Darkling stand

The varying shore o' th' world. O Antony, Antony, Antony! Help, Charmian; help, Iras, help;

Help, friends below! Let's draw him hither.

Peace! Not Cæsar's valour hath o'erthrown Antony, But Antony's hath triumph'd on itself. 15

Cleo. So it should be, that none but Antony

Should conquer Antony; but woe 'tis so! Ant. I am dying, Egypt, dying; only I here importune death awhile, until

I lay upon thy lips. Cleo.

I dare not, dear. Dear my lord, pardon! I date not. Lest I be taken. Not th' imperious show Of the full-fortun'd Cæsar ever shall Be brooch'd with me. If knife, drugs, serpents, have

Edge, sting, or operation, I am safe. Your wife Octavia, with her modest eyes And still conclusion, shall acquire no honous Demuring upon me. But come, come. Antony-

Help me, my women—we must draw thee up ;

Assist, good friends.

Ant. O, quick, or I am gone. Cleo. Here's sport indeed! How heavy weighs my lord!

Our strength is all gone into heaviness: That makes the weight. Had I great Juno's power, The strong-wing'd Mercury should fetch thee up,

And set thee by Jove's side. Yet come a little.

Wishers were ever fools. O come, come,

They heave Antony aloft to Cleopatra. And welcome, welcome! Die where thou hast ..v'd.

Quicken with kissing. Had my lips that power.

Thus would I wear them out.

A heavy sight! 40 Ant. I am dying, Egypt, dying.

Give me some wine, and let me speak a little.

Cleo. No, let me speak; and let me rail so high

That the false huswife Fortune break her wheel.

ACT FIVE

Scene I. Alexandria. Cæsar's camp.

Enter Cæsar, Agrippa, Dolabella, Mæ-CENAS, GALLUS, PROCULEIUS, and Others, his Council of War.

Cæs. Go to him, Dolabella, bid him yield; Being so frustrate, tell him he mocks The pauses that he makes.

Dol.

Enter DERCETAS with the sword of Antony.

Cæs. Wherefore is that? And what art thou that dar'st Appear thus to us?

Der. I am call'd Dercetas: 5 Mark Antony I serv'd, who best was worthy Best to be serv'd. Whilst he stood up and spoke.

He was my master, and I wore my life To spend upon his haters. If thou please To take me to thee, as I was to him I'll be to Cæsar; if thou pleasest not, I vield thee up my life.

Cæs. What is't thou say'st? Der. I say, O Cæsar, Antony is dead. Cæs. The breaking of so great a thing should make

A greater crack. The round world Should have shook lions into civil streets. And citizens to their dens. The death of Antony

Is not a single doom: in the name lay A moiety of the world.

He is dead, Cæsar, Not by a public minister of justice. Nor by a hired knife; but that self hand Which writ his honour in the acts it did Hath, with the courage which the heart did lend it.

Splitted the heart. This is his sword; I robb'd his wound of it; behold it stain'd With his most noble blood.

Cæs. Look you sad, friends? The gods rebuke me, but it is tidings To wash the eyes of kings.

And strange it is That nature must compel us to lament 29 Our most persisted deeds.

Mæc. His taints and honours Wag'd equal with him.

Agr. A rarer spirit never Did steer humanity. But you gods will give us

Some faults to make us men. Cæsar is touch'd.

Mæc. When such a spacious mirror's set before him,

He needs must see himself.

O Antony, I have follow'd thee to this! But we do

Diseases in our bodies. I must perforce Have shown to thee such a declining day Or look on thine; we could not stall together

In the whole world. But yet let me lament, With tears as sovereign as the blood of hearts.

That thou, my brother, my competitor In top of all design, my mate in empire, Friend and companion in the front of wa Cæsar, I shall. [Exit. The arm of mine own body, and the hea Where mine his thoughts did kindle—that our stais,

Unreconciliable, should divide
Our equalness to this. Hear me, good friends—

Enter an Egyptian.

But I will tell you at some meeter season. The business of this man looks out of him; We'll hear him what he says. Whence are you?

Egyp. A poor Egyptian, yet the Queen, my mistress,

Confin'd in all she has, her monument,

Of thy intents desires instruction,

That she preparedly may frame herself 55 To th' way she's forc'd to.

Cæs. Bid her have good heart. She soon shall know of us, by some of ours, How honourable and how kindly we 58 Determine for her; for Cæsar cannot learn

To be ungentle.

Egyp. So the gods preserve thee! [Exit. Cæs. Come hither, Proculeius. Go and

We purpose her no shame. Give her what comforts

The quality of her passion shall require, Lest, in her greatness, by some mortal

She do defeat us; for her life in Rome 65 Would be eternal in our triumph. Go, And with your speedlest bring us what she says.

And how you find of her.

Pro. Cæsar, I shall. [Extl. Cæs. Gallus, go you along. [Extl Gallus. Where's Dolabella.

To second Proculeius?

All. Dolabella!

Cæs. Let him alone, for I remember now How he's employ'd; he shall in time be ready.

Go with me to my tent, where you shall see How hardly I was drawn it to this war, How calm and gentle I proceeded still 75 In all my writings. Go with me, and see What I can show in this. [Exeunt.

Scene II. Alexandria. The monument. Fine: C. ... OPATRA, CHARMIAN, IRAS, and MARDIAN.

Cleo. My desolation does begin to make A better life. 'Tis paltry to be Cæsar: Not being Fortune, he's but Fortune's knave.

A minister of her will; and it is great To do that thing that ends all other deeds, Which shackles accidents and bolts up change,

Which sleeps, and never palates more the dug.

The beggar's nurse and Cæsar's.

Enter, to the gates of the monument, Pro-CULEIUS, GALLUS, and Soldiers.

Pro. Cæsar sends greeting to the Queen of Egypt,

And bids thee study on what fair demands Thou mean'st to have him grant thee.

Cleo. What's thy name? Pro. My name is Proculeius.

Cleo. Antony

Did tell me of you, bade me trust you; but I do not greatly care to be deceiv'd,

That have no use for trusting. If your master

Would have a queen his beggar, you must tell him That maiesty, to keep decorum, must

No less beg than a kingdom. If he please To give me conquer'd Egypt for my son, He gives me so much of mine own as I 20 Will kneel to him with thanks.

Pro.

Be of good cheer;
Y'are fall'n into a princely hand; fear nothing.

Make your full reference freely to my lord,
Who is so full of grace that it flows over
On all that need. Let me report to him 25
Your sweet dependency, and you shall find A conqueror that will pray in aid for kindness

Where he for grace is kneel'd to.

Cleo. Pray you tell him I am his fortune's vassal and I send him The greatness he has got. I hourly learn 30 A doctrine of obedience, and would gladly Look him i' ui' face.

Pro. This I'll report, dear lady. Have comfort, for I know your plight is pitied Of him that caus'd it.

Gal. You see how easily she may be surpris d. 35

[Here Proculeus and two of the Guard ascend the monument by a ladder placed against a window, and come behind cleopatra. Some of the Guard unbar and open the gates.

Guard her till Cæsar come. [Exit.

Iras. Royal Queen!
Char. O Cleopatra! thou art taken,
Queen!

Cleo. Quick, quick, good hands.

[Drawing a dagger.
Pro. Hold, worthy lady, hold,

[Disarms her. Do not yourself such wrong, who are in this Reliev'd, but not betray'd.

Cleo. What, of death too,

That rids our dogs of languish?

Pro.

Cleopatra.

Do not abuse my master's bounty by 43
Th' undoing of yourself. Let the world see
His nobleness well acted, which your death
Will never let come forth.

Cleo. Where art thou, death?

Come hither, come! Come, come, and take Crested the world. His voice was propertied a queen Worth many babes and beggars!

O, temperance, lady! Cleo. Sir, I will eat no meat; I'll not drink, sir;

If idle talk will once be necessary, I'll not sleep neither. This mortal house I'll ruin,

Do Cæsar what he can. Know, sir, that I Will not wait pinion'd at your master's court.

Enter DOLABELLA.

Dol. Proculeius.

What thou hast done thy master Cæsar

And he hath sent for thee. For the Queen, I'll take her to my guard.

So, Dolabella, It shall content me best. Be gentle to her. [To Cleopatra] To Cæsar I will speak what you shall please,

If you'll employ me to him.

Say I would die. 70 Ćleo. [Exeunt Proculeius and Soldiers. Dol. Most noble Empress, you have heard of me? Cleo. I cannot tell.

Dol. Assuredly you know me. Cleo. No matter, sir, what I have heard or known.

You laugh when boys or women tell their dreams:

Is't not your trick?

I understand not, madam. 75 Dol. Cleo. I dreamt there was an Emperor Antony-

I thank you, sir. 105 Cleo. Know you what Cæsar means to do with me?

Dol. I am loath to tell you what I would you knew.

Cleo. Nay, pray you, sir.

Dol. Though he be honourable-Cleo. He'll lead me, then, in triumph? Dol. Madam, he will. I know't.

[Flourish. Within. Make way there—Cæsar!

Enter CÆSAR; GALLUS, Proculeius. MÆCENAS. SELEUCUS, and others of his Train.

Cæs. Which is the Queen of Egypt? Dol. It is the Emperor, madam.

[Cleopatra kneels. Cæs. Arise, you shall not kneel.

A sun and moon, which kept their course I pray you, rise; rise, Egypt.

Sir, the gods Cleo. Will have it thus; my master and my lord I must obey

Take to you no hard thoughts. The record of what injuries you did us, 117 Though written in our flesh, we shall remember

As things but done by chance.

Sole sir o' th' world. Cleo. I cannot project mine own cause so well 120 To make it clear, but do confess I have Been laden with like frailties which before Have often sham'd our sex.

Cæs. Cleopatra, know We will extenuate rather than enforce. If you apply yourself to our intents-Which towards you are most gentle-you shall find

A benefit in this change: but if you seek To lay on me a cruelty by taking Antony's course, you shall bereave yourself Of my good purposes, and put your children

To that destruction which I'll guard them

If thereon you rely. I'll take my leave. Cleo. And may, through all the world. Tis yours, and we,

Your scutcheons and your signs of conquest, shall Hang in what place you please. Here, my good lord. 135 Cæs. You shall advise me in all for Cleopatra.

Cleo. This is the brief of money, plate, and jewels,

I am possess'd of. 'Tis exactly valued. Not petty things admitted. Where's Seleucus

Sel. Here, madam. Cleo. This is my treasurer: let him speak. my lord,

Upon his peril, that I have reserv'd To myself nothing. Speak the truth, Seleucus.

Sel. Madam, I had rather seal my lips than to my peril Speak that which is not.

What have I kept back? Cleo. Sel. Enough to purchase what you have made known.

Cæs. Nay, blush not, Cleopatra; approve

Your wisdom in the deed.

See, Cæsar! O, behold, How pomp is followed! Mine will now be yours;

And, should we shift estates, yours would be mine.

The ingratitude of this Seleucus does Even make me wild. O slave, of no more Be noble to myself.

Re-enter DOLABELLA.

Dol. Where's the Queen?

Char. Behold, sir. [Exit. Cleo. Dolabella! Dol. Madam, as thereto sworn by your command,

Which my love makes religion to obey, I tell you this: Cæsar through Syria Intends his journey, and within three days

You with your children will he send before.

Make your best use of this; I have perform'd

Your pleasure and my promise.

Cleo. Dolabella, I shall remain your debtor.

Dol. I your servant.
Adieu, good Queen; I must attend on Cæsar. 205

Cleo. Farewell, and thanks.

[Exit Dolabella.

Now, Iras, what think'st thou?

Thou an Egyptian puppet shall be shown In Rome as well as I. Mechanic slaves, With greasy aprons, rules, and hammers, shall Uplift us to the view; in their thick breaths,

Rank of gross diet, shall we be enclouded, And forc'd to drink their vapour.

Iras. The gods forbid!
Cleo. Nay, 'tis most certain, Iras. Saucy lictors

Will catch at us like strumpets, and scald rhymers ballad us out o' tune; the quick comedians Extemporally will stage us, and present Our Alexandrian revels; Antony

Shall be brought drunken forth, and I shall see

Some squeaking Cleopatra boy my greatness

I' th' posture of a whore.

Iras. O the good gods! 220 Cleo. Nay, that's certain.

Iras. I'll never see't, for I am sure mine nails

Are stronger than mine eyes.

Cleo. Why, that's the way To fool their preparation and to conquer Their most absurd intents.

Enter CHARMIAN.

Now, Charmian! 225 Show me, my women, like a queen. Go fetch

My best attires. I am again for Cydnus, To meet Mark Antony. Sirrah, Iras, go. Now, noble Charmian, we'll dispatch indeed;

And when thou hast done this chare, I'll give thee leave

To play till doomsday. Bring our crown and all.

[Exit Iras. A noise within. Wherefore's this noise?

Enter a Guardsman.

Guard. Here is a rural fellow That will not be denied your Highness' presence.

He brings you figs.

Cleo. Let him come in. [Exit Guardsman.

What poor an instrument
May do a noble deed! He brings me liberty.
My resolution's plac'd, and I have nothing
Of woman in me. Now from head to foot
I am marble-constant; now the fleeting moon

No planet is of mine.

Re-enter Guardsman and Clown, with a basket.

Guard. This is the man.

Cleo. Avoid, and leave him.

[Exit Guardsman. Hast thou the pretty worm of Nilus there That kills and pains not?

Clown. Truly, I have him. But I would not be the party that should desire you to touch him, for his biting is immortal; those that do die of it do seldom or never recover.

Cleo. Remember'st thou any that have died on't?

Clown. Very many, men and women too. I heard of one of them no longer than yesterday: a very honest woman, but something given to lie, as a woman should not do but in the way of honesty; how she died of the biting of it, what pain she felt—truly she makes a very good report o' th' worm. But he that will believe all that they say shall never be saved by half that they do. But this is most falliable, the worm's an odd worm.

Cleo. Get thee hence; farewell. 257 Clown. I wish you all joy of the worm.

[Sets down the basket.

Clown. You must think this, look you, that the worm will do his kind. 261

Cleo. Ay, ay; farewell. Clown. Look you, the worm is not to be trusted but in the keeping of wise people; for indeed there is no goodness in the worm.

Cleo. Take thou no care; it shall be heeded. 266 Clown. Very good. Give it nothing, I pray you, for it is not worth the feeding.

Cleo. Will it eat me?

Clown. You must not think I am so simple but I know the devil himself will not eat a woman. I know that a woman is a dish for the gods, if the devil dress her not. But truly, these same whoreson devils do the gods great harm in their women, for in every ten that they make the devils mar Now boast thee, death, in thy possession

Cleo. Well, get thee gone: farewell. Clown. Yes, forsooth. I wish you joy o' th' worm.

Re-enter IRAS, with a robe, crown, &c.

Cleo. Give me my robe, put on my crown: I have Immortal longings in me. Now no more The juice of Egypt's grape shall moist this hp. Yare, yare, good Iras; quick. Methinks I hear

Antony call. I see him rouse himself To praise my noble act. I hear him mock The luck of Cæsar, which the gods give men To excuse their after wrath. Husband, I come.

Now to that name my courage prove my title!

I am fire and air; my other elements I give to baser life. So, have you done? Come then, and take the last warmth of my lips.

Farewell, kind Charmian. Iras, long tarewell

[Kisses them. Iras falls and dies. Have I the aspic in my lips? Dost fall? If thou and nature can so gently part, The stroke of death is as a lover's pinch. Which hurts and is desir'd. Dost thou he

It is not worth leave-taking.

Char. Dissolve, thick cloud, and rain, that I may say

The gods themselves do weep.

This proves me base. If she first meet the curled Antony, He'll make demand of her, and spend that

That I might hear thee call great Cæsar ass Unpolicied!

O Eastern star! Char.

Peace, peace! Cleo. Dost thou not see my baby at my breast That sucks the nurse asleep?

Char. O, break! O, break! Cleo. As sweet as balm, as soft as air, as gentle-

Char. Speak softly, wake her not. 1 Guard. Cæsar hath sent-Char.

1 Guard. Approach, ho! All's not well: Cæsar's beguil'd. 2 Guard. There's Dolabella sent from Cæsar: call him. 1 Guard. What work is here! Charmian, is this well done? Char. It is well done, and fitting for a princess Descended of so many royal kings. Ah, soldier! [Charmian dies.

Re-enter DOLABELLA.

Dol. How goes it here?

2 Guard. All dead. Dol.

Cæsar, thy thoughts Touch their effects in this. Thyself art coming

To see perform'd the dreaded act which thou

So sought'st to hinder. Within. A way there, a way for Cæsar!

Re-enter CÆSAR and all his Train.

Dol. O sir, you are too sure an augurer: That you did fear is done.

Cæs. Bravest at the last, She levell'd at our purposes, and being roval, Took her own way. The manner of their deaths?

I do not see them bleed.

Dol. Who was last with them? 1 Guard. A simple countryman that brought her figs.

This was his basket. Cæs. Poison'd then.

1 Guard. O Cæsar. This Charmian liv'd but now; she stood and spake.

I found her trimming up the diadem On her dead mistress. Tremblingly she stood,

And on the sudden dropp'd. Cæs.

Of easy ways to die. Take up her bed, And bear her women from the monument. She shall be buried by her Antony; No grave upon the earth shall clip in it A pair so famous. High events as these Strike those that make them; and their story is

No less in pity than his glory which Brought them to be lamented. Our army shall 360

In solemn show attend this funeral, And then to Rome. Come, Dolabella, see High order in this great solemnity.

Exeunt.

ACT ONE

SCENE I. Britain. The garden of Cymbeline's palace.

1 Gent. You do not meet a man but frowns; our bloods

No more obey the heavens than our courtiers

Still seem as does the King's.

2 Gent. But what's the matter? 1 Gent. His daughter, and the heir of's kingdom, whom

He purpos'd to his wife's sole son-a widow

That late he married—hath referr'd herself Unto a poor but worthy gentleman. She's wedded:

Her husband banish'd; she imprison'd.

Is outward sorrow, though I think the King Be touch'd at very heart.

2 Gent. None but the King? 1 Gent. He that hath lost her too. So is the Queen,

That most desir'd the match. But not a courtier.

Although they wear their faces to the bent Of the King's looks, hath a heart that is not Glad at the thing they scowl at.

2 Gent. And why so? 1 Gent. He that hath miss'd the Princess is a thing

I mean that married her, alack, good man! Breeds him and makes him of his bed-And therefore banish'd-is a creature such As, to seek through the regions of the earth Puts to him all the learnings that his time

Endows a man but he.

2 Gent. You speak him far. 1 Gent. I do extend him, sir, within himself:

Crush him together rather than unfold His measure duly.

What's his name and birth? 2 Gent. 1 Gent. I cannot delve him to the root; his father

Was call'd Sicilius, who did join his honour

Against the Romans with Cassibelan, But had his titles by Tenantius, whom He serv'd with glory and admir'd success, So gain'd the sur-addition Leonatus; And had, besides this gentleman in ques-

Were stol'n; and to this hour no guess in knowledge

2 Gent. How long is this ago?

1 Gent. Some twenty years. 2 Gent. That a king's children should be so convey'd, So slackly guarded, and the search so slow That could not trace them!

Howsoe'er 'tis strange, 65 Gent. Or that the negligence may well be laugh'd at,

Yet is it true, sir.

I do well believe you. 1 Gent. We must forbear; here comes the gentleman,

The Queen, and Princess. [Exeunt.

Enter the QUEEN, POSTHUMUS, and IMOGEN.

Queen. No, be assur'd you shall not find me, daughter,

After the slander of most stepmothers, 71 Evil-ey'd unto you. You're my prisoner, but

Your gaoler shall deliver you the keys That lock up your restraint. For you. Posthumus,

So soon as I can win th' offended King, 75 I will be known your advocate. Marry, yet The fire of rage is in him, and 'twere good You lean'd unto his sentence with what patience

Your wisdom may inform you. Spir

Post. Please your Highness. I will from hence to-day.

Queen. You know the peril. 80 I'll fetch a turn about the garden, pitying The pangs of barr'd affections, though the King charg'd you should not Hath speak together. Exit.

Imo. 0 Dissembling courtesy! How fine this tyrant

Can tickle where she wounds! My dearest husband,

I something fear my father's wrath, but nothing-

Always reserv'd my holy duty-what His rage can do on me. You must be gone: And I shall here abide the hourly shot Of angry eyes, not comforted to live But that there is this jewel in the world That I may see again.

My queen! my mistress! Post. O lady, weep no more, lest I give cause To be suspected of more tenderness Than doth become a man. I will remain 95

The loyal'st husband that did e'er plight troth: My residence in Rome at one Philario's. Who to my father was a friend, to me

Known but by letter; thither write, my queen,

And with mine eyes I'll drink the words you send, Though ink be made of gall.

Re-enter QUEEN.

Queen. Be brief, I pray you. If the King come, I shall incur I know not How much of his displeasure. [Aside] Yet I'll move him

To walk this way. I never do him wrong But he does buy my injuries, to be friends; Pays dear for my offences. [Exit.

Post. Should we be taking leave As long a term as yet we have to live,

The loathness to depart would grow. Adieu! Imo. Nay, stay a little.

Were you but riding forth to air yourself, Such parting were too petty. Look here, love:

This diamond was my mother's; take it, heart:

But keep it till you woo another wife, When Imogen is dead.

How, how? Another? 114 You gentle gods, give me but this I have, And cere up my embracements from a next With bonds of death! Remain, remain thou here

It is a manacle of love: I'll place it Upon this fairest prisoner. Puts a bracelet on her arm.

O the gods! When shall we see again?

Enter CYMBELINE and Lords.

Post. Alack, the King!

Cvm. Thou basest thing, avoid; hence from my sight! If after this command thou fraught the court

With thy unworthiness, thou diest. Away! Thou'rt poison to my blood.

The gods protect you. And bless the good remainders of the court!

I am gone. Imo. There cannot be a pinch in death

More sharp than this is. disloyal thing, Cym. That shouldst repair my youth, thou heap'st 132 A years' age on me!

I beseech you, sir, Ĭmο. Harm not yourself with your vexation. I am senseless of your wrath; a touch more rare

Subdues all pangs, all fears. Past grace? obedience? Cvm.

Imo. Past hope, and in despair: that way past grace.

Cym. That mightst have had the sole son of my queen!

Imo. O blessed that I might not! I chose an eagle,

And did avoid a puttock.

Cym. Thou took'st a beggar, wouldst have made my throne

A seat for baseness.

Imo. No: I rather added A lustre to it.

Cym. O thou vile one! Imo.

Sir. It is your fault that I have lov'd Posthumus.

You bred him as my playfellow, and he is A man worth any woman; overbuys me Almost the sum he pays. Cym. What, art thou mad?

Imo. Almost, sir. Heaven restore me! Would I were

A neat-herd's daughter, and my Leonatus Our neighbour shepherd's son!

Re-enter QUEEN.

Thou foolish thing! [To the Queen] They were again together. You have done Not after our command. Away with her,

And pen her up.

Queen. Beseech your patience.-Peace, ereign.

Leave us to ourselves, and make yourself some comfort

Out of your best advice.

Cvm. Nay, let her languish 156 A drop of blood a day and, being aged, Die of this folly. Exit, with Lords.

Enter PISANIO.

Fie! you must give way. Oueen. Here is your servant. How now, sir! What news?

Pis. My lord your son drew on my master.

Queen. Ha! 160 No harm, I trust, is done?

There might have been. But that my master rather play'd than fought.

And had no help of anger; they were parted

By gentlemen at hand.

Queen. I am very glad on't. Imo. Your son's my father's friend; he takes his part To draw upon an exile! O brave sir!

I would they were in Afric both together; Myself by with a needle, that I might prick

The goer-back. Why came you from your master?

Pis. On his command. He would not suffer me

To bring him to the haven; left these notes Of what commands I should be subject to, When't pleas'd you to employ me.

Queen. This hath been Your faithful servant. I dare lay mine honour He will remain so.

Pis. I humbly thank your Highness. Queen. Pray walk awhile.

About some half-hour hence. Pray you speak with me. You shall at least Go see my lord aboard. For this time leave me. [Exeunt.

Scene II. Britain. A public place.

Enter CLOTEN and two Lords.

1 Lord. Sir, I would advise you to shift a shirt; the violence of action hath made you reek as a sacrifice. Where air comes out, air comes in; there's none abroad so wholesome as that you vent.

Clo. If my shirt were bloody, then to shift it. Have I hurt him?

2 Lord. [Aside] No, faith; not so much as his patience.

1 Lord. Hurt him! His body's a passable carcass if he be not hurt. It is a throughfare for steel if it be not hurt.

1199

2 Lord. [Aside] His steel was in debt: it went o' th' back side the town.

Clo. The villain would not stand me. 2 Lord. [Aside] No: but he fled forward still, toward your face. 1 Lord. Stand you? You have land enough of your own; but he added to your having, gave you some ground. 2 Lord. [Aside] As many inches as you have oceans. Puppies!

Clo. I would they had not come between 2 Lord. [Aside] So would I, till you had measur'd how long a fool you were upon the ground.

Clo. And that she should love this fellow, and refuse me!

2 Lord. [Aside] If it be a sin to make a true election, she is damn'd.

1 Lord. Sir, as I told you always, her beauty and her brain go not together; she's a good sign, but I have seen small reflection of her wit.

2 Lord, [Aside] She shines not upon fools. lest the reflection should hurt her.

Clo. Come, I'll to my chamber. Would there had been some hurt done!

2 Lord. [Aside] I wish not so; unless it had been the fall of an ass, which is no great hurt.

Clo. You'll go with us?

1 Lord. I'll attend your lordship. Clo. Nay, come, let's go together.

2 Lord. Well, my lord. [Exeunt.

Of space had pointed him sharp as my needle:

When shall we hear from him?

Pis. Be assur'd, madam, With his next vantage.

Ladv. The Oueen, madam. Desires your Highness' company.

Imo. Those things I bid you do, get them dispatch'd. Imo. I would thou grew'st unto the I will attend the Queen.

Pis. Madam, I shall. [Exeunt.

Scene IV. Rome. Philario's house.

Enter Philario, Iachimo, a Frenchman, a Dutchman, and a Spaniard.

Iach. Believe it, sir, I have seen him in Britain. He was then of a crescent note, expected to prove so worthy as since he hath been allowed the name of. But I could then have look'd on him without the help of admiration, though the catalogue of his endowments had been tabled by his side, and I to peruse him by items.

Phi. You speak of him when he was less furnish'd than now he is with that which makes him both without and within.

French. I have seen him in France; we had very many there could behold the sun with as firm eyes as he.

Iach. This matter of marrying his king's daughter, wherein he must be weighed rather by her value than his own, words him, I doubt not, a great deal from the matter.

Which thronging through her lips sc Lends light to all fair eyes that light will vanisheth

As smoke from Ætna, that in air consumes.

Or that which from discharged canno fumes.

'In vain,' quoth she 'I live, and seek is

Some happy mean to end a hapless life. 104 I fear'd by Tarquin's falchion to be slain. Yet for the self-same purpose seek a knife But when I fear'd I was a loval wife:

So am I now—O no, that cannot be: Of that true type hath Tarquin rifled me.

'O, that is gone for which I sought to live,

And therefore now I need not fear to die. To clear this spot by death, at least I give A badge of fame to slander's livery: A dving life to living infamy.

Poor helpless help, the treasure stol'n away,

To burn the guiltless casket where it lay Well, well, dear Collatine, thou shalt no know The stained taste of violated troth; I will not wrong thy true affection so To flatter thee with an infringed oath:

This bastard graff shall never come to growth; He shall not boast who did thy stock pollute That thou art doting father of his fruit. 'Nor shall he smile at thee in secret thought,

106 Nor laugh with his companions at thy state; But thou shalt know thy interest was not bought

Basely with gold, but stol'n from forth thy gate.

For me, I am the mistress of my fate, 1069 And with my trespass never will dispense, Till life to death acquit my forc'd offence.

'I will not poison thee with my attaint. Nor fold my fault in cleanly coin'd excuses: My sable ground of sin I will not paint To hide the truth of this false night's abuses.

My tongue shall utter all: mine eves like sluices,

As from a mountain-spring that feeds a dale.

Shall gush pure streams to purge my impure tale.'

By this, lamenting Philomel had ended The well-tun'd warble of her nightly sorrow, 1080 And solemn night with slow-sad gait descended

To ugly hell: when io, the blushing morrow

borrow:

But cloudy Lucrece shames herself to see. And therefore still in night would cioist'red he.

Revealing day through every cranny spies, And seems to point her out where she sits weeping:

To whom she sobbing speaks: 'O eve of eyes,

Why pry'st thou through my window? Leave thy peeping;

Mock with thy tickling beams eyes that are sleeping; $_{1090}$ Brand not my forehead with thy piercing light.

For day hath nought to do what's done by night'.

Thus cavils she with every thing she sees. True grief is fond and testy as a child,

Who wayward once, his mood with nought agrees. Old woes, not infant sorrows, bear them mild: Continuance tames the one; the other wild. Like an unpractis'd swimmer plunging still With too much labour drowns for want of skill.

So she, deep drenched in a sea of care, 1100 Holds disputation with each thing she views, And to herself all sorrow doth compare: No object but her passion's strength

And as one shifts, another straight ensues. Sometime her grief is dumb and hath no words:

Sometime 'tis mad and too much talk affords.

The little birds that tune their morning's

Make her moans mad with their sweet melody:

'or mirth doth search the bottom of annoy; Sad souls are slain in merry company; 1110 rief best is pleas'd with grief's society.

True sorrow then is feelingly suffic'd When with like semblance it is sympathiz'd.

'Tis double death to drown in ken of shore; He ten times pines that pines beholding food :

o see the salve doth make the wound ache more:

reat grief grieves most at that would do it good;

Deep woes roll forward like a gentle flood, Who, being stopp'd, the bounding banks o'erflows:

Grief dallied with nor law nor limit Than they whose whole is swallowed in knows. 1120

'You mocking birds,' quoth she 'your tunes entomb

Within your hollow-swelling feathered breasts,

And in my hearing be you mute and dumb. My restless discord loves no stops nor rests: A woeful hostess brooks not merry guests. Relish your nimble notes to pleasing ears; Distress likes dumps when time is kept with tears.

'Come, Philomel, that sing'st of ravish-ment, Make thy sad grove in my dishevell'd hair As the dank earth weeps at thy languishment.

So I at each sad strain will strain a tear, And with deep groans the diapason bear; For burthen-wise I'll hum on Tarquin stıll.

While thou on Tereus descants better skill.

'And whiles against a thorn thou bear'st thy part

To keep thy sharp woes waking, wretched I To imitate thee well, against my heart Will fix a sharp knife to affight mine

Who, if it wink, shall thereon fall and die. These means, as frets upon an instru-

Shall tune our heartstrings to true languishment.

' And for, poor bird, thou sing'st not in the

As shaming any eye should thee behold, Some dark deep desert, seated from the way,

That knows not parching heat nor freezing cold.

Will we find out; and there we will unfold To creatures stern sad tunes, to change their kinds.

Since men prove beasts, let beasts bear gentle minds.'

As the poor frighted deer, that stands at

Wildly determining which way to fly, 1150 Or one encompass'd with a winding maze That cannot tread the way out readily: So with herself is she in mutiny,

To live or die which of the twain were better.

When life is sham'd, and death reproach's

'To kill myself,' quoth she 'alack, what were it,

But with my body my poor soul's pollution? They that lose half with greater patience My shame be his that did my fame conbear it

confusion. 1150

That mother tries a merciless conclusion Who, having two sweet babes, when death takes one.

Will slay the other and be nurse to none.

'My body or my soul, which was the deareı.

When the one pure, the other made divine? Whose love of either to myself was nearer, When both were kept for heaven and Collatine?

Ay me! the bank pill'd from the lofty pine. His leaves will wither and his sap decay; So must my soul, her bark being pill'd away.

' Her house is sack'd, her quiet interrupted. Her mansion batter'd by the enemy; 1171 Her sacred temple spotted, spoil'd, corrupted,

Grossly engirt with daring infamy; Then let it not be call'd impiety

If in this blemish'd fort I make some 1175

Through which I may convey this troubled soul.

'Yet die I will not till my Collatine Have heard the cause of my untimely death:

That he may yow, in that sad hour of mine. Revenge on him that made me stop my breath.

My stained blood to Tarquin I'll bequeath, Which by him tainted shall for him be spent,

And as his due writ in my testament.

'My honour I'll bequeath unto the knife That wounds my body so dishonoured. 1185 Tis honour to deprive dishonour'd life: The one will live, the other being dead.

So of shame's ashes shall my fame be bred; For in my death I murther shameful scorn.

My shame so dead, mine honour is new born.

'Dear lord of that dear jewel I have lost, What legacy shall I bequeath to thee? My resolution, love, shall be thy boast,

By whose example thou reveng'd mayst be. How Tarquin must be us'd, read it in me: Myself, thy friend, will kill myself, thy foe: And for my sake serve thou false Tarquin

This brief abridgment of my will I make: My soul and body to the skies and ground; My resolution, husband, do thou take; 1200 Mine honour be the knife's that makes my wound:

found:

And all my fame that lives disbursed be To those that live and think no shame of me. 120

'Thou, Collatine, shalt oversee this will. How was I overseen that thou shalt see it My blood shall wash the slander of mine ill My life's foul deed, my life's fair end shall free it.

Faint not, faint heart, but stoutly say "So be it".

Yield to my hand; my hand shall conquer thee;

They deed both die and both shall

Thou dead, both die, and both shall victors be.'

This plot of death when sadly she had laid,

And wip'd the brinish pearl from her bright eyes,

With untun'd tongue she hoarsely calls
her maid,
Whose swift obedience to her mistress hies;

For fleet-wing'd duty with thought's feathers flies.

Poor Lucrece' cheeks unto her maid seem so

As winter meads when sun doth melt their snow.

Her mistress she doth give demure goodmorrow

With soft-slow tongue, true mark of modesty, 1220

And sorts a sad look to her lady's sorrow, For why her tace wore sorrow's livery; But durst not ask of her audaciously

Why her two suns were cloud-eclipsed so, Nor why her fair cheeks over-wash'd with woe.

But as the earth doth weep, the sun being set,

Each flower moist'ned like a melting eye; Even so the maid with swelling drops gan

Her circled eyne, enforc'd by sympathy
Of those fair suns set in her mistress' sky,
Who in a salt-wav'd ocean quench their
light,
1231

Which makes the maid weep like the dewy night.

A pretty while these pretty creatures stand, Like ivory conduits coral cisterns filling: One justly weeps; the other takes in hand No cause but company of her drops spilling.

Their gentle sex to weep are often willing; Grieving themselves to guess at others' smarts,

And then they drown their eyes, or break their hearts.

For men have marble, women waxen minds, And therefore are they form'd as marble will; The weak oppress'd, th' impression of strange kinds

Is form'd in them by force, by fraud, or skill.

Then call them not the authors of their

No more than wax shall be accounted evil

Wherein is stamp'd the semblance of a devil.

Their smoothness, like a goodly champaign plain,

Lays open all the little worms that creep; In men, as in a rough-grown grove, remain Cave-keeping evils that obscurely sleep.

Through crystal walls each little mote will peep. 1251

Though men can cover crimes with bold stern looks,

Poor women's faces are their own faults' books.

No man inveigh against the withered flow'r.

But chide rough winter that the flow'r hath kill'd.

Not that devour'd, but that which doth devour,

Is worthy blame. O, let it not be hild Poor women's faults that they are so fulfill'd

With men's abuses! those proud lords to blame

Make weak-made women tenants to their shame. 1260

The precedent whereof in Lucrece view, Assail'd by night with circumstances strong Of present death and shame that might ensue

By that her death, to do her husband wrong.

Such danger to resistance did belong 1265
That dying fear through all her body spread;

And who cannot abuse a body dead?

By this, mild patience bid fair Lucrece speak

To the poor counterfeit of her complaining. 'My girl,' quoth she 'on what occasion break 1270

Those tears from thee that down thy cheeks are raining?

If thou dost weep for grief of my sustaining, Know, gentle wench, it small avails my mood;

If tears could help, mine own would do me good.

'But tell me, girl, when went '—and there she stay'd 1275 Till after a deep groan—'Tarquin from

hence?'
'Madam, ere I was up,' replied the maid

'The more to blame my sluggard negligence.

Yet with the fault I thus far can dispense: Myself was stirring ere the break of day, And ere I rose was Tarquin gone away.

'But, lady, if your maid may be so bold, She would request to know your heaviness.'
'O, peace!' quoth Lucrece 'If it should be told,

The repetition cannot make it less, 1285 For more it is than I can well express; And that deep torture may be call'd a hell,

When more is felt than one hath power

When more is felt than one hath power to tell.

'Go, get me hither paper, ink, and pen— Yet save that labour, for I have them here. What should I say ?—One of my husband's men

Bid thou be ready, by and by, to bear
A letter to my loid, my love, my dear.
Bid him with speed prepare to carry it;
The cause craves haste, and it will soon
be writ.'

Her maid is gone, and she prepares to write, First hovering o'er the paper with her quill. Conceit and grief an eager combat fight; What wit sets down is blotted straight with will:

This is too curious-good, this blunt and ill:

Much like a press of people at a door,
Throng her inventions, which shall go before.

At last she thus begins: 'Thou worthy lord

Of that unworthy wife that greeteth thee Health to thy person! Next vouchsale t afford—

If ever. love, thy Lucrece thou wilt see— Some present speed to come and visit me. So I commend me from our house in grief;

My woes are tedious, though my words
are brief'.

Here folds she up the tenour of her woe, Her certain sorrow writ uncertainly. 1311 By this short schedule Collatine may know Her grief, but not her grief's true quality. She dares not thereof make discovery,

Lest he should hold it her own gross abuse,

Ere she with blood had stain'd her stain'd excuse.

Besides, the life and feeling of her passion She hoards, to spend when he is by to hear her:

When sighs and groans and tears may grace the fashion

Of her disgrace, the better so to clear her From that suspicion which the world might bear her. To shun this blot, she would not blot the letter

With words, till action might become them better.

'o see sad sights moves more than hear them told;

for then the eye interprets to the ear 1345 he heavy motion that it doth behold, When every part a part of woe doth bear. Tis but a part of sorrow that we hear:

Deep sounds make lesser noise than shallow fords,

And sorrow ebbs, being blown with wind of words. 1330

Her letter now is seal'd, and on it writ

At Ardea to my lord with more than haste'.

The post attends, and she delivers it, Charging the sour-fac'd groom to hie as fast As lagging fowls before the northern blast. Speed more than speed but dull and slow she deems:

Extremity still urgeth such extremes.

The homely villain curtsies to her low; And blushing on her, with a steadfast eye Receives the scroll without or yea or no, And forth with bashful innocence doth hie. But they whose guilt within their bosoms

Imagine every eye beholds their blame; For Luciece thought he blush'd to see her

When, siliy groom God wot, it was defect Ot spirit, life, and bold audacity.

1346
Such harmless creatures have a true respect To talk in deeds, while others saucily Promise more speed but do it leisurely.

Even so, this pattern of the worn-out age Pawn'd honest looks, but laid no words to gage.

His kindled duty kindled her mistrust, That two red fires in both their faces blazed; She thought he blush'd as knowing Tarquin's lust,

And, blushing with him, wistly on him gazed;

Her earnest eye did make him more amazed; The more she saw the blood his cheeks replenish,

The more she thought he spied in her some blemish.

But long she th.nks till he return again, And yet the duteous vassal scarce is gone. The weary t.me she cannot entertain, 1361 For now 'tis stale to sigh, to weep, and groan;

So woe hath wearied woe, moan tired moan, That she her plaints a little while doth stay,

Pausing for means to mourn some newer way. 1365

At last she calls to mind where hangs a In speech, it seem d, his beard all silver

Of skilful painting, made for Priam's Troy Before the which is drawn the power of Greece

For Helen's rape the city to destroy, Threat'ning cloud-kissing Ilion with annoy;

Which the conceited painter drew so 1371

As heaven, it seem'd, to kiss the turrets bow'd.

A thousand amentable objects there, In scorn of nature, art gave lifeless life: Many a dry drop seem'd a weeping tear Shed for the slaught'ied husband by the X376

The red blood reek'd to show the painter's strife:

And dying eyes gleam'd forth their ashy lights.

Like dying coals burnt out in tedious nights.

There might you see the labouring proneer Begrim'd with sweat and smeared all with dust;

And from the towers of Troy there would appear

The very eyes of men through loopholes thrust,

Gazing upon the Greeks with little lust. Such sweet observance in this work was 1357

That one might see those far-off even look sad.

In great commanders grace and majesty You might behold, triumphing in their faces:

In youth, quick bearing and dexterity; And here and there the painter interlaces

Pale cowards marching on with trembling paces, Which heartless peasants did so well resemble

That one would swear he saw them quake and tremble.

In Ajax and Ulysses, O what art Of physiognomy might one behold! 1305 The face of either cipher'd either's heart; Their face their manners most expressly told:

In Ajax' eyes blunt rage and rigour roll'd; But the mild glance that sly Ulysses lent Show'd deep regard and smiling government. 1400

There pleading might you see grave Nestor stand,

As 'twere encouraging the Greeks to fight. Making such sober action with his hand That it beguil'd attention, charm'd the Many she sees where cares have carved sight.

Wagg'd up and down, and from his has did fly

Thin winding breath, which purl'd up to the sky.

About him were a press of gaping faces, Which seem'd to swallow up his sound advice,

All jointly list'ning, but with several graces. As if some mermaid did their ears entice: Some high, some low—the painter was so

The scalps of many, almost hid behind, To jump up higher seem'd to mock the mind.

Here one man's hand lean'd on another's head.

His nose being shadowed by his neighbour's ear;

Here one being throng'd bears back, all boll'n and red:

Another smother'd seems to pelt and swear; And in their rage such signs of rage they bear.

As, but for loss of Nestor's golden words, It seem'd they would debate with angry swords.

For much imaginary work was there: Concert decentral, so compact, so kind, That for Achilles' image stood his spear, Grip'd in an armed hand; himself, behind Was left unseen, save to the eye of mind:

A hand, a foot, a face a leg, a head, Stood for the whole to be imagined.

And from the walls of strong-besieged Troy their brave hope, bold Hector, When march'd to field.

Stood many Troyan mothers, sharing joy To see their youthful sons bright weapons wield;

And to their hope they such odd action yield

That through their light joy seemed to appear,

Like bright things stain'd, a kind of heavy fear. 1435

And from the strond of Dardan where they fought.

To Simois' reedy banks, the red blood ran, Whose waves to imitate the battle sought With swelling ridges; and their ranks began

To break upon the galled shore, and than Retire again, till meeting greater ranks They join, and shoot their foam at Simois' banks.

To this well-painted piece is Lucrece come. To find a face where all distress is stell'd. 1445 But none where all distress and dolour dwell'd,

Till she despairing Hecuba beheld,

Staring on Priam's wounds with her old eyes,

Which bleeding under Pyrrhus' proud foot lies.

In her the painter had anatomiz'd
Time's ruin, beauty's wrack, and grim care's reign;

Her cheeks with chaps and wrinkles were disguis'd;

Of what she was no semblance did remain: Her blue blood chang'd to black in every vein,

Wanting the spring that those shrunk pipes had fed, 1455

Show'd life imprison'd in a body dead.

On this sad shadow Lucrece spends her eyes, And shapes her sorrow to the beldam's woes.

Who nothing wants to answer her but cries, And bitter words to ban her cruel foes: 1460 The painter was no god to lend her those:

And therefore Lucrece swears he did her wrong

To give her so much grief and not a tongue.

'Poor instrument,' quoth she 'without a sound,

I'll tune thy woes with my lamenting tongue.

And drop sweet balm in Priam's painted wound,

And rail on Pyrrhus that hath done him wrong,

And with my tears quench Troy that burns so long;

And with my knife scratch out the angry eyes 1469

Of all the Greeks that are thine enemies.

Show me the strumpet that began this stir,

That with my nails her beauty I may tear. Thy heat of lust, fond Paris, did incur This load of wrath that burning Troy doth

And here in Troy, for trespass of theme

'Lo, here weeps Hecuba, here Priam dies, Here manly Hector faints, here Troilus sounds;

Here friend by friend in bloody channel lies, And friend to friend gives unadvised wounds.

And one man's lust these many lives confounds.

Had doting Priam check'd his son's desire, 1490

Troy had been bright with fame, and not with fire.'

Here feelingly she weeps Troy's painted woes:

For sorrow, like a heavy-hanging bell, Once set on ringing, with his own weight goes:

Then little strength rings out the doleful knell; 2495

So Lucrece set a-work sad tales doth tell

To pencill'd pensiveness and colour'd

sorrow:

She lends them words, and she their looks doth borrow.

She throws her eyes about the painting round, 1499
And who she finds forlorn she doth lament.

At last she sees a wretched image bound That piteous looks to Phrygian shepherds lent;

His face, though full of cares, yet show'd content:

Onward to Troy with the blunt swains he goes,

So mild that Patience seem'd to scorn his woes. 1505

In him the painter labour'd with his skill To hide deceit, and give the harmless show An humble gait, calm looks, eyes wailing still,

A brow unbent, that seem'd to welcome woe:

Cheeks neither red nor pale, but mingled so
That blushing red no guilty instance

Nor ashy pale the fear that false hearts have;

But, like a constant and confirmed devI, He entertain'd a show so seeming just, And therein so ensconc'd his secret evil, That jealousy itself could not mistrust 1516 False-creeping craft and perjury should thrust

Into so bright a day such black-fac'd storms.

Or blot with hell-born sin such saint-like forms.

As if with grief or travall he had fainted. To me came Tarquin armed; so beguil'd With outward honesty, but yet defil'd 1545 With inward vice. As Priam him did cherish.

So did I Tarquin: so my Troy did perish

'Look, look, how list'ning Priam wets his eyes,

To see those borrowed tears that Sinon sheds.

That patience is quite beaten from her breast.

She tears the senseless Sinon with her nails. Comparing him to that unhappy guest 1565 Whose deed hath made herself herself detest.

At last she smilingly with this gives o'er: 'Fool! fool!' quoth she 'his wounds will not be sore.

Thus ebbs and flows the current of her sorrow.

And time doth weary time with her complaining. She looks for night, and then she longs for

Three times with sighs she gives her sorrow

Ere once she can discharge one word of woe:

At length address'd to answer his desire. She modestly prepares to let them know Her honour is ta'en prisoner by the foe;

While Collatine and his consorted lords With sad attention long to hear her words.

And now this pale swan in her wat'ry nest Begins the sad dirge of her certain ending. 'Few words' quoth she 'shall fit the trespass best.

Where no excuse can give the fault amending:

In me moe woes than words are now depending;

And my laments would be drawn out too long

To tell them all with one poor tired tongue.

And what wrong else may be imagined By foul enforcement might be done to me From that, alas, thy Lucrece is not free.

' For in the dreadful dead of dark midnight, 1625

With shining falchion in my chamber came A creeping creature, with a flaming light, And softly cried "Awake, thou Roman dame.

And entertain my love; else lasting shame On thee and thine this night I will inflict, If thou my love's desire do contradict.

And never be forgot in mighty Rome Th' adulterate death of Lucrece and her

'Mine enemy was strong, my poor self weak,

And far the weaker with so strong a fear. My bloody judge forbade my tongue to speak:

No rightful plea might plead for justice there.

His scarlet lust came evidence to swear 1650 That my poor beauty had purloin'd his eycs,

And when the judge is robb'd, the pusoner dies.

O. teach me how to make mine own excuse! Or, at the least, this refuge let me find: Though my gross blood be stain'd with this abuse.

Immaculate and spotless is my mind: That was not forc'd; that never was inclin'd

To accessary yieldings, but still pure Doth in her poison'd closet yet endure.'

Lo, here, the hopeless merchant of this loss. With head declin'd and voice damm'd up with woe. 166 With sad-set eyes and wretched arms across,

From lips new-waxen pale begins to blow The grief away that stops his answer so: But wretched as he is he strives in vain:

What he breathes out his breath drinks up again.

As through an arch the violent roaring tide Outruns the eye that doth behold his haste, Yet in the eddy boundeth in his pride Back to the strait that foic'd him on so fast. 1670 In rage sent out, recall'd in rage, being past;

Even so his sighs, his sorrows, make a saw,

To push grief on, and back the same grief draw.

Which speechless woe of his poor she attendeth. 1674

And his untimely frenzy thus awaketh: Dear lord, thy sorrow to my sorrow lendeth no flood by raining Another power; slaketh.

My woe too sensible thy passion maketh More feeling-painful. Let it then suffice To drown one woe, one pair of weeping eyes.

And for my sake, when I might charm thee so.

For she that was thy Lucrece, now attend me:

Speaking to those that came with Collatine. 'Shall plight your honourable faiths to me With swift pursuit to venge this wrong of mine:

For 'tis a meritorious fair design

To chase injustice with revengeful arms poor ladies' harms'.

At this request, with noble disposition 1695 Each present lord began to promise aid. As bound in knighthood to her imposition, Longing to hear the hateful foe bewray'd. But she, that yet her sad task hath not said,

The protestation stops. 'O speak,' quoth

'What is the quality of my offence, Being constrain'd with dreadful circumstance? May my pure mind with the foul act dispense,

My low-declined honour to advance? 1705 May any terms acquit me from this chance? The poisoned fountain clears itself again: And why not I from this compelled stain?

With this, they all at once began to say Her body's stain her mind untainted clears;

While with a joyless smile she turns away The face, that map which deep impression

Of hard misfortune, carv'd in it with tears. 'No, no,' quoth she 'no dame hereafter living

By my excuse shall claim excuse's giving.' 1715

Here with a sigh, as if her heart would break.

She throws forth Tarquin's name: 'He, he' she says,

But more than 'he' her poor tongue could not speak :

Till after many accents and delays,

Untimely breathings, sick, and short assays, She utters this: 'He, he, fair lords, 'tis he.

That guides this hand to give this wound to me'.

And nothing 'gainst Time's scythe can
make defence

Save breed, to brave him when he takes thee hence.

13

O that you were yourself! But, love, you are

No longer yours than you your self here hive.

Against this coming end you should prepare, And your sweet semblance to some other give.

So should that beauty which you hold in

So should that beauty which you hold in lease 5

Find no determination; then you were Your self again, after your self's decease, When your sweet issue your sweet form should bear.

Who lets so fair a house fall to decay, 9
Which husbandry in honour might uphold
Against the stormy gusts of winter's day
And barren rage of death's eternal cold?
O, none but unthrifts! Dear my love, you know

You had a father: let your son say so.

14

Not from the stars do I my judgment pluck, And yet methinks I have astronomy; But not to tell of good or evil luck, Of plagues, of dearths, or seasons' quality; Nor can I fortune to brief minutes tell, 5 Pointing to each his thunder, rain, and wind.

Or say with princes if it shall go well By oft predict that I in heaven find; But from thine eyes my knowledge I derive, And, constant stars, in them I read such

As truth and beauty shall together thrive, If from thy self to store thou wouldst convert.

Or else of thee this I prognosticate:
Thy end is truth's and beauty's doom and date.

15

When I consider every thing that grows Holds in perfection but a little moment, That this huge stage presenteth nought but shows

Whereon the stars in secret influence comment:

When I perceive that men as plants increase,

Cheered and check'd even by the self-same sky,

Vaunt in their youthful sap, at height decrease,

And wear their brave state out of memory;
Then the conceit of this inconstant stay
Sets you most rich in youth before my sight,

Where wasteful Time debateth with Decay

To change your day of youth to sullied night:

And all in war with Time for love of you, As he takes from you, I engraft you new.

16

But wherefore do not you a mightier way Make war upon this bloody tyrant Time? And fortify your self in your decay With means more blessed than my barren rhyme?

Now stand you on the top of happy hours, And many maiden gardens, yet unset, 6 With virtuous wish would bear your living flowers.

Much liker than your painted counterfeit; So should the lines of life that life repair, 9 Which this, Time's pencil or my pupil pen, Neither in inward worth, nor outward fair, Can make you live your self in eyes of men.

To give away your self keeps your self still:

And you must live, drawn by your own sweet skill.

17

Who will believe my verse in time to come, If it were fill'd with your most high deserts? Though yet, heaven knows, it is but as a temb

Which hides your life and shows not half your parts.

If I could write the beauty of your eyes 5 And in fresh numbers number all your graces.

The age to come would say 'This poet lies; Such heavenly touches ne'er touch'd earthly faces'.

So should my papers, yellowed with their age,

Be scorn'd, like old men of less truth than tongue;

And your true rights be term'd a poet's rage,

And stretched metre of an antique song.

But were some child of yours alive that time.

You should live twice—in it, and in my rhyme.

18

Shall I compare thee to a summer's day?
Thou art more lovely and more temperate.
Rough winds do shake the darling buds of
May,

And summer's lease hath all too short a date:

Sometime too hot the eye of heaven shines, And often is his gold complexion dimm'd; And every fair from fair some time declines, By chance, or nature's changing course, untrimm'd:

But thy eternal summer shall not fade 9 Nor lose possession of that fair thou ow'st; Nor shall Death brag thou wand'rest in his shade,

When in eternal lines to time thou grow'st. So long as men can breathe or eyes can

So long lives this, and this gives life to thee.

19

Devouring Time, blunt thou the lion's paws, And make the earth devour her own sweet brood;

Pluck the keen teeth from the fierce tiger's jaws,

And burn the long-liv'd phœnix in her blood;

Make glad and sorry seasons as thou fleet'st, And do whate'er thou wilt, swift-footed Time,

To the wide world and all her fading sweets; But I forbid thee one most heinous crime: O, carve not with thy hours my love's fair brow, Nor draw no lines there with thine antique pen;

Him in thy course untainted do allow For beauty's pattern to succeeding men.

Yet, do thy worst, old Time. Despice thy wrong,

My love shall in my verse ever live young.

20

A woman's face, with Nature's own hand painted,
Hast thou, the Master Mistress of my passion:

A woman's gentle heart, but not acquainted With shifting change, as is false woman's fashion;

An eye more bright than theirs, less false in rolling,

Gilding the object whereupon it gazeth; A man in hue all hues in his controlling, Which steals men's eyes and women's souls amazeth.

And for a woman wert thou first created; Till Nature, as she wrought thee, tell adoting.

And by addition me of thee defeated

By adding one thing to my purpose nothing. But since she prick'd thee out for women's pleasure,

21

So is it not with me as with that Muse, Stirr'd by a painted beauty to his verse; Who heaven itself for ornament doth use, And every fair with his fair doth rehearse, Making a couplement of proud compare 5 With sun and moon, with earth and sea's rich gems.

With April's first-born flowers, and all things lare

That heaven's air in this huge rondure hems.

O, let me, true in love, but truly write, And then believe me, my love is as fair 10 As any mother's child, though not so bright As those gold candles fix'd in heaven's air.

Let them say more that like of hearsay

I will not praise that purpose not to sell.

22

My glass shall not persuade me I am old So long as youth and thou are of one date; But when in thee time's furrows I behold, Then look I death my days should expiate. For all that beauty that doth cover thee 3 Is but the seemly raiment of my heart, Which in thy breast doth live, as thine in

As an unperfect actor on the stage Who with his fear is put besides his part, Or some fierce thing replete with too much rage,

Whose strength's abundance weakens his own heart:

So I, for fear of trust, forget to say The perfect ceremony of love's rite, And in mine own love's strength seem to decay,

O'ercharg'd with burthen of mine own love's might.

O, let my looks be then the eloquence And dumb presagers of my speaking breast; Who plead for love, and look for recompense,

More than that tongue that more hath more express'd.

O, learn to read what silent love hath writ!

To hear with eyes belongs to love's fine wit.

Mine eye hath play'd the painter and hath stell'd

Thy beauty's form in table of my heart: My body is the frame wherein 'tis held, And perspective it is best painter's art. For through the painter must you see his skıll

Let those who are in favour with their stars But day by night and night by day Of public honour and proud titles boast, Whilst I, whom fortune of such triumph And each, though enemies to either's reign, bars,

Unlook'd for joy in that I honour most.

Great princes' favourites their fair leaves spread

But as the marigold at the sun's eye: And in themselves their pride lies buried. For at a frown they in their glory die. The painful warrior famoused for fight. After a thousand victories once foil'd, ro Is from the book of honour razed quite. And all the rest forgot for which he toil'd.

Then happy I, that love and am beloved Where I may not remove nor be removed.

Lord of my love, to whom in vassalage Thy merit hath my duty strongly knit, To thee I send this written embassage. To witness duty, not to show my wit: Duty so great, which wit so poor as mine s May make seem bare, in wanting words to show it.

But that I hope some good conceit of thine In thy soul's thought, all naked, will bestow

Till whatsoever star that guides my moving Points on me graciously with fair aspect, 10 And puts apparel on my tattered loving To show me worthy of thy sweet respect.

Then may I dare to boast how I do love thee;

Till then not show my head where thou mayst prove me.

27

Weary with toil, I haste me to my bed. The dear repose for limbs with travel tired; But then begins a journey in my head To work my mind when body's work's expired;

For then my thoughts, from far where I abidé,

Intend a zealous pilgumage to thee, And keep my drooping eyelids open wide. Looking on darkness which the blind do see: Save that my soul's imaginary sight Presents thy shadow to my sightless view, Which, like a jewel hung in ghastly night, Makes black night beauteous and her old face new.

Lo, thus, by day my limbs, by night my mind.

For thee, and for myself, no quiet find.

How can I then return in happy plight That am debarr'd the benefit of rest? When day's oppression is not eas'd by night, oppress'd?

Do in consent shake hands to torture me, The one by toil, the other to complain

Which thronging through her lips so | Lends light to all fair eyes that light will vanisheth

As smoke from Ætna, that in air consumes.

Or that which from discharged cannon firmes.

'In vain,' quoth she 'I live, and seek in

Some happy mean to end a hapless life. 1045 I fear'd by Tarquin's falchion to be slain. Yet for the self-same purpose seek a knife; But when I fear'd I was a loyal wife:

So am I now—O no, that cannot be: Of that true type hath Tarquin rifled me.

O, that is gone for which I sought to live.

And therefore now I need not fear to die. To clear this spot by death, at least I give A badge of fame to slander's livery; A dving life to living infamy. 1055

Poor helpless help, the treasure stol'n

away,

To burn the guiltless casket where it lay! 'Well, well, dear Collatine, thou shalt not know

The stained taste of violated troth: I will not wrong thy true affection so To flatter thee with an infringed oath: This bastard graff shall never come to growth;

He shall not boast who did thy stock pollute

That thou art doting father of his fruit. 'Nor shall he smile at thee in secret thought. 1065

Nor laugh with his companions at thy state: But thou shalt know thy interest was not bought

Basely with gold, but stol'n from forth thy gate.

For me, I am the mistress of my fate, 1069 And with my trespass never will dispense, Till life to death acquit my forc'd offence.

'I will not poison thee with my attaint. Nor fold my fault in cleanly coin'd excuses: My sable ground of sin I will not paint To hide the truth of this false night's abuses. 1075

My tongue shall utter all; mine eyes like sluices.

As from a mountain-spring that feeds a dale,

Shall gush pure streams to purge my impure tale.'

By this, lamenting Philomel had ended well-tun'd warble of her nightly sorrow. 1080 And solemn night with slow-sad gait descended

To ugly hell: when lo, the blushing morrow

borrow:

But cloudy Lucrece shames herself to see. And therefore still in night would cloist'red be.

Revealing day through every cranny spies, And seems to point her out where she sits weeping:

To whom she sobbing speaks: 'O eye of eves.

Why pry'st thou through my window?

Leave thy peeping; Mock with thy tickling beams eyes that are sleeping;

Brand not my forehead with thy piercing

For day hath nought to do what's done by night'.

Thus cavils she with every thing she sees. True grief is fond and testy as a child, Who wayward once, his mood with nought agrees. Old woes, not infant sorrows, bear them

mild: Continuance tames the one; the other wild. Like an unpractis'd swimmer plunging still With too much labour drowns for want of skill. So she, deep drenched in a sea of care, 1100

Holds disputation with each thing she views.

And to herself all sorrow doth compare: No object but her passion's strength

And as one shifts, another straight ensues. Sometime her grief is dumb and hath no words:

Sometime 'tis mad and too much talk affords.

The little birds that tune their morning's joy

Make her moans mad with their sweet melody:

For mirth doth search the bottom of annov: Sad souls are slain in merry company; 1110 Grief best is pleas'd with grief's society.

True sorrow then is feelingly suffic'd When with like semblance it is sympathiz'd,

'Tis double death to drown in ken of shore; He ten times pines that pines beholding food :

To see the salve doth make the wound ache more ;

Great grief grieves most at that would do it good ;

Deep woes roll forward like a gentle flood, Who, being stopp'd, the bounding banks o'erflows:

Grief dallied with nor law nor limit Than they whose whole is swallowed in knows.

'You mocking birds,' quoth she 'your tunes entomb

Within your hollow-swelling feathered breasts,

And in my hearing be you mute and dumb. My restless discord loves no stops nor rests; A woeful hostess brooks not merry guests. Relish your nimble notes to pleasing ears; Distress likes dumps when time is kept with tears.

'Come, Philomel, that sing'st of ravishment,

Make thy sad grove in my dishevell'd hair. As the dank earth weeps at thy languishment.

So I at each sad strain will strain a tear, And with deep groans the diapason bear; For burthen-wise I'll hum on Tarquin

While thou on Teleus descants better skill.

'And whiles against a thorn thou bear'st thy part

To keep thy sharp woes waking, wretched I, To imitate thee well, against my heart Will fix a sharp knife to affight mine

Who, if it wink, shall thereon fall and die. These means, as frets upon an instru-

Shall tune our heartstrings to true languishment.

' And for, poor bird, thou sing'st not in the

As shaming any eye should thee behold, Some dark deep desert, seated from the way,

That knows not parching heat nor freezing cold,

Will we find out; and there we will unfold To creatures stern sad tunes, to change their kinds.

Since men prove beasts, let beasts bear gentle minds.'

As the poor frighted deer, that stands at

Wildly determining which way to fly. 1150 Or one encompass'd with a winding maze That cannot tread the way out readily: So with herself is she in mutiny,

To live or die which of the twain were better,

When life is sham'd, and death reproach's debtor.

'To kill myself,' quoth she 'alack, what were it,

But with my body my poor soul's pollution? They that lose half with greater patience My shame be his that did my fame conbear it confusion.

That mother tries a merciless conclusion Who, having two sweet babes, when death takes one.

Will slav the other and be nurse to none.

'My body or my soul, which was the dearer,

When the one pure, the other made divine? Whose love of either to myself was nearer, When both were kept for heaven and Collatine?

Ay me! the bank pill'd from the lofty pine, His leaves will wither and his sap decay; So must my soul, her bark being pill'd awav.

'Her house is sack'd, her quiet interrupted. Her mansion batter'd by the enemy; 1171 Her sacred temple spotted, spoil'd, corrupted,

Grossly engirt with daring infamy: Then let it not be call'd impiety

If in this blemish'd fort I make some I I 75

Through which I may convey this troubled soul.

'Yet die I will not till my Collatine Have heard the cause of my untimely death:

That he may vow, in that sad hour of mine. Revenge on him that made me stop my breath.

My stained blood to Tarquin I'll bequeath, Which by him tainted shall for him be

And as his due writ in my testament.

'My honour I'll bequeath unto the knife That wounds my body so dishonoured. 1185 'Tis honour to deprive dishonour'd life: The one will live, the other being dead. So of shame's ashes shall my fame be bred;

For in my death I murther shameful scorn.

My shame so dead, mine honour is new born.

'Dear lord of that dear jewel I have lost, What legacy shall I bequeath to thee? My resolution, love, shall be thy boast, By whose example thou reveng'd mayst be.

How Tarquin must be us'd, read it in me: Myself, thy friend, will kill myself, thy foe:

And for my sake serve thou false Tarquin

'This brief abridgment of my will I make: My soul and body to the skies and ground; My resolution, husband, do thou take; 1200 Mine honour be the knife's that makes my wound:

found:

And all my fame that lives disbursed be To those that live and think no shame of me. 120

'Thou, Collatine, shalt oversee this will.
How was I overseen that thou shalt see it
My blood shall wash the slander of mine ill
My life's foul deed, my life's fair end shall free it.

Faint not, faint heart, but stoutly say "So be it".

Yield to my hand; my hand shall conquer thee;

Thou dead, both die, and both shall victors be.'

This plot of death when sadly she had

And wip'd the brinish pearl from her bright eyes,

With untun'd tongue she hoarsely calls her maid, 1214

Whose swift obedience to her mistress hies; For fleet-wing'd duty with thought's feathers flies.

Poor Lucrece' cheeks unto her maid seem so

As winter meads when sun doth melt their snow.

Her mistress she doth give demure goodmorrow

With soft-slow tongue, true mark of moderty, 1220

And sorts a sad look to her lady's sorrow, For why her tace wore sorrow's livery; But durst not ask of her audaciously

Why her two suns were cloud-eclipsed so, Nor why her fair cheeks over-wash'd with woe.

But as the earth doth weep, the sun being set,

Each flower moist'ned like a melting eye; Even so the maid with swelling drops gan

Her circled eyne, enforc'd by sympathy
Of those fair suns set in her mistress' sky,
Who in a salt-wav'd ocean quench their
light.
1231

Which makes the maid weep like the dewy night.

A pretty while these pretty creatures stand, Like every conduits coral cisterns filling: One justly weeps; the other takes in hand No cause but company of her drops spilling.

Their gentle sex to weep are often willing; Grieving themselves to guess at others' smarts,

And then they drown their eyes, or break their hearts.

For men have marble, women waxen minds, And therefore are they form'd as marble will; The weak oppress'd, th' impression of strange kinds

Is form'd in them by force, by fraud, or skill.

Then call them not the authors of their

No more than wax shall be accounted evil 1245

Wherein is stamp'd the semblance of a devil.

Their smoothness, like a goodly champaign plain,

Lays open all the little worms that creep; In men, as in a rough-grown grove, remain Cave-keeping evils that obscurely sleep. Through crystal walls each little mote will

Through crystal walls each little mote will peep. 1251

Though men can cover crimes with bold stern looks.

Poor women's faces are their own faults' books.

No man inveigh against the withered flow'r.

But chide rough winter that the flow'r hath kill'd.

Not that devour'd, but that which doth devour,

Is worthy blame. O, let it not be hild Poor women's faults that they are so fulfill'd

With men's abuses! those proud lords to blame

Make weak-made women tenants to their shame. 1260

The precedent whereof in Lucrece view,
Assail'd by night with circumstances strong
Of present death and shame that might ensue

By that her death, to do her husband wrong.

Such danger to resistance did belong 1265
That dying fear through all her body spread;

And who cannot abuse a body dead?

By this, mild patience bid fair Lucrece speak

To the poor counterfeit of her complaining, 'My girl,' quoth she 'on what occasion break 1270

Those tears from thee that down thy cheeks are raining?

If thou dost weep for grief of my sustaining, Know, gentle wench, it small avails my mood;

If tears could help, mine own would do me good.

'But tell me, girl, when went '—and there she stay'd 1275 Till after a deep groan—'Tarquin from

hence?'
'Madam, ere I was up,' replied the maid

'The more to blame my sluggard negligence.

Yet with the fault I thus far can dispense: Myself was stirring ere the break of day, And ere I rose was Tarquin gone away.

'But, lady, if your maid may be so bold, She would request to know your heaviness.'
'O, peace!' quoth Lucrece 'If it should be told,

The repetition cannot make it less, 1285
For more it is than I can well express;
And that deep torture may be call'd a

When more is felt than one hath power to tell.

'Go, get me hither paper, ink, and pen— Yet save that labour, for I have them here. What should I say ?—One of my husband's men

Bid thou be ready, by and by, to bear
A letter to my loid, my love, my dear.
Bid him with speed prepare to carry it;
The cause craves haste, and it will soon
be writ.'

Her maid is gone, and she prepares to write, First hovering o'er the paper with her quill. Conceit and grief an eager combat fight; What wit sets down is blotted straight with will;

This is too curious-good, this blunt and ill:
Much like a press of people at a door,
Throng her inventions, which shall go
before.

At last she thus begins: 'Thou worthy lord

Of that unworthy wife that greeteth thee, Health to thy person! Next vouchsafe t' afford—

If ever, love, thy Lucrece thou wilt see— Some present speed to come and visit me. So I commend me from our house in grief;

My woes are tedious, though my words
are brief'.

Here folds she up the tenour of her woe, Her certain sorrow writ uncertainly. 1311 By this short schedule Collatine may know Her grief, but not her grief's true quality; She dares not thereof make discovery,

Lest he should hold it her own gross abuse,
1315
Erache with blood had stain'd her stain'd

Ere she with blood had stain'd her stain'd excuse.

Besides, the life and feeling of her passion She hoards, to spend when he is by to hear

When sighs and groans and tears may grace the fashion

Of her disgrace, the better so to clear her From that suspicion which the world might bear her.

To shun this blot, she would not blot the letter

With words, till action might become them better.

To see sad sights moves more than hear them told;

For then the eye interprets to the ear 1325 The heavy motion that it doth behold, When every part a part of woe doth bear.

'Tis but a part of sorrow that we hear:

Deep sounds make lesser noise than shallow fords,

And sorrow ebbs, being blown with wind of words.

Her letter now is seal'd, and on it writ
'At Ardea to iny lord with more than haste'.

The post attends, and she delivers it, Charging the sour-fac'd groom to hie as fast As lagging fowls before the northern blast. Speed more than speed but dull and slow she deems: 133' Extremity still urgeth such extremes.

The homely villain curtsies to her low; And blushing on her, with a steadfast eye Receives the scroll without or yea or no, And forth with bashful innocence doth hie. But they whose guilt within their bosoms

Imagine every eye beholds their blame; For Lucrece thought he blush'd to see her shame.

When, silly groom God wot, it was defect Of spirit, life, and bold audacity. 1346 Such harmless creatures have a true respect To talk in deeds, while others saucily Promise more speed but do it leisurely.

Even so, this pattern of the worn-out age Pawn'd honest looks, but laid no words to gage.

His kindled duty kindled her mistrust, That two red fires in both their faces blazed; She thought he blush'd as knowing Tarquin's lust,

And, blushing with him, wistly on him gazed;

Her carnest eye did make him more amazed; The more she saw the blood his cheeks repienish,

The more she thought he spied in her some blemish.

But long she thanks till he return again, And yet the duteous vassal scarce is gone. The weary tame she cannot entertain, 1361 For now 'tis stale to sigh, to weep, and groan;

So woe hath wearied woe, moan tired moan, That she her plaints a little while doth stav.

Pausing for means to mourn some newer way.

At last she calls to mind where hangs a In speech, it seem d, his beard all silver

Of skilful painting, made for Priam's Troy: Before the which is drawn the power of Greece

For Helen's rape the city to destroy,

Threat'ning cloud-kissing Ilion with annoy; Which the conceited painter drew so proud, 1371

As heaven, it seem'd, to kiss the turrets bow'd.

A thousand amentable objects there, In scorn of nature, art gave lifeless life: Many a dry drop seem'd a weeping tear Shed for the slaught'red husband by the 1376

The red blood reek'd to show the painter's strife:

And dving eyes gleam'd forth their ashy lights.

Like dying coals burnt out in tedious nights.

There might you see the labouring pione Begrim'd with sweat and smeared all with dust:

And from the towers of Troy there would appear

The very eyes of men through loopholes thrust.

Gazing upon the Greeks with little lust. Such sweet observance in this work was 1357

That one might see those far-off eyes look sad.

In great commanders grace and majesty You might behold, triumphing in their taces;

In youth, quick bearing and dexterity; And here and there the painter inter-

Pale cowards marching on with trembling paces,

Which heartless peasants did so well resemble

That one would swear he saw them quake and tremble.

In Ajax and Ulysses, O what art Of physiognomy might one behold! The face of either cipher'd either's heart; Their face their manners most expressly told:

In Ajax' eyes blunt rage and rigour roll'd: But the mild glance that sly Ulysses lent Show'd deep regard and smiling government.

There pleading might you see grave Nestor stand.

As 'twere encouraging the Greeks to fight, Making such sober action with his hand sight.

white T405

Wagg'd up and down, and from his lips did fly

Thin winding breath, which purl'd up to the sky.

About him were a press of gaping faces. Which seem'd to swallow up his sound advice.

All jointly list'ning, but with several graces. As if some mermaid did their ears entice: Some high, some low—the painter was so nice--

The scalps of many, almost hid behind, To jump up higher seem'd to mock the mind.

Here one man's hand lean'd on another's head.

His nose being shadowed by his neighbour's ear;

Here one being throng'd bears back, all boll'n and red;

Another smother'd seems to pelt and swear; And in their rage such signs of rage they

As, but for loss of Nestor's golden words, It seem'd they would debate with angry swords.

For much imaginary work was there: Concert decertful, so compact, so kind. That for Achilles' image stood his spear, Grip'd in an armed hand; himself, behind Was left unseen, save to the eye of mind: A hand, a foot, a tace a leg, a head, Stood for the whole to be imagined.

And from the walls of strong-besieged Troy their brave hope, bold Hector, When march'd to field,

Stood many Troyan mothers, sharing joy To see their youthful sons bright weapons wield:

And to their hope they such odd action vield

That through their light joy seemed to appear,

Like bright things stain'd, a kind of heavy fear. 1435

And from the strond of Dardan where they fought,

To Simois' reedy banks, the red blood ran, Whose waves to imitate the battle sought With swelling ridges; and their ranks began

To break upon the galled shore, and than Retire again, till meeting greater ranks They join, and shoot their foam at Simois' banks.

To this well-painted piece is Lucrece come, To find a face where all distress is stell'd. That it beguil'd attention, charm'd the Many she sees where cares have carved some. ¥445

But none where all distress and dolour 'Lo, here weeps Hecuba, here Priam dies, dwell'd.

Till she despairing Hecuba beheld,

Staring on Priam's wounds with her old

Which bleeding under Pyrrhus' proud foot lies.

In her the painter had anatomiz'd 2450 Time's ruin, beauty's wrack, and grim care' reign:

Her cheeks with chaps and wrinkles were disguis'd;

Of what she was no semblance did remain Her blue blood chang'd to black in every vein,

Wanting the spring that those shrunk pipes had fed. Show'd life imprison'd in a body dead.

On this sad shadow Lucrece spends her eyes. And shapes her sorrow to the beldam's woes. Who nothing wants to answer her but cries And bitter words to ban her cruel foes: 1460

The painter was no god to lend her those; And therefore Lucrece swears he did her wrong

To give her so much grief and not a tongue.

'Poor instrument,' quoth she 'without a sound.

I'll tune thy woes with my lamenting tongue.

And drop sweet balm in Priam's painted wound.

And rail on Pyrrhus that hath done him wrong,

And with my tears quench Troy that burns so long;

And with my knife scratch out the angry

Of all the Greeks that are thine enemies.

'Show me the strumpet that began this stir. That with my nails her beauty I may tear.

Thy heat of lust, fond Paris, did incur This load of wrath that burning Troy doth bear. 1474 Thy eye kindled the fire that burneth here; And here in Troy, for trespass of thme

The sire, the son, the dame, and daughter die.

'Why should the private pleasure of some one

Become the public plague of many moe? Let sin, alone committed, light alone 1480 Upon his head that hath transgressed so: Let guiltless souls be freed from guilty woe. For one's offence why should so many

To plague a private sin in general?

Here manly Hector faints, here Troilus sounds:

Here friend by friend in bloody channel lies. And friend to friend gives unadvised wounds.

And one man's lust these many lives confounds.

Had doting Priam check'd his son's desire,

Troy had been bright with fame, and not with fire."

Here feelingly she weeps Troy's painted woes:

For sorrow, like a heavy-hanging bell. Once set on ringing, with his own weight goes;

Then little strength rings out the doleful knell:

So Lucrece set a-work sad tales doth tell To pencill'd pensiveness and colour'd sorrow: She lends them words, and she their looks doth borrow.

She throws her eyes about the painting round.

And who she finds forlorn she doth lament. At last she sees a wretched image bound That piteous looks to Phrygian shepherds lent;

His face, though full of cares, yet show'd content:

Onward to Troy with the blunt swains he goes,

So mild that Patience seem'd to scorn his woes.

In him the painter labour'd with his skill To hide deceit, and give the harmless show An humble gait, calm looks, eyes wailing still.

A brow unbent, that seem'd to welcome woe;

Cheeks neither red nor pale, but mingled so That blushing red no guilty instance gave, Nor ashy pale the fear that false hearts have;

But, like a constant and confirmed devil, He entertain'd a show so seeming just, And therein so enscone'd his secret evil, That jealousy itself could not mistrust 1516 False-creeping craft and perjury should thrust

Into so bright a day such black-fac'd storms,

Or blot with hell-born sin such saint-like forms.

The well-skill'd workman this mild image drew For perjur'd Sinon, whose enchanting story The credulous old Priam after slew;

This picture she advisedly perus'd, And chid the painter for his wondrous skill:

Saying, some shape in Sinon's was abus'd. So fair a form lodg'd not a mind so ill; 1530 And still on him she gaz'd, and gazing

Such signs of truth in his plain face she spied

That she concludes the picture was belied.

'It cannot be' quoth she 'that so much guile

She would have said 'can lurk in such a look '

But Tarquin's shape came in her mind the while.

And from her tongue 'can lurk' from cannot took:

'It cannot be 'she in that sense forsook, And turn'd it thus: 'It cannot be, I find. But such a face should bear a wicked mind:

' For even as subtle Sinon here is painted. So soher-sad, so weary, and so mild,

As if with grief or travarl he had fainted, To me came Tarquin armed; so beguil'd With outward honesty, but yet defil'd 1545 With inward vice. As Priam bim did cherish.

So did I Tarquin; so my Troy did perish.

'Look, look, how list'ning Priam wets his eyes,

To see those borrowed tears that Sinon sheds.

That patience is quite beaten from her breast.

She tears the senseless Sinon with her nails, Comparing him to that unhappy guest 1565 Whose deed hath made herself berself detest.

At last she smilingly with this gives o'er: 'Fool! fool!' quoth she 'his wounds will not be sore.

Thus ebbs and flows the current of her sorrow.

And time doth weary time with her complaining. She looks for night, and then she longs for morrow, And both she thinks too long with her remaining.

Short time seems long in sorrow's sharp sustaining:

Though woe be heavy, yet it seldom sleeps:

And they that watch see time how slow it creeps.

Amazedly in her sad face he stares: Her eyes, though sod in tears, look'd red and raw.

Her lively colour kill'd with deadly cares. He hath no power to ask her how she fares;

Both stood like old acquaintance in a trance.

Met far from home, wond'ring each other's chance.

Only to flatter fools, and make them bold; At last he takes her by the bloodless hand,

And thus begins: 'What uncouth ill event That he finds means to burn his Troy Hath thee befall'n, that thou dost trembling stand?

Sweet love, what spite hath thy fair colour spent?

Why art thou thus attir'd in discontent?
Unmask, dear dear, this moody heaviness,

And tell thy grief, that we may give redress'.

Three times with sighs she gives her sorrow fire

Ere once she can discharge one word of woe;
At length address'd to answer his desire,

At length address'd to answer his desire, She modestly prepares to let them know Her honour is ta'en prisoner by the foe;

In me moe woes than words are now depending; 1615

And my laments would be drawn out too long

To tell them all with one poor tired tongue.

'Then be this all the task it hath to say:
Dear husband, in the interest of thy bed
A stranger came and on that pillow lay 1620
Where thou wast wont to rest thy wealy head;

And what wrong else may be imagined By foul enforcement might be done to me From that, alas, thy Lucrece is not free.

For in the dreadful dead of dark midnight, 1625 With shining falchion in my chamber came

A creeping creature, with a flaming light,
And softly cried "Awake, thou Roman dame,
1628

And entertain my love; else lasting shame On thee and thine this night I will inflict, If thou my love's desire do contradict.

"For some hard-favour'd groom of thine" quoth he

"Unless thou yoke thy liking to my will,
I'll murder straight, and then I'll slaughter
thee,
1634

And swear I found you where you did fulfil

The loathsome act of lust, and so did kill
The lechers in their deed: this act will be My fame, and thy perpetual infamy".

'With this I did begin to start and cry, And then against my heart he set his sword, Swearing, unless I took all patiently, 1641 I should not live to speak another word, So should my shame still rest upon record, And never be forgot in mighty Rome Th' adulterate death of Lucrece and her groom.

' Mine enemy was strong, my poor self weak,

And far the weaker with so strong a fear.

My bloody judge forbade my tongue to speak;

No rightful plea might plead for justice there.

His scarlet lust came evidence to swear 1650 That my poor beauty had purloin'd his eyes,

And when the judge is robb'd, the prisoner dies.

O, teach me how to make mine own excuse!
Or, at the least, this refuge let me find:
Though my gross blood be stain'd with this
abuse,

Immaculate and spotless is my mind; That was not forc'd; that never was inclin'd

To accessary yieldings, but still pure Doth in her poison'd closet yet endure.'

Lo, here, the hopeless merchant of this loss, With head declin'd and voice damm'd up with woe, 1667

With sad-set eyes and wretched arms across,

From lips new-waxen pale begins to blow The grief away that stops his answer so; But wretched as he is he strives in vain;

What he breathes out his breath drinks up again.

As through an arch the violent roaring tide Outruns the eye that doth behold his haste, Yet in the eddy boundeth in his pride Back to the strait that forc'd him on so

In rage sent out, recall'd in rage, being past;

Even so his sighs, his sorrows, make a saw,

To push grief on, and back the same grief draw.

Which speechless woe of his poor she attendeth, 1674

And his untimely frenzy thus awaketh:
Dear lord, thy sorrow to my sorrow lendeth

Another power; no flood by raining slaketh.

My woe too sensible thy passion maketh More feeling-painful. Let it then suffice To drown one woe, one pair of weeping eyes.

'But ere I name him, you, fair lords,' quoth she,

Speaking to those that came with Collatine, 'Shall plight your honourable faiths to me With swift pursuit to venge this wrong of TOOT mine;

For 'tis a meritorious fair design

To chase injustice with revengeful arms: Knights, by their oaths, should right poor ladies' harms'.

At this request, with noble disposition 1695 Each present lord began to promise aid, As bound in knighthood to her imposition, Longing to hear the hateful foe bewray'd. But she, that yet her sad task hath not said.

The protestation stops. 'O speak,' quoth 1700

'What is the quality of my offence, Being constrain'd with dreadful circumstance? May my pure mind with the foul act

And why not I from this compelled stain?

With this, they all at once began to say Her body's stain her mind untainted clears:

While with a joyless smile she turns away The face, that map which deep impression

Here with a sigh, as if her heart would break.

She throws forth Tarquin's name: 'He, he' she says.

But more than 'he' her poor tongue could not speak ;

Till after many accents and delays,

Untimely breathings, sick, and short assays, She utters this: 'He, he, fair lords, 'tis

And ever since, as pitying Lucrece' woes. Corrupted blood some watery token shows; And blood untainted still doth red abide, Blushing at that which is so putrified.

By this starts Collatine as from a dream, And bids Lucretius give his sorrow place; And then in key-cold Lucrece' bleeding stream

When I do count the clock that tells the time,

And see the brave day sunk in hideous night:

When I behold the violet past prime,
And sable curls all silver'd o'er with white;
When lofty trees I see barren of leaves, 5
Which erst from heat did canopy the herd,
And summer's green all girded up in sheaves
Borne on the bier with white and bristly beard;

Then of the beauty do I question make
That thou among the wastes of time must

Since sweets and beauties do themselves forsake.

And die as fast as they see others grow;
And nothing 'gainst Time's scythe can
make defence

Save breed, to brave him when he takes thee hence.

13

O that you were yourself! But, love, you are

No longer yours than you your self here live.

Against this coming end you should prepare,

And your sweet semblance to some other give. So should that beauty which you hold in lease 5

Find no determination; then you were

Your self again, after your self's decease, When your sweet issue your sweet form should bear.

Who lets so fair a house fall to decay, 9 Which husbandry in honour might uphold Against the stormy gusts of winter's day And barren rage of death's eternal cold?

O, none but unthrifts! Dear my love, you know

You had a father: let your son say so.

Not from the stars do I my judgment pluck, And yet methinks I have astronomy; But not to tell of good or evil luck, Of plagues, of dearths, or seasons' quality; Nor can I fortune to brief minutes tell, Pointing to each his thunder, rain, and wind.

Or say with princes if it shall go well By oft predict that I in heaven find; But from thine eyes my knowledge I derive, And, constant stars, in them I read such art

As truth and beauty shall together thrive, If from thy self to store thou wouldst convert.

Or else of thee this I prognosticate:
Thy end is truth's and beauty's doom and date.

15

When I consider every thing that grows Holds in perfection but a little moment, That this huge stage presenteth nought but shows

Whereon the stars in secret influence comment:

When I perceive that men as plants increase,

Cheered and check'd even by the self-same sky,

Vaunt in their youthful sap, at height decrease,

And wear their brave state out of memory; Then the conceit of this inconstant stay Sets you most rich in youth before my sight,

Where wasteful Time debateth with Decay

To change your day of youth to sullied night:

And all in war with Time for love of you, As he takes from you, I engraft you new.

16

But wherefore do not you a mightier way Make war upon this bloody tyrant Time? And fortify your self in your decay With means more blessed than my barren rhyme?

Now stand you on the top of happy hours, And many maiden gardens, yet unset, 6 With virtuous wish would bear your living flowers,

Much liker than your painted counterfeit; So should the lines of life that life repair, 9 Which this, Time's pencil or my pupil pen, Neither in inward worth, nor outward fair, Can make you live your self in eyes of men.

To give away your self keeps your self still:

And you must live, drawn by your own sweet skill.

17

Who will believe my verse in time to come, If it were fill'd with your most high deserts? Though yet, heaven knows, it is but as a tomb

Which hides your life and shows not half your parts.

If I could write the beauty of your eyes 5
And in fiesh numbers number all your graces.

The age to come would say 'This poet lies; Such heavenly touches ne'er touch'd earthly faces'.

So should my papers, yellowed with their age,

Be scorn'd, like old men of less truth than tongue;

And your true rights be term'd a poet's rage,

And stretched metre of an antique song.

But were some child of yours alive that time.

You should live twice—in it, and in my rhyme.

18

Shall I compare thee to a summer's day?
Thou art more lovely and more temperate,
Rough winds do shake the darling buds of
May,

And summer's lease hath all too short a date:

Sometime too hot the eye of heaven shines, And often is his gold complexion dimm'd; And every fair from fair some time declines, By chance, or nature's changing course, untrimm'd;

But thy eternal summer shall not fade 9 Nor lose possession of that fair thou ow'st; Nor shall Death brag thou wand'rest in his shade,

When in eternal lines to time thou grow'st. So long as men can breathe or eyes can

So long lives this, and this gives life to thee.

19

Devouring Time, blunt thou the lion's paws, And make the earth devour her own sweet brood;

Pluck the keen teeth from the fierce tiger's jaws,

And burn the long-liv'd phœnix in her blood:

Make glad and sorry seasons as thou fleet'st, And do whate'er thou wilt, swift-footed Time,

To the wide world and all her fading sweets; But I forbid thee one most heinous crime: O, carve not with thy hours my love's fair brow. Not draw no lines there with thine antique pen;

Firm in thy course untainted do allow For beauty's pattern to succeeding men. Yet, do thy worst, old Time. Despite thy wrong, My love shall in my verse ever live young passion;

A woman's gentle heart, but not acquainted

With shifting change, as is false woman's fashion;

An eye more bright than theirs, less false in rolling,

Gilding the object whereupon it gazeth;
A man in hue all hues in his controlling,
Which steals men's eyes and women's souls

And for a woman wert thou first cleated; fill Nature, as she wrought thee, tell adoting,

So is it not with me as with that Muse, Stirr'd by a painted beauty to his verse; Who heaven itself for ornament doth use, And every fair with his fair doth rehearse, Making a couplement of proud compare 5 With sun and moon, with earth and sea's rich gems,

With April's first-born flowers, and all things rare

That heaven's air in this huge rondure hems.

I will not praise that purpose not to sell.

My glass shall not persuade me I am old So long as youth and thou are of one date; But when in thee time's furrows I behold, Then look I death my days should expiate. For all that beauty that doth cover thee 5 Is but the seemly raiment of my heart, Which in thy breast doth live, as thine in

How can I then be elder than thou art?

O, therefore, love, be of thyself so wary, As I not for myself but for thee will: Bearing thy heart, which I will keep so chary

As tender nurse her babe from faring ill. Presume not on thy heart when mine is

Thou gav'st me thine, not to give back again.

23

As an unperfect actor on the stage Who with his fear is put besides his part, Or some fierce thing replete with too much rage.

Whose strength's abundance weakens his own heart:

So I, for fear of trust, forget to say The perfect ceremony of love's rite. And in mine own love's strength seem to decay,

O'ercharg'd with burthen of mine own love's might.

O, let my looks be then the eloquence And dumb presagers of my speaking breast; Who plead for love, and look for recom-

More than that tongue that more hath more express'd.

O, learn to read what silent love hath writ!

To hear with eyes belongs to love's fine wit.

Mine eye hath play'd the painter and hath stell'd

Thy beauty's form in table of my heart; My body is the frame wherein 'tis held, And perspective it is best painter's art. For through the painter must you see his skill

To find where your true image pictur'd lies, Which in my bosom's shop is hanging still, That hath his windows glazed with thine eyes.

Now see what good turns eyes for eyes have done:

Mine eyes have drawn thy shape, and thine for me

Are windows to my breast, where through the sun

Delights to peep, to ga_ : therein on thee : Yet eyes this cunning want to grace their art:

They draw but what they see, know not the heart.

25

Let those who are in favour with their stars But day by night and night by day Of public honour and proud titles boast, Whilst I, whom fortune of such triumph And each, though enemies to either's reign, bars.

Unlook'd for joy in that I honour most.

Great princes' favourites their fair leaves spread But as the marigold at the sun's eye:

And in themselves their pride lies buried. For at a frown they in their glory die. The painful warrior famoused for fight, After a thousand victories once foil'd, 10 Is from the book of honour razed quite. And all the rest forgot for which he toil'd.

Then happy I, that love and am beloved Where I may not remove nor be removed.

Lord of my love, to whom in vassalage Thy merit hath my duty strongly knit, To thee I send this written embassage, To witness duty, not to show my wit; Duty so great, which wit so poor as mine s May make seem bare, in wanting words to show it.

But that I hope some good conceit of thine In thy soul's thought, all naked, will bestow

Till whatsoever star that guides my moving Points on me graciously with fair aspect, 10 And puts apparel on my tattered loving To show me worthy of thy sweet respect. Then may I dare to boast how I do love thee;

Till then not show my head where thou mayst prove me.

Weary with toil, I haste me to my bed. The dear repose for limbs with travel fired; But then begins a journey in my head To work my mind when body's work's expired: For then my thoughts, from far where I abide,

Intend a zealous pilgrimage to thee, And keep my drooping eyelids open wide, Looking on darkness which the blind do see; Save that my soul's imaginary sight Presents thy shadow to my sightless view, Which, like a jewel hung in ghastly night, Makes black night beauteous and her old face new.

Lo, thus, by day my limbs, by night my mind.

For thee, and for myself, no quiet find.

28

How can I then return in happy plight That am debarr'd the benefit of rest? When day's oppression is not eas'd by night,

oppress'd?

Do in consent shake hands to torture me. The one by toil, the other to complain going, but such as wink and will not use Further to boast were neither true nor them. 186

Antioch. Before the palace.

Enter GOWER.

To sing a song that old was sung, From ashes ancient Gower is come, Assuming man's infirmities, To glad your ear and please your eyes. It hath been sung at festivals, On ember-eves and holy-ales; And lords and ladies in their lives Have read it for restoratives. The purchase is to make men glorious; Et bonum quo antiquius, eo melius. Ιo If you, born in those latter times, When wit's more ripe, accept my rhymes, And that to hear an old man sing May to your wishes pleasure bring, I life would wish, and that I might 15 Waste it for you, like taper-light. This Antioch, then, Antiochus the Great Built up, this city, for his chiefest seat; The fairest in all Syria--I tell you what mine authors say. This king unto him took a fere, Who died and left a female heir, So buxom, blithe, and full of face, As heaven had lent her all his grace; With whom the father liking took, And her to incest did provoke. Bad child! Worse father! To entice his own To evil should be done by none. But custom what they did begin Was with long use account no sin. The beauty of this sinful dame Made many princes thither frame To seek her as a bed-fellow, In marriage-pleasures play-fellow; Which to prevent he made a law-

To keep her still, and men in awe—
That whoso ask'd her tor his wife,
His riddle told not, lost his life.
So for her many a wight did die,
As yon grim looks do testify.

What now ensues to the judgment of your eye

I give, my cause who best can justify.

Scene III. Tyre. The palace. Enter THALIARD.

Thal. So, this is Tyre, and this the court. Here must I kill King Pericles; and if I do it not, I am sure to be hang'd at home. 'Tis dangerous. Well, I perceive he was a wise fellow and had good discretion that, being bid to ask what he would of the king, desired he might know none of his secrets. Now do I see he had some reason for't; for if a king bid a man be a villain, he's bound by the indenture of his eath to be one. Husht! here comes the lords of Tyre.

Fnter HELICANUS, ESCANES, with other Lords.

Hel. You shall not need, my fellow peers of Tyre,

Dio. I'll do my best, sir.

Cle. This Tharsus, o'er which I have the government,

A city on whom plenty held full hand.

For Riches strew'd herself even in her streets:

Whose towers bore heads so high they kiss'd the clouds,

And strangers ne'er beheld but wond'ied at: Whose men and dames so jetted and adorn'd.

Like one another's glass to trim them by ; Their tables were stor'd full, to glad the sight. And not so much to feed on as delight; 20 All poverty was scorn'd, and pride so great The name of help grew odious to repeat.

Dio. O, 'tis too true!

Cle. But see what heaven can do! By this our change

These mouths who but of late earth, sea, and air,

Were all too little to content and please, 35 Although they gave their creatures in abundance.

As houses are defil'd for want of use. They are now stary'd for want of exercise. Those palates who, not yet two summers

Lord. Where's the Lord Governor? Cle. Here.

Speak out thy sorrows which thou bring'st in haste.

Lord. We have descried, upon our neighbouring shore.

Cle. I thought as much. Che sorrow never comes but brings an heir That may succeed as his inheritor;

And so in ours: some neighbouring nation. Taking ad antage of our misery, Hath stuff'd the hollow vessels with their power. To beat us down, the which are down already; And make a conquest of unhappy me.

Whereas no glory's got to overcome.

Lord. That's the least fear; for by the semblance

Of their white flags display'd, they bring us peace.

And come to us as favourers, not as foes. Cle. Thou speak'st like him's untutor'd to repeat:

Who makes the fairest show means most deceit.

But bring they what they will and what they can,

What need we fear?

Our ground's the lowest, and we are halfway there.

Go tell their general we attend him here, To know for what he comes, and whence he comes.

And what he craves.

Lord. I go, my lord. [Exit. Cle. Welcome is peace, if he on peace consist:

If wars, we are unable to resist.

Enter Pericles, with Attendants.

Per. Lord Governor, for so we hear you are. Let not our ships and number of our men Be like a beacon fir'd t' amaze your eyes. We have heard your miseries as far as Tyre. And seen the desolation of your streets; 89 Nor come we to add sorrow to your tears, But to relieve them of their heavy load; And these our ships you happily may think Have scarce strength left to give them Are like the Troyan horse was stuff'd within

Per. Which welcome we'll accept; feast here awhile,

Until our stars that frown lend us a smile. [Exeunt.

ACT TWO

Enter Gower.

Gow. Here have you seen a mighty king His child iwis to incest bring;
A better prince and benign lord,
That will prove awful both in deed and word.

Be quiet then, as men should be,
Till he hath pass'd necessity.
I'll show you those in troubles reign,
Losing a mite, a mountain gain.
The good in conversation,
To whom I give my benison,
Is still at Tharsus, where each man
Thinks all is writ he speken can;
And, to remember what he does,
Build his statue to make him glorious.
But tidings to the contrary
Are brought your eyes. What need speak I?

Dumb show.

Enter, at one door, PERICLES, talking with CLEON; all the Train with them. Enter, at another door, a Gentleman with a letter to Pericles; Pericles shows the letter to Cleon. Pericles gives the Messenger a reward, and knights him. Exit Pericles at one door and Cleon at another.

Good Helicane, that stay'd at home, Not to eat honey like a drone From others' labours; for though he strive To killen bad, keep good alive; And, to fulfil his prince' desire, Sends word of all that haps in Tyre: How Thaliard came full bent with sin And had intent to murder him; And that in Tharsus was not best Longer for him to make his rest. He, doing so, put forth to seas, Where when men been, there's seldom ease; For now the wind begins to blow: Thunder above and deeps below Makes such unquiet that the ship Should house him safe is wreck'd and split; And he, good prince, having all lost, By waves from coast to coast is toss'd. All perishen of man, of pelf, Ne aught escapen but himself; Till fortune, tir'd with doing bad, Threw him ashore, to give him glad. And here he comes. What shall be next, Pardon old Gower—this longs the text. [Exit.

Scene I. Pentapolis. An open place by the seaside.

Enter PERICLES, wet.

Per. Yet cease your ire, you angry stars of heaven!

Wind, rain, and thunder, remember earthly man

Nothing to think on but ensuing death. Let it suffice the greatness of your powers To have bereft a prince of all his fortunes; And having thrown him from your wat'ry grave.

Here to have death in peace is all he'll crave.

Enter three Fishermen.

1 Fish. What, ho, Pilch!

2 Fish. Ha, come and bring away the nets.

1 Fish. What, Patchbreech, I say!

3 Fish. What say you, master? 15 1 Fish. Look how thou stirr'st now. Come away, or I'll fetch thee with a wanion.

3 Fish. Faith, master, I am thirking of the poor men that were cast away before us even now.

1 Fish. Alas, poor souls! It grieved my heart to hear what pitiful cries they made to us to help them, when, well-a-day, we could scarce help ourselves.

3 Fish. Nay, master, said not I as much when I saw the porpas how he bounc'd and tumbled? They say they're half fish, half flesh. A plague on them! They ne'er come but I look to be wash'd. Master, I marvel how the fishes live in the sea.

1 Fish. Why, as men do a-land—the great ones eat up the little ones. I can compare our rich misers to nothing so fitly as to a whale: 'a plays and tumbles, driving the poor fry before him, and at last devours them all at a mouthful. Such whales have I heard on a'th' land, who never leave gaping till they've swallow'd the whole parish, church, steeple, bells, and all.

Per. [Aside] A pretty moral.

3 Fish. But, master, if I had been the sexton, I would have been that day in the belfry.

2 Fish. Why, man?

3 Fish. Because he should have swallowed me too; and when I had been in his belly I would have kept such a jangling of the bells that he should never have left till he cast bells, steeple, church, and parish up again. But if the good King Simonides were of my mind—

Per. [Aside] Simonides!

3 Fish. We would purge the land of these drones that rob the bee of her honey.

Per. [Asule] How from the finny subject of the sea

These fishers tell the infirmities of men, And from their war'ry empire recollect 50 All that may men approve or men detect!—Peace be at your labour, honest fishermen!

2 Fish. Honest—good fellow! What's that? If it be a day fits you, scratch't out of the calendar, and nobody look after it. 55

Per. May see the sea hath cast upon your coast—

2 Fish. What a drunken knave was the sea to cast thee in our way!

Per. A man whom both the waters and the wind

Per. I never practis'd it.

2 Fish. Nay, then thou wilt starve, sure; for here's nothing to be got now-a-days unless thou canst fish for't.

Per. What I have been I have forgot to

Per. I thank you, sir.

2 Fish. Hark you, my friend; you said you could not beg. 86

Per. I did but crave.

2 Fish. But crave! Then I'll turn craver too, and so I shall scape whipping.

Per. Why, are all your beggars whipp'd, then?

2 Fish. O, not all, my friend, not all! For if all your beggars were whipp'd, I would wish no better office than to be beadle. But, master, I'll go draw up the net.

Per. [Aside] How well this honest muth becomes their labour!

1 Fish Haik you, sir; do you know where ye are?

Per Not well.

1 Fish. Why, I'll tell you: this is call'd Pentapolis, and our king the good Simonides

Per. The good Simonides, do you call him?

1 Fish. Ay, sir; and he deserves so to be call'd for his peaceable reign and good government.

Per. He is a happy king, since he gains from his subjects the name of good by his government. How far is his court distant from this shore?

1 Fish. Marry, sir, half a day's journey; and I'll tell you, he hath a fair daughter, and to-moriow is her birthday, and there are princes and knights come from all parts of the world to joust and tourney for her love.

Per. Were my fortunes equal to my desites, I could wish to make one there. 110

1 Fish. O sir, things must be as they may; and what a man cannot get he may lawfully deal for—his wife's soul.

Re-enter Second and Third Fishermen, drawing up a net.

2 Fish. Help, master, help! Here's a fish hangs in the net like a poor man's right in the law; 'twill hardly come out. Ha! Bots on't! 'Tis come at last, and 'tis turn'd to a rusty armout.

Per. An armour, friends! I pray you let me see it.

1 Fish. What mean you, sir?

Per. To beg of you, kind friends, this coat of worth,

For it was sometime target to a king; 135

I know it by this mark. He lov'd me dearly,

And for his sake I wish the having of it; And that you'd guide me to your sovereign's court,

Where with it I may appear a gentleman And if that ever my low fortune's better, 140 I'll pay your bounties; till then rest your debtor.

1 Fish. Why, wilt thou tourney for the lady?

Per. I'll show the virtue I have borne in arms.

1 Fish. Why, do'e take it, and the gods give thee good on't !

2 Fish. Ay, but hark you, my friend 'twas we that made up this garment through the rough seams of the waters; there are certain condolements, certain vails. I hope, sir, if you thrive, you'll remember from whence you had them. 150

Per. Believe't, I will.
By your furtherance I am cloth'd in steel;
And spite of all the rapture of the sea
This jewel holds his building on my arm.
Unto thy value I will mount myself
Upon a courser whose delightful steps
Shall make the gazer joy to see him tread.
Only, my filend, I yet am unprovided
Of a pair of bases.

2 Fish. We'll sure provide. Thou shalt have my best gown to make thee a pair; and I'll bring thee to the court myself.

Per. Then honour be but a goal to my will;

This day I'll rise, or else add ill to ill.

Scene II. Pentapolis. A public way or platform leading to the lists. A pavilion by the side of it for the reception of the King, Princess, Lords, &c.

Enter SIMONIDES, THAISA, Lords, and Attendants.

Sim. Are the knights ready to begin the triumph?

1 Lord. They are, my liege;

And stay your coming to present themselves.

Sim. Return them we are ready; and our daughter here,

In honour of whose birth these triumphs

Sits here like beauty's child, whom nature

'Tis now your honour, daughter, to entertain

The labour of each knight in his device. 15

Thai. Which, to preserve mine honour,
I'll perform.

Enter a Knight; he passes over, and his Squire presents his shield to the Princess.

Sim. Who is the first that doth prefer himself?

Thai. A knight of Sparta, my renowned father:

And the device he bears upon his shield Is a black Ethiope reaching at the sun; 20 The word, 'Lux tua vita mihi'.

Sim. He loves you well that holds his life of you.

The Second Knight passes by.

Who is the second that presents himself?

Thai. A prince of Macedon, my royal father:

And the device he bears upon his shield 25
Is an arm'd knight that's conquer'd by a lady;

The motto thus, in Spanish, Piu por dulzura que por fuerza.

The Third Knight passes by.

Sim. And what's the third?
Thai. The third of

The Fourth Knight passes by.

Sim. What is the fourth?

Thai. A hurning torch that's turned upside down;

The word, 'Quod me alit, me extinguit'.

Sim. Which shows that beauty hath his power and will,

Wh ch can as well inflame as it can kill. 35

The Fifth Knight passes by.

Thai. The fifth, an hand environed with clouds,

Holding out gold that's by the touchstone tried:

The motto thus, 'Sic spectanda fides'.

For, daughter, so you are—here take your place.

Marshal the rest as they deserve their grace.

Knights. We are honour'd much by good Simonides.

Your presence gads our days. Honour we love;

For who hates honour hates the gods above. Marshal. Sir, yonder is your place. Some other is more fit.

1 Knight. Contend not, sir; for we are gentlemen

That neither in our hearts nor outward eyes

Per. You are right courteous knights. Sim. Sit, sir, sit.

Sim. Here, with a cup that's stor'd unto the brim-As you do love, fill to your mistress' lips-

We drink this health to you. Knights. We thank your Grace.

Sim. Yet pause awhile.

Yon knight doth sit too melancholy, As if the entertainment in our court Had not a show might countervail his worth.

Note it not you, Thaisa?

What is't Thai.

To me, my father? Sim. O, attend. my daughter: Princes, in this, should live like gods above, Who freely give to every one that comes 61 To honour them;

And princes not doing so are like to gnats, Which make a sound, but kill'd are wond'red at.

Therefore to make his entertain more sweet, Here, say we drink this standing-bowl of wine to him.

Thai. Alas, my father, it befits not me Unto a stranger knight to be so bold: He may my proffer take for an offence, 24 Since men take women's gifts for impud-

Sim. How!

Do as I bid you, or you'll move me else.

Thai. [Aside] Now, by the gods, he could not please me better.

Sim. And furthermore tell him we desire to know of him

Of whence he is, his name and parentage. 75 Thai. The King my father, sir, has drunk to you.

Per. I thank him.

Thai. Wishing it so much blood unto your life.

Per. I thank both him and you, and pledge him freely.

That. And further he desires to know of

Of whence you are, your name and parent-

Per. A gentleman of Tyre-my name, Pericles:

My education been in arts and arms: Who, looking for adventures in the world, Was by the rough seas reft of ships and men, And after shipwreck driven upon this shore.

Thai. He thanks your Grace; names himself Pericles.

A gentleman of Tyre.

Who only by misfortune of the seas, Bereft of ships and men, cast on this shore. Sim. Now, by the gods, I pity his misfortune.

And will awake him from his melancholy. Come, gentlemen, we sit too long on trifles And waste the time which looks for other revels.

Even in your armours, as you are address'd, Will very well become a soldier's dance. I will not have excuse, with saying this Loud music is too harsh for ladies' heads. Since they love men in arms as well as beds. [They dance.

So, this was well ask'd, 'twas so well perform'd.

Come, sir;

Here is a lady that wants breathing too; And I have heard you knights of Tyre Are excellent in making ladies trip; And that their measures are as excellent.

Per. In those that practise them they are, my lord.

Sim. O, that's as much as you would be denied

Of your fair courtesy. [The Knights and Ladies dance] Unclasp, unclasp. Thanks, gentlemen, to all; all have done well, [To Pericles] But you the best.-Pages and lights, to conduct

These knights unto their several lodgings!-Yours, sir,

We have given order to be next our own.

Per. I am at your Grace's pleasure. Sim. Princes, it is too late to talk of love, And that's the mark I know you level at.

Therefore each one betake him to his rest . To-morrow all for speeding do their best. [Exeunt.

Scene IV. Tyre. The Governor's house. Enter HELICANUS and ESCANES.

Hel. No. Escanes: know this of me-Antiochus from incest liv'd not free:

Esca. 'Twas very strange.

Hel. And yet but justice; for though This king were great, his greatness was no guard

To bar heaven's shaft, but sin had his reward. 15

Esca. 'Tis very true.

Enter two or three Lords.

1 Lord. See, not a man in private conference

Or council has respect with him but he. 2 Lord. It shall no longer grieve without the top, And now at length they overflow their banks.

Hel. Your griefs! for what? Wrong not your prince you love.

1 Lord. Wrong not yourself, then, noble Helicane; But if the prince do live, let us salute him,

Or know what ground's made happy by his breath.

If in the world he live, we'll seek him out; If in his grave he rest, we'll find him there; And be resolv'd he lives to govern us, Or, dead, give's cause to mourn his funeral, And leave us to our free election.

A married life.

Her reason to herself is only known, Which from her by no means can I get.

2 Knight. May we not get access to her, my lord?

Sim. Faith, by no means; she hath so strictly fied her

To her-chamber that it is impossible.

One twelve moons more she'll wear Diana's livery.

This by the eye of Cynthia hath she vow'd. And on her virgin honour will not break it. 3 Knight. Loath to bid farewell, we take our leaves. [Exeunt Knights.

Sim. So, They are well despatch'd. Now to my daughter's letter.

She tells me here she'll wed the stranger knight,

Or never more to view nor day nor light. 'Tis well, mistress; your choice agrees with mine;

I like that well. Nay, how absolute she's in't.

Enter Lychorida, with an Infant.

Now, Lychorida! Lyc. Here is a thing too young for such a place.

Who, if it had conceit, would die, as I Am like to do. Take in your arms this piece Of your dead queen.

How, how, Lychorida? Per. Lyc. Patience, good sir; do not assist the storm.

Here's all that is left living of your queen-A little daughter. For the sake of it, Be manly, and take comfort.

O you gods! Why do you make us love your goodly gifts, And snatch them straight away? We here below

Recall not what we give, and therein may Use honour with you.

Lyc. Patience, good sir, even for this charge.

Per. Now, mild may be thy life! For a more blusterous birth had never babe; Quiet and gentle thy conditions! for Thou art the rudeliest welcome to this world

That ever was prince's child. Happy what follows!

Thou hast as chiding a nativity

As fire, air, water, earth, and heaven, can make.

To herald thee from the womb.

Even at the first thy loss is more than can Thy portage quit with all thou canst find here.

Now the good gods throw their best eyes upon't!

Enter two Sailors.

1 Sail. What courage, sir? God save you! Per. Courage enough: I do not fear the flaw;

It hath done to me the worst. Yet, for the love

1 Sail. Slack the bolins there.-Thou wilt not, wilt thou? Blow, and split thyself. 2 Sail. But sea-room, an the brine and cloudy billow kiss the moon, I care not. 46

1 Sail. Sir, your queen must overboard: the sea works high, the wind is loud, and will not lie till the ship be clear'd of the dead.

Per. That's your superstition.

1 Sail. Pardon us, sir; with us at sea it hath been still observed, and we are strong in custom. Therefore briefly yield'er; for she must overboard straight.

Per. As you think meet. Most wretched queen!

Scene II. Ephesus. Cerimon's house.

Enter CERIMON, with a Servant, and some Persons who have been shipwrecked.

Cer. Philemon, ho!

Enter PHILEMON.

Phil. Doth my lord call?

Cer. Get fire and meat for these poor men. Such strong renown as time shall never raze. 'T'as been a turbulent and stormy night. Serv. I have been in many; but such a night as this,

Till now, I ne'er endured.

Cer. Your master will be dead eie you return:

There's nothing can be minist'red to nature That can recover him. [To Philemon] Give this to the pothecary.

And tell me how it works.

[Exeunt all but Cerimon.

Enter two Gentlemen.

1 Gent. Good morrow.

2 Gent. Good morrow to your lordship. Cer. Gentlemen, why do you stir so early?

1 Gent. Sir, Our lodgings, standing bleak upon the sea

Shook as the earth did quake; The very principals did seem to rend, And all to topple. Pure surprise and fear Made me to quit the house.

2 Gent. That is the cause we trouble you most sweetly in my sense. so early;

'Tis not our husbandry.

Cer. O, you say well. 20 1 Gent. But I much marvel that your lordship, having Rich tire about you, should at these early

Shake off the golden slumber of repose. 'Tis most strange

Nature should be so conversant with pain, Being thereto not compell'd.

1 Ser. So. lift there.

Cer. What's that?

1 Serv. Sir, even now did the sea toss up upon our shore this chest. 'Tis of some wreck.

Cer. Set't down, let's look upon't.

2 Gent. 'Tis like a coffin, sir.

Čeī. Whate'er it be, 55 'Tis wondrous heavy. Wrench it open straight.

If the sea's stomach be o'ercharg'd with gold.

'Tis a good constraint of fortune it belches upon us.

2 Gent. Tis so, my lord.

Cer. How close 'tis caulk'd and bitumed! Did the sea cast it up?

1 Serv. I never saw so huge a billow, sir. as toss'd it upon shore.

Cer. Wrench it open. Soft! It smells

2 Gent. A delicate odour. Cer. As ever hit my nostril. So, up with it. O you most potent gods! What's here? A corse!

1 Gent. Most strange! Cer. Shrouded in cloth of state; balm'd and entreasur'd with full bags of spices. A passport too. Apollo, perfect me in the characters! [Reads from a scroll.

Here I give to understand— If e'er this coffin drives a-land— I, King Pericles, have lost This queen, worth all our mundage cost. Who finds her, give her burying; She was the daughter of a king. Besides this treasure for a ice, The gods requite his charity! 80

Cer. Hush, my gentle neighbours! Lend me your hands: to the next chamber bear her: Get linen. Now this matter must be look'd

For her relapse is mortal. Come, come; and Æsculapius guide us! [Exeunt, carrying her away.

Scene III. Tharsus. Cleon's house.

Enter Pericles, Cleon, Dionyza, and LYCHORIDA with MARINA in her arms.

Per. Most honour'd Cleon, I must needs be gone:

My twelve months are expire, and Tyrus stands

In a litigious peace. You and your lady Take from my heart all thankfulness! The gods

Make up the rest upon you!

Cle. Your shafts of fortune, though they hurt you mortally, Yet glance full wand'ringly on us.

Dio. O your sweet queen! That the strict Fates had pleas'd you had brought her hither,

To have bless'd mine eyes with her ! We cannot but obey The powers above us. Could I rage and roar As doth the sea she lies in, yet the end Must be as 'tis. My gentle babe Marina,

For she was born at sea, I have nam'd so.

I charge your charity withal, leaving her

The infant of your case; beseeching you 15 To give her princely training, that she may Be manner'd as she is born.

Per. I believe you; 25 Your honour and your goodness teach me

Without your vows. Till she be married, madam.

By bright Diana, whom we honour all, 28 Unscissor'd shall this hair of mine remain, Though I show ill in't. So I take my leave.

Good madam, make me blessed in your care In bringing up my child.

I have one myself, Who shall not be more dear to my respect Than yours, my lord.

Per. Madam, my thanks and prayers. Cle. We'll bring your Grace e'en to the edge c' th' shore,

Then give you up to the mask'd Neptune and The gentlest winds of heaven.

Per. I will embrace Your offer. Come, dearest madam. O, no tears.

Lychorida, no tears.

Look to your little mistress, on whose grace You may depend hereafter. Come, my lord. Exeunt.

Scene IV. Ephesus. Cerimon's house. Enter CERIMON and THAISA.

Cer. Madam, this letter, and some certain jewels.

Lay with you in your coffer; which are At your command. Know you the character?

Thai. It is my lord's. That I was shipp'd at sea I well remember. Even on my eaning time: but whether

PERICLES [Act 4

Diana's temple is not distant far, Where you may abide till your date expire.

Moreover, if you please, a niece of mine 15 Shall there attend you.

Thai. My recompense is thanks, that's all; Yet my good will is great, though the gift small.

[Exeunt.

ACT FOUR

Enter Gower.

Gow. Imagine Pericles arriv'd at Tyre, Welcom'd and settled to his own desire. His woeful queen we leave at Ephesus. Unto Diana there a votaress. Now to Marina bend your mind. Whom our fast-growing scene must find At Tharsus, and by Cleon train'd In music, letters; who hath gain'd Of education all the grace, Which makes her both the heart and place Of general wonder. But, alack, That monster Envy, oft the wrack Of earned praise, Marina's life Seeks to take off by treason's knife. And in this kind hath our Cleon One daughter, and a wench tull grown, Even ripe for marriage-rite; this maid Hight Philoten; and it is said For certain in our story, she Would ever with Marina be. Be't when she weav'd the sleided silk With fingers long, small, white as milk; Or when she would with sharp needle wound The cambric, which she made more sound By hurting it; or when to th' lute She sung, and made the night-bird mute, That still records with moan; or when She would with rich and constant pen Vail to her mistress Dian; still This Philoten contends in skill With absolute Marina. So The dove of Paphos might with the crow Vie feathers white. 'Marina gets All praises, which are paid as debts. And not as given. This so darks In Philoten all graceful marks That Cleon's wife, with envy rare, A present murderer does prepare For good Marina, that her daughter Might stand peerless by this slaughter. The sooner her vile thoughts to stead, Lychorida, our nurse, is dead: And cursed Dionyza hath The pregnant instrument of wrath Prest for this blow. The unborn event 45 I do commend to your content; Only I carry winged time Post on the lame feet of my rhyme; Which never could I so convey Unless your thoughts went on my way. 50 Dionyza does appear, With Leonine, a murderer. [Exit.

Scene I. Tharsus. An open place near the seashore.

Enter DIONYZA and LEONINE.

Dio. Thy oath remember; theu hast sworn to do't.

'Tis but a blow, which never shall be known. Thou canst not do a thing in the world so

To yield thee so much profit. Let not conscience,

Which is but cold, inflaming love in thy bosom,

Inflame too nicely; nor let pity, which Even women have cast off, melt thee, but be A soldier to thy purpose.

Leon. I will do't; but yet she is a goodly creature.

Dio. The fitter, then, the gods should have her.

Here she comes weeping for her only mistress' death.

Thou art resolv'd?

Leon. I am resolv'd.

Enter MARINA with a basket of flowers.

Mar. No, I will 10b Tellus of her weed, To strew thy green with flowers. The yellows, blues,

The purple violets, and marigolds, Shall as a carpet hang upon thy grave
While summer days do last. Ay me! poor maid.

Born in a tempest, when my mother died, This world to me is like a lasting storm, 20 Whirring me from my friends,

Dio. How now, Marina! Why do you keep alone?

How chance my daughter is not with you?

Do not

Consume your blood with sorrowing; you have

A nurse of me. Loid, how your favour's chang'd 25
With this unprofitable wee! Come,

Give me your flowers. On the sea margent Walk with Leonine; the air is quick there, And it pierces and sharpens the stomach.

Come,

Leonine, take her by the arm, walk with her.

Mar. No, I pray you;
I'll not bereave you of your servant.

Dio. Come, come; I love the king your father, and yourself,

With more than foreign heart. We every day

Expect him here. When he shall come, and find

Our paragon to all reports thus blasted, He will repent the breadth of his great voyage;

Blame both my lord and me that we have taken

Scene 11 No care to your best courses. Go, I pray You are well-favour'd, and your looks foreyou, Walk, and be cheerful once again; reserve That excellent complexion which did stea The eyes of young and old. Care not for me I can go home alone. Well, I will go; Mar. But yet I have no desire to it. Dio. Come, come, I know 'tis good for Walk half an hour, Leonine, at the least. Remember what I have said. I warrant you, madam Teon. Dio. I'll leave you, my sweet lady, for a while. Pray walk softly; do not heat your blood What! I must have care of you. My thanks, sweet madam Mar. [Exit Dionyza Is this wind westerly that blows? South-west. Mar. When I was born the wind was north. Was't so? Tem. Mar. My father, as nurse says, did never But cried 'Good seamen!' to the sailors, galling His kingly hands hauling ropes; And, clasping to the mast, endur'd a sea That almost burst the deck. Leon. When was this? Mar. When I was born. Never was waves nor wind more violent; And from the ladder-tackle washes off A canvas-climber. 'Ha!' says one 'wolt out? And with a dropping industry they skip

From stern to stern; the boatswain whistles, and Themaster calls, and trebles their confusion. Leon. Come, say your prayers.

What mean you? Mar. Leon. If you require a little space for prayer,

I grant it. Pray; but be not tedious, for 70 The gods are quick of ear, and I am sworn To do my work with haste.

Why will you kill me? Mar.

Leon. To satisfy my lady. Mar. Why would she have me kill'd? Now, as I can remember, by my troth, 75 I never did her hurt in all my life. I never spake bad word, nor did ill turn To any living creature. Believe me, la, I never kill'd a mouse, nor hurt a fly; I trod upon a worm against my will, But I wept for it. How have I offended, Whereinmy death might yield her any profit, Or my life imply her any danger? My commission Leon.

Is not to reason of the deed, but do't. Mar. You will not do't for all the world, I hope.

show

You have a gentle heart. I saw you lately When you caught hurt in parting two that fought.

Good sooth, it show'd well in you. Do so now:

Your lady seeks my life; come you between.

And save poor me, the weaker.

Leon. I am sworn, And will dispatch. Seizes her.

Enter Pirates. 1 Pırate. Hold, villain!

[Leonine runs away. 2 Pirate. A prize! a prize! 3 Pirate. Half part, mates, half part! Come, let's have her aboard suddenly.

[Exeunt Pirates with Marina. Re-enter LEONINE.

Leon. These roguing tnieves serve the great pirate Valdes,

And they have seiz'd Marina. Let her go: There's no hope she will return. I'll swear she's dead

And thrown into the sea. But I'll see further.

Perhaps they will but please themselves upon her.

Not carry her aboard. If she remain, Whom they have ravish'd must by me be slain. Exit.

Scene II. Mytilene. A brothel. Enter Pander, Bawd, and Boult.

Pand. Boult!

Boult. Sir?

Pand. Search the market narrowly. Mytilene is tull of gallants. We lost too much money this mart by being too wenchless.

Bawd. We were never so much out of We have but poor three, and creatures. they can do no more than they can do; and they with continual action are even as good as rotten.

Pand. Therefore let's have fresh ones, whate'er we pay for them. If there be not a conscience to be us'd in every trade, we shall never prosper.

Bawd. Thou say'st true; 'tis not our bringing up of poor bastards-as, I think, I have brought up some eleven-

Boult. Ay, to eleven; and brought them down again. But shall I search the market? Bawd. What else, man? The stuff we have, a strong wind will blow it to pieces, they are so pitifully sodden.

Pand. Thou sayest true; they are too The poor unwholesome, o' conscience. Transvivanian is dead that lay with the little baggage.

Boult. Ay, she quickly poop'd him; she made him roast meat for worms. But I'll [Exit. go search the market.

Pand. Three or four thousand chequins were as pretty a proportion to live quietly, and so give over.

Bawd. Why to give over, I pray you? Is it a shame to get when we are old?

Pand. O. our credit comes not in like the commodity, nor the commodity wages not with the danger; therefore, if in our youths we could pick up some pretty estate, 'twere not amiss to keep our door hatch'd. Besides, the sore terms we stand upon with the gods will be strong with us for giving o'er.

Bawd. Come, other sorts offend as well as we.

Pand. As well as we! Ay, and better too: we offend worse. Neither is our profession any trade; it's no calling. But here comes Boult.

Re-enter BOULT, with the Pirates and MARINA.

Boult. [To Marina] Come your ways.-My masters, you say she's a virgin?

1 Pirate. O, sir, we doubt it not. Boult. Master, I have gone through for this piece you see. If you like her, so; if not. I have lost my earnest.

Bawd. Boult, has she any qualities? 45 Boult. She has a good face, speaks well, and has excellent good clothes; there's no farther necessity of qualities can make her be refus'd.

Bawd. What's her price, Boult?

Boult. I cannot be bated one doit of a thousand pieces.

Pand. Well, follow me, my masters; you Wite, shall have your money presently. take her in; instruct her what she has to do, that she may not be raw in her entertainment. [Excust Pander and Pirates.

Bawd. Boult, take you the marks of herthe colour of her hair, complexion, height, her age, with warrant of her virginity; and He that will give most shall have her first'. Such a maidenhead were no cheap thing, if men were as they have been. Get this done as I command you.

Bawd. Why lament you, pretty one? Mar. That I am pretty.

part in you.

Mar. I accuse them not.

Bawd. You are light into my hands, where you are like to live.

Mar. The more my fault

To scape his hands where I was like to die.

Band. Ay, and you shall live in pleasure. Mar. No.

Bawd. Yes, indeed shall you, and taste gentlemen of all fashions. You shall fare well; you shall have the difference of all complexions. What! do you stop your ears?

Mar. Are you a'woman?

Bawd. What would you have me be, an I be not a woman?

Mar An honest woman, or not a woman. Bawd. Marry, whip thee, gosling! I think shall have something to do with you. Come, you're a young foolish sapling, and must be bow'd as I would have you.

Mar. The gods defend me! Bawd. It it please the gods to defend you by men, then men must comfort you, men must feed you, men must stir you up. Boult's return'd.

Reguter BOULT.

Now, sir, hast thou cried her through the market?

Boult. I have cried her almost to the number of her haus; I have drawn her picture with my voice.

Bawd. And I prithee tell me how dost thou find the inclination of the people, especially of the younger sort?

Boult. Faith, they listened to me as they would have hearkened to their father's testament. There was a Spaniard's mouth so wat'red that he went to bed to her very description.

Bawd. We shall have him here to-morrow with his best ruff on.

Boult. To-night, to-night. But, mistress, do ou know the French knight that cowers i' th' hams Bawd. Who? Monsieur Veroles?

Boult. Ay, he; he offered to cut a caper at the proclamation; but he made a groan at it, and swore he would see her tomorrow.

Bawd. Well, well; as for him, he brought his disease hither: here he does but repair it. I know he will come in our shadow to scatter his crowns in the sun.

Boult. Well, if we had of every nation a traveller, we should lodge them with this

Bawd. [To Marina] Pray you, come hither awhile. You have fortunes coming upon you. Mark me: you must seem to do that fearfully which you commit willingly; Bawd. Come, the gods have done their to despise profit where you have most gain. To weep that you live as ye do makes pity 20 in your lovers; seldom but that pity begets you a good opinion, and that opinion a mere profit. 722

Mar. I understand you not.

Boult. O, take her home, mistress, take her home. These blushes of hers must be quench'd with some present practice.

Bawd. Thou sayest true, i' faith, so they must; for your bride goes to that with shame which is her way to go with warrant.

Boult. Faith, some do, and some do not. But, mistress, if I have bargain'd for the Bawd. Thou mayst cut a morsel off the spit.

Boult, I may so.

Bawd. Who should deny it? Come, young one. I like the manner of your garments well.

Boull. Ay, by my faith, they shall not be chang'd yet.

Bawd. Boult, spend thou that in the town: report what a sojourner we have: you'll lose nothing by custom. When nature fram'd this piece she meant thee a good turn; therefore say what a paragon she is, and thou hast the harvest out of thine own report.

Bult. I warrant vou, mistress, thunder shall not so awake the beds of eels as my giving out her beauty stir up the lewdly inclined. I'll bring home some to-night.

Bawd. Come your ways; follow me. Mar. If fires be hot, knives sharp, or waters deep, Untied I still my virgin knot will keep. Diana aid my purpose!

Bawd. What have we to do with Diana? Pray you will you go with us?

Scene III. Tharsus. Cleon's house.

Enter CLEON and DIONYZA.

Dio. Why are you foolish? Can it be undone?

Cle. O Dionyza, such a piece of slaughter The sun and moon ne'er look'd upon ! Dio. I think You'll turn a child again.

Cle. Were I chief lord of all this spacious world,

I'd give it to undo the deed. O lady, Much less in blood than virtue, yet a princess

To equal any single crown o' th' earth th' justice of compare! O villain

Leonine! Whom thou hast pois'ned too.

If theu hadst drunk to him, 't had been a kindness

Becoming well thy fact. What canst thou When noble Pericles shall demand his child?

Dio. That she is dead. urses are not te Fates.

To foster it, not even to precerve. She died at might; I'll say co. Who can cress it .

Unless you blay the make procent. And for an honest altrabate cry out

She died by foul play'.

Ó, go to. Well, well. Cle. Of all the faults beneath the heavens the gods

Do like this woist.

Dio. Be one of those that thinks The petty wrens of Tharsus will fly hence. And open this to Pericles I do shame To think of what a noble strain you are. And of how coward a spirit.

Cle. To such proceeding Who ever but his approbation added, Though not his prime consent, he did not flow

From honourable sources.

Dro. Be it so, then. Yet none does know, but you, how she came dead.

Nor none can know. Leonine being gone. She did distain my child, and stood between

Her and her fortunes. None would look on But cast their gazes on Marina's face:

Whilst ours was blurted at, and held a mawkin,

Not worth the time of day, If pierc'd me thorough:

And though you call my course unnatural. You not your child well loving, vet I find 'i gleets rue as an enterprise of kindness Perform'd to your sole daughter.

Me. Heavens torgive it! Dio. And as for Pericles, What should he say? We wept after her hearse,

And yet we mourn: her monument Is almost finish'd, and her epitaphs In glittering golden characters express A general praise to her, and care in us At whose expense 'tis done.

Cle. Thou art like the harpy, Which, to betray, dost, with thine angel's face, Seize with thine eagle's talons.

Dio. You are like one that superstitiously Doth swear to the gods that winter kills the flies:

But yet I know you'll do as I advise.

[Exeunt.

10 SCENE JV. Before Marina's monument at Tharsus.

Enter Gower.

Gow. Thus time we waste, and longest leagues make short;

Sail seas in cockles, have an wish but for't; Wherefore she does—and swears she'll Making, to take our imagination,

From bourn to bourn, region to region. By you being pardon'd, we commit no crime

To use one langauge in each several clime Where wir scenes seem to live. I do beseech you

To learn of me, who stand i' th' gaps to teach you

The stages of our story. Pericles Is now again thwaiting the wayward seas, Attended on by many a lord and knight, To see his daughter, all his life's delight. Old Helicanus goes along. Behind Is left to govern it, you bear in mind, Old Escanes, whom Helicanus late Advanc'd in time to great and high estate. Well-sailing ships and bounteous winds have brought thought;

grow on-

To fetch his daughter home, who first is gone.

Like motes and shadows see them move awhile;

Your ears unto your eyes I'll reconcile. Dumb show.

Enter Pericles, at one door, with all his Train: CLEON and DIONYZA at the other. Cleon shows Pericles the tomb of Marina, whereat Pericles makes lamentain, puts on sackcloth, and in a mighty passion departs. Then exeunt Cleon and Dionyza.

See how belief may suffer by foul show! This borrowed passion stands for true old woe;

And Pericles, in sorrow all devour'd, With sighs shot through and biggest tears o'ershower'd,

Leaves Tharsus, and again embarks. He swears

Never to wash his face nor cut his hairs; He puts on sackcloth, and to sea. He bears A tempest which his mortal vessel tears, 30 And yet he rides it out. Now please you wit The epitaph is for Marina writ By wicked Dionyza. [Reads the inscription on Marina's monument. 'The fairest, sweetest, and best lies here, Who withered in her spring of year. She was of Tyrus the King's daughter, On whom foul death hath made this slaughter: Marina was she call'd; and at her birth,

Thetis, being proud, swallowed some part o' th' earth; Therefore the earth, fearing to be o'er-flowed, Hath Thetis' birth-child on the heavens bestowed:

SCENE V. Mytilene. A street before the brothel.

Enter, from the brothel, two Gentlemen.

Scene VI. Mytilene. A room in the brothel. Enter Pander, Bawd, and Boult.

Pand. Well, I had rather than twice the worth of her she had ne'er come here.

Bawd. Fie, fie, upon her! She's able to freeze the god Priapus, and undo a whole We must either get her generation. lavished or be rid of her. When she should do for clients her fitment, and do me the kindness of our profession, she has me her quirks, her reasons, her master-reasons, her prayers, her knees; that she would make a puritan of the devil, if he should cheapen a kiss of her.

Boult. Faith, I must ravish her, or she'll disfurnish us of all our cavalleria and make our swearers priests.

Pand. Now the pox upon her greensickness for me!

Bawd. Faith there's no way to be rid on't but by the way to the pox. Here comes the Lord Lysimachus disguised.

Boult. We should have both lord and lown, if the peevish baggage would but give way to customers.

Enter LYSIMACHUS.

Lvs. How now! How a dozen of virginities?

Bawd. Now, the gods to bless your Honour!

Boult. I am glad to see your Honour in good health.

Scene 67 PERICLES

Lvs. You may so: 'tis the better for you that your resorters stand upon sound legs. How now! Wholesome iniquity have you, that a man may deal withal and defy the surgeon?

Bawd. We have here one, sir, if she would but there never came her like in Mytilene.

Lys. If she'd do the deed of darkness. thou wouldst say.

Bawd. Your Honour knows what 'tis to say well enough.

Lys. Well, call forth, call forth.

Boult. For flesh and blood, sir, white and red, you shall see a rose; and she were a rose indeed, if she had but-

Lys. What, prithee?

Boult. O, sir, I can be modest.

Lys. That dignifies the renown of a bawd no less than it gives a good report to a number to be chaste. [Exit Boult.

Bawd. Here comes that which grows to the stalk—never plucked yet, I can assure vou.

Re-enter BOULT with MARINA.

Is she not a fair creature?

Lys. Faith, she would serve after a long voyage at sea. Well, there's for you. Leave Bawd. I beseech your Honour, give me a word, and I'll have done leave: presently.

Lvs. I beseech vou, do.

Bawd. [Aside to Marina] First, I would have you note this is an honourable man. Mar. I desire to find him so, that I may worthily note him. Bawd. Next, he's the governor of this country, and a man whom I am bound to.

Mar. If he govern the country, you are bound to him indeed; but how honourable he is in that I know not.

Bawd. Pray you, without any more virginal fencing, will you use him kindly? He will line your apron with gold.

Mar. What he will do graciously I will thankfully receive.

Lys. Ha' you done?

Bawd. My lord, she's not pac'd yet; you must take some pains to work her to your manage. Come, we will leave his Honour and her together. Go thy ways.

[Exeunt Bawd, Pander, and Boult. Lys. Now, pretty one, how long have you been at this trade?

Mar. What trade, sir?

Lys. Why, I cannot name't but I shall

Please you to name it.

Lys. How long have you been of this profession?

Mar. E'er since I can remember.

Lys. Did you go to't so young? Were you a gamester at five or at seven?

Mar. Earlier coo, sir, it now I be one 75 Lys. Why, the house you dwell in proclaims you to be a creature of sale.

Mar. Do you know this house to be a place of such resort, and will come into't? I hear say you're of honourable parts, and are the governor of this place. 50 Lys. Why, hath your principal made known unto you who I am

Mar. Who is my principal?

Lvs. Why, your herb-woman; she that sets seeds and roots of shame and iniquity. O, you have heard something of my power, and so stand aloof for more serious wooing. But I protest to thee, pretty one, my authority shall not sec thee, or else look triendly upon thee. Come, bring me to some private place. Come, come.

Mar. If you were born to honour, show it now:

And I will undertake all these to teach. I doubt not but this populous city will Yield many scholars. Boult. But can you teach all this you speak of?

Mar. Prove that I cannot, take me home again

And prostitute me to the basest groom That doth frequent your house.

Boult. Well, I will see what I can do for thee. If I can place thee, I will.

Mar. But amongst honest women?

Boult. Faith, my acquaintance hes little amongst them. But since my master ard mistress have bought you, there's no gon g but by their consent. Therefore I will mal e them acquainted with your purpose and I doubt not but I shall find them tractable enough. Come, I'll do for thee what I can; [Exeunt.

ACT FIVE

Enter Gower.

Gow. Marina thus the brothel scapes and chances

Into an honest house, our story says. She sings like one immortal, and she dances

As goddess-like to her admired lays; Deep clerks she dumbs; and with her needle composes

Mar. Neither of these are so bad as thou Nature's own shape of bud, bird, branch, or berry,

That even her art sisters the natural roses; Her inkle, silk, twin with the rubied cherry; That pupils lacks she none of noble race, Who pour their bounty on her; and her gain

She gives the cursed bawd. Here we her place :

And to her father turn our thoughts again,

Scene 11 PERICLES

Where we left him on the sea. We there him I made to it, to know of whence you are. In lost:

Whence, driven before the winds, he is arrıv'd

Here where his daughter dwells: and on this coast

Suppose him now at anchor. The city striv'd

God Neptune's annual feast to keep: from whence

Lysimachus our Tyrian ship espies,

His banners sable, trimm'd with rich expense;

And to him in his barge with fervour hies. In your supposing once more put your sight.

Of heavy Pericles, think this his bark: Where what is done in action, more, if

Enter two Sailors, one belonging to the Tyrian vessel, the other to the barge; to them HELICANUS.

Tyr. Sail. [To the Sailor of Mytilene] Where is Lord Helicanus? He can resolve

O, here he is.

Sir, there is a barge put off from Mytilene, And in it is Lysimachus the Governor. Who craves to come aboard. What is your will? Hel. That he have his. Call up some gentlemen.

Tyr. Sail. Ho, gentlemen! my lord calls. Enter two or three Gentlemen.

1 Gent. Doth your lordship call? Hel. Gentlemen, there is some of worth would come aboard;

I pray greet him fairly.

[The Gentlemen and the two Sailors descend, and go on board the barge. Enter, from thence, LYSIMACHUS and Lords.

with the Gentlemen and the two Sailors. Tvr. Sail. Sir.

This is the man that can, in aught you would. Resolve you.

Lys. Hail, reverend sir! The gods preserve you!

Hel. And you, sir, to outlive the age I am, And die as I would do.

čou wish me well. Lys. Being on shore, honouring of Neptune's triumphs. Seeing this goodly vessel ride before us.

Hel. First, what is your place? Lys. I am the Governor

Of this place you lie before.

Hel. Sir.

Our vessel is of Tyre, in it the King:

A man who for this three months hath not spoken

To any one, nor taken sustenance But to prorogue his grief.

Lys. Upon what ground is his dis-temperature?

Hel. 'Twould be too tedious to repeat; But the main grief springs from the loss Of a beloved daughter and a wife.

Lys. May we not see him?

Hel. You may;

But bootless is your sight—he will not speak To any.

Lys. Yet let me obtain my wish.

Hel. Behold him. [Pericles discovered] This was a goodly person Till the disaster that, one mortal night, Drove him to this.

Lys. Sir King, all hail! The gods preserve you!

Hail, royal sir! Hel. It is in vain: he will not speak to 1 Lord. Sir, we have a maid in Mytilene, I durst wager,

Would win some words of him.

'Tis well bethought. Lys. She, questionless, with her sweet harmony And other chosen attractions, would allure, And make a batt'ry through his deafen'd parts,

Which now are midway stopp'd.

She is all happy as the fairest of all, And, with her fellow maids, is now upon The leafy shelter that abuts against The island's side. [He whispers First Lord, who goes off in the barge of Lysimachus. Hel. Sure, all's effectless; yet nothing we'll omit

That bears recovery's name. But, since vour kindness

We have stretch'd thus far, let us beseech you

That for our gold we may provision have, Wherein we are not destitute for want, But weary for the staleness.

Lvs. O sir, a courtesy Which if we should deny, the most just gods For every graff would send a caterpillar, And so inflict our province. Yet once more Let me entreat to know at large the cause Of your king's sorrow.

Hel. Sit, sir, I will recount it to you. 62 But, see, I am prevented.

Re-enter, from the barge, First Lord, with MARINA and another Girl.

O. here is Lys.

The lady that I sent for. Welcome, fair one! My daughter might have been: my queen's Is't not a goodly presence?

She's a gallant ladv. 65 Hel. Lys. She's such a one that, were I well assur'd

Came of gentle kind and noble stock,

I'd wish no better choice, and think me rarely wed.

Fair one, all goodness that consists in bounty

Expect even here, where is a kingly patient. If that thy prosperous and artificial feat Can draw him but to answer thee in aught, Thy sacred physic shall receive such pay As thy desires can wish.

Mar. Sir. I will use

My utmost skill in his recovery. Provided

That none but I and my companion maid Be suffered to come near him.

Come, let us leave her; Lvs. And the gods make her prosperous! [Marina sings.

Lys. Mark'd he your music?

No, nor look'd on us. Mar. Lys. See, she will speak to him. Mar. Hail sir! my lord, lend ear.

Per. Hum. ha!

Mar. I am a maid,

My lord, that ne'er before invited eyes But have been gaz'd on like a comet. She speaks. My lord, that, may be, hath endur'd a grief Might equal yours, if both were justly weigh'd.

Though wayward fortune did malign my state.

My derivation was from ancestors Who stood equivalent with mighty kings; But time hath rooted out my parentage, And to the world and awkward casualties Bound me in servitude. [Aside] I will desist; But there is something glows upon my cheek, And whispers in mine ear 'Go not till he speak'.

Per. My fortunes-parentage-good parentage-

To equal mine !-was it not thus? What say you?

Mar. I said, my lord, if you did know my parentage

You would not do me violence.

Per. I do think so. Pray you turn your eyes upon me.

are like something that-What You countrywoman?

Here of these shores?

No, nor of any shores. Yet I was mortally brought forth, and am No other than I appear.

Per. I am great with woe, and shall deliver weeping. My dearest wife was like this maid, and such a one square brows:

stature to an inch; as wand-like straight;

As silver voic'd; her eyes as jewel-like. And cas'd as richly; in pace another Juno: Who starves the ears she feeds, and makes them hungry The more she gives them speech. Where do you live?

Mar. Where I am but a stranger. From the deck

You may discern the place.

Where were you bred? And how achiev'd you these endowments, which

You make more rich to owe? Mar. If I should tell my history, it would Like lies, disdain'd in the reporting.

Prithee speak. Falseness cannot come from thee; for thou lookest Modest as Justice, and thou seem'st a palace T20 For the crown'd Truth to dwell in. I will believe thee. And make my senses credit thy relation

To points that seem impossible; for thou lookest

Like one I lov'd indeed. What were thy friends?

D dst thou not say, when I did push thee back-

Which was when I perceiv'd thee-that thou cam'st

From good descending?

Mar. So indeed I did. Per. Report thy parentage. I think thou

said'st

Thou hadst been toss'd from wrong to injury,

And that thou thought'st thy griefs might equal mine. If both were opened.

Mar. Some such thing

I said, and said no more but what my thoughts

Did warrant me was likely.

Tell thy story; Per. If thine consider'd prove the thousand part Of my endurance, thou art a man, and I 135 Have suffered like a girl. Yet thou dost look Like Patience gazing on kings' graves, and smiling Extremity out of act. What were thy friends?

How lost thou them? Thy name, my most kind virgin?

Recount, I do beseech thee. Come, sit by me.

Mar. My name is Marina. O. I am mock'd. And thou by some incensed god sent hither Scene 11 PERICLES

To make the world to laugh at me. Mar. Patience, good sir.

Or here I'll cease. Per.

Nay, I'll be patient. Thou little know'st he'v thou dost startle me

To call thyself Marina.

Mar. The name

Was given me by one that had some power. My father, and a king.

Per. How! a king's daughter

And call'd Marina?

You said you would believe me But, not to be a troubler of your peace, 15 I will end here.

But are you flesh and blood Have you a working pulse, and are no fairy Motion! Well; speak on. Where were you born?

And wherefore call'd Marina?

Call'd Marina For I was born at sea.

At sea! what mother? 155 Per. Mar. My mother was the daughter of a king;

Who died the minute I was born. As my good nurse Lychorida hath oft Delivered weeping.

Per. O, stop there a little! [Aside] This is the rarest dream that e'er dull sleep

Did mock sad tools withal. This cannot be My daughter's buried.-Well, where were you bred?

I'll hear you more, to th' bottom of your story.

And never interrupt you.

You scorn; believe me, 'twere best I did give o'er.

Per. I will believe you by the syllable Of what you shall deliver. Yet give me leave-

How came you in these parts? where were you bred?

Mar. The King my father did in Tharsus leave me :

Till cruel Cleon, with his wicked wife, 170 Did seek to murder me; and having woo'd A villain to attempt it, who having drawn to do't.

A crew of pirates came and rescued me: Brought me to Mytilene. But, good sir, Whither will you have me? Why do you weep? It may be

You think me an impostor. No, good faith:

I am the daughter to King Pericles.

If good King Pericles be. Per. Ho. Helicanus!

Hel. Calls my lord? 180 Per. Thou art a grave and noble counsellor,

Most wise in general. Tell me. if thou canst. What this maid is, or what is like to be.

That thus hath made me weep ? Hel.

I know not; but Here is the regent, sir, of Mytilene Speaks nobly of her.

Lvs. She never would tell Her parentage; being demanded that

She would sit still and weep.

Per. O Helicanus, strike me, honour'd

Give me a gash, put me to present pain, 190 Lest this great sea of joys rushing upon me O'erbear the shores of my mortality, And drown me with their sweetness come hither.

Thou that beget'st him that d d thee beget; Thou that wast born at sea buried at Tharsus.

And found at sea again! O Helicanus. Down on thy knees, thank the holy gods as loud

As thunder threatens us. This is Marina. What was thy mother's name? Tell me but For truth can never be confirm'd enough. Though doubts did ever sleep.

Mar. First, sir, I pray,

What is your title? Per. I am Pericles of Tyre; but tell me

My drown'd queen's name, as in the rest vou said

Thou hast been godlike perfect, The heir of kingdoms and another life To Pericles thy father.

Mar. Is it no more to be your daughter than

To say my mother's name was Thaisa? Thaisa was my mother, who did end The minute I began.

210 Per. Now blessing on thee! Rise; thou art my child.

Give me fresh garments. Mine own, Helicanus-

She is not dead at Tharsus, as she should have been

By savage Cleon. She shall tell thee al! : When thou shalt kneel, and justify in knowledge

She is thy very princess. Who is this?

Hel. Sir, 'tis the Governor of Mytilene, Who, hearing of your melancholy state, Did come to see you.

I embrace you. Give me my robes. I am wild in my beholding.

O heavens bless my girl! But hark, what

Tell Helicanus, my Marina, tell him

O'er, point by point, for yet he seems to doubt,

How sure you are my daughter. But, what music?

Hel. My lord, I hear none. Per. None?

1265

This, my last boon, give me,

1266

The music of the spheres! List, my For such kindness must relieve me That you aptly will suppose Marina. What pageantry, what feats, what shows. Lys. It is not good to cross him: give him way. Enter Gower.

Gow. In Antiochus and his daughter vou have heard

Of monstrous lust the due and just reward: In Pericles, his queen, and daughter, seen, Although assail'd with fortune fierce and keen.

Virtue preserv'd from fell destruction's blast.

Led on by heaven, and crown'd with joy at last. In Helicanus may you well descry

A figure of truth, of faith, of loyalty; In reverend Cerimon there well appears 94

The worth that learned charity aye wears. For wicked Cleon and his wife, when fame Had spread their cursed deed, and honour'd

Of Pericles, to rage the city turn,

That hun and his they in his palace burn; The gods for murder seemed so content 100 To punish—although not done, but meant. So, on your patience evermore attending, Reverend sir, New joy wait on you! Here our play has ending. Exit.

RIGHT HONOURABLE.

I know not how I shall offend in dedicating my unpolisht lines to your Lordship, nor how the worlde will censure mee for choosing so strong a proppe to support so weake a burthen, onelye if your Honour seeme but pleased, I account my selfe highly praised, and vowe to take advantage of all idle houres, till I have honoured you with some graver labour. But if the first heire of my invention prove deformed, I shall be some it had so noble a god-father: and never after eare so barren a land, for feare it yeeld me still so bad a harvest, I leave it to your Honourable survey, and your Honor to your hearts content which I wish may alwaies answere your owne wish, and the worlds hopefull expectation.

Your Honors in all dutie.

WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE.

EVEN as the sun with purple-colour'd face Ten kisses short as one, one long as twenty. Had ta'en his last leave of the weeping morn,

Rose-cheek'd Adonis hied him to the chase; Hunting he lov'd, but love he laugh'd to sco.n.

Sick-thoughted Venus makes amain unto him.

And like a bold-fac'd suitor gins to woo

'Thrice fairer than myself,' thus she began, 'The field's chief flower, sweet above compare.

Stain to all nymphs, more lovely than a man.

More white and red than doves or roses are ; Nature that made thee, with herself at Saith that the world hath ending with thy life.

'Vouchsafe, thou wonder, to alight thy steed.

And rein his proud head to the saddle-bow: If thou wilt deign this favour, for thy meed A thousand honey secrets shalt thou know. Here come and sit, where never serpent hisses,

And being set, I'll smother thee with kisses:

'And yet not cloy thy lips with loath'd So soon was she along as he was down, satiety, But rather famish them amid their plenty,

Making them red and pale with fresh Now doth she stroke his cheek, now doth variety---

A summer's day will seem an hour but short.

Being wasted in such time-beguiling sport.'

With this she seizeth on his sweating palm, The precedent of pith and livelihood, And, trembling in her passion, calls it balm. Earth's sovereign salve to do a goddess good. Being so enrag'd, desire doth lend her force

Courageously to pluck him from his horse.

Over one arm the lusty courser's rein. Under her other was the tender boy. Who blush'd and pouted in a dull disdain, With leaden appetite, unapt to toy:

She red and hot as coals of glowing fire, He red for shame, but frosty in desire.

The studded bridle on a ragged bough Nimbly she fastens-O, how quick is love!

The steed is stalled up, and even now To tie the rider she begins to prove: Backward she push'd him, as she would be thrust.

And govern'd him in strength, though not in lust.

19 Each leaning on their elbows and their hips;

he frown.

1268

And gins to chide, but soon she stops his

And kissing speaks, with lustful language bloken:

'If thou wilt chide, thy lips shall never open'.

He burns with bashful shame; she with her tears

Doth quench the maiden burning of his cheeks; 5

Then with her windy sighs and golden hairs

To fan and blow them dry again she seeks
He saith she is immodest, blames her miss:

What follows more she murders with a kiss.

Even as an empty eagle, sharp by fast, 55 Tires with her beak on feathers, flesh, and bone,

Shaking her wings, devouring all in haste, Till either gorge be stuff'd, or prey be gone; Even so she kiss'd his brow, his cheek, his chin.

And where she ends she doth anew begin.

Forc'd to content, but never to obey, Panting he lies and breatheth in her face; She feedeth on the steam as on a prey, And calls it heavenly moisture, air of grace,

Wishing her cheeks were gardens full of flowers, 65

So they were dew'd with such distilling showers.

Look how a bird lies tangled in a net, So fast'ned in her arms Adonis lies; Pure shame and aw'd resistance made him fret,

Which bred more beauty in his angry eyes
Rain added to a river that is rank
Perforce will force it overflow the bank.

Still she entreats, and prettily entreats, For to a pretty ear she tunes her tale; Still is he sullen, still he lours and frets, 75 'Twixt crimson shame and anger ashy-pale; Being red, she loves him best; and being

Being red, she loves him best; and being white,

Her best is better'd with a more delight.

Look how he can, she cannot cnoose but love;

And by her fair immortal hand she swears From his soft bosom never to remove Till he take truce with her contending tears,

Which long have rain'd, making her cheeks all wet;

And one sweet kiss shall pay this countless debt.

Upon this promise did he raise his chin, 85 Like a dive-dapper peering through a wave, Who, being look'd on, ducks as quickly in; So offers he to give what she did crave; But when her lips were ready for his pay, He winks, and turns his lips another way.

Never did passenger in summer's heat 91 More thirst for drink than she for this good turn:

Her help she sees, but help she cannot get; She bathes in water, yet her fire must burn. 'O, pity,' gan she cry 'flint-hearted boy! 95

'Tis but a kiss I beg; why art thou coy?

I have been wooed, as I entreat thee now, Even by the stern and direful god of war, Whose sinewy neck in battle ne'er did bow, Who conquers where he comes in every jar:

Yet hath he been my captive and my slave,

And begg'd for that which thou unask'd shalt have.

'Over my altars hath he hung his lance, His batt'red shield, his uncontrolled crest, And for my sake hath leain'd to sport and dance,

To toy, to wanton, dally, smile, and jest, Scotning his churlish drum and ensign red.

Making my arms his field, his tent my bed.

'Thus he that overrul'd I overswayed, Leading him prisoner in a red-rose chain; Strong-temper'd steel his stionger strength obeyed,

Yet was he servile to my cov disdain.

O, be not proud, nor brag not of thy might.

For mast'ring her that foil'd the god of fight!

Touch but my lips with those fair lips of thine;

Though mine be not so fair, yet are they red—

The kiss shall be thine own as well as mine. What seest thou in the ground? Hold up thy head;

Look in mine eyeballs; there thy beauty lies.

Then why not lips on lips, since eyes in eyes?

Art thou asham'd to kiss? Then wink again.

And I will wink; so shall the day seem night.

Love keeps his revels where there are but twain:

Be bold to play; our sport is not in sight.

These blue-vein'd violets whereon we lean

Never can blab, nor know not what we mean.

The tender spring upon thy tempting lip hows thee unripe; yet mayst thou well be tasted;

Make use of time, let not advantage slip; Beauty within itself should not be wasted.

Fair flowers that are not gath'red in their prime

Rot and consume themselves in little time.

'Were I hard-favour'd, foul, or wrinkledold,

Ill-nurtur'd, crooked, churlish, harsh in voice,

O er-worn, despised, rheumatic, and cold, Thick-sighted, barren, lean, and lacking juice, 136

Then mightst thou pause, for then I were not for thee;

But having no defects, why dost abhor me?

Thou canst not see one wrinkle in my brow;

Mine eyes are grey, and bright, and quick in turning; 140 My beauty as the spring doth yearly grow,

My flesh is soft and plump, my marrow burning;

My smooth moist hand, were it with thy hand felt,

Would in thy palm dissolve or seem to melt.

'Bid me discourse, I will enchant thine ear, Or, like a fairy, trip upon the green, 146 Or, like a nymph, with long dishevelled hair,

Dance on the sands, and yet no footing seen.

Love is a spirit all compact of fire.

Not gross to sink, but light, and will aspire. 150

'Witness this primrose bank whereon I lie: These forceless flowers like sturdy trees support me:

Two strengthless doves will draw me through the sky

From morn till night, even where I list to sport me.

Is love so light, sweet boy, and may it be
That thou should think it heavy unto thee? x56

'Is thine own heart to thine own face affected?

Can thy right hand seize love upon thy left?

Then woo thyself, be of thyself rejected; Steal thine own freedom, and complain on theft.

Narcissus so himself himself forsook, And died to kiss his shadow in the brook.

'Torches are made to light, jewels to wear, Dainties to taste, fresh beauty for the use, Herbs for their smell, and sappy plants to bear:

Things growing to themselves are growth's abuse.

Seeds spring from seeds, and beauty breedeth beauty;

Thou wast begot—to get it is thy duty.

'Upon the earth's increase why shouldst thou feed,

Unless the earth with thy increase be fed? By law of nature thou art bound to breed, That thine may live when thou thyself art dead:

And so in spite of death thou dost survive,

In that thy likeness still is left alive.'

By this the love-sick queen began to sweat, For where they lay the shadow had forsook them,

And Titan, tired in the mid-day heat, With burning eye did hotly overlook them; Wishing Adonis had his team to guide, So he were like him, and by Venus' side.

And now Adonis, with a lazy sprite, 181 And with a heavy, dark, disliking eye,

His louring brows o'erwhelming his fair sight,

Like misty vapours when they blot the sky, Souring his cheeks, cries 'Fie, no more of love!

The sun doth burn my face; I must remove'.

'Ay me,' quoth Venus 'young, and so unkind!

What bare excuses mak'st thou to be gone! I'll sigh celestial breath, whose gentle wind Shall cool the heat of this descending

I'll make a shadow for thee of my hairs; If they burn too, I'll quench them with my tears.

'The sun that shines from heaven shines but warm,

And lo, I lie between that sun and thee;
The heat I have from thence doth little harm:

Thine eye darts forth the fire that burneth me;

And were I not immortal, life were done Between this heavenly and earthly sun.

'Art thou obdurate, flinty, hard as steel? Nay, more than flint, for stone at rain relenteth.

Art thou a woman's son, and canst not feel What 'tis to love? how want of love tormenteth?

O, had thy mother borne so hard a mind, She had not brought forth thee, but died unkind!

'What am I, that thou shouldst contemn me this? 205 Or what great danger dwells upon my suit?

What were thy lips the worse for one poor kiss?

Speak, fair; but speak fair words, or else be mute.

Give me one kiss; I'll give it thee again, And one for int'rest, if thou wilt have

'Fie, lifeless picture, cold and senseless stone,

Well-painted idol, image dull and dead, Statue contenting but the eye alone,

Thing like a man, but of no woman bred! Thou art no man, though of a man's complexion.

For men will kiss even by their own direction.

This said, impatience chokes her pleading tongue,

And swelling passion doth provoke a pause; Red cheeks and fiery eyes blaze forth her wrong;

Being judge in love, she cannot right her cause:

And now she weeps, and now she fain would speak.

And now her sobs do her intendments break.

Sometime she shakes her head, and then his hand:

Now gazeth she on him, now on the ground; Sometime her arms infold him like a band; She would, he will not in her arms be bound:

And when from thence he struggles to be gone,

She locks her lily fingers one in one.

' Fondling,' she saith ' since I have hemm'd rough.

To shelter thee from tempest and from rain:

Then be my deer, since I am such a park; No dog shall rouse thee, though a thousand bark.'

At this Adonis smiles as in disdain, That in each cheek appears a pretty dimple. Love made those hollows, if himself were slain.

He might be buried in a tomb so simple;

Foreknowing well, if there he came to he. Why, there Love hy'd and there he could not die.

These levely caves, these round enchanting

Open'd their mouths to swallow Venus liking. Being mad before, how doth she now for wits?

Struck dead at first, what needs a second striking?

Poor queen of love, in thine own law forlorn,

To love a cheek that smiles at thee in scorn!

Now which way shall she turn? What shall she sav?

Her words are done, her woes the more increasing:

The time is spent, her object will away, 255 And from her twining arms doth urge releasing.

'Pity!' she cries 'Some favour, some remorse!'

Away he springs, and hasteth to his horse.

But, lo, from forth a copse that neighbours by,

A breeding jennet, lusty, young, and proud. 260 Adonis' trampling courser doth espy,

And forth she rushes, snorts, and neighs aloud:

The strong-neck'd steed, being tied unto a tree.

Breaketh his rein, and to her straight goes he.

Imperiously he leaps, he neighs, he bounds, And now his woven girths he breaks asunder:

The bearing earth with his hard hoof he wounds.

Graze on my lips; and if those hills be Whose hollow womb resounds like heaven's thunder:

The iron bit he crusheth 'tween his teeth, Controlling what he was controlled with.

His ears up-prick'd; his braided hanging

Upon his compass'd crest now stand on end; Round rising hillocks, brakes obscure and His nostrils drink the air, and forth again, As from a furnace, vapours doth he send:

His eye, which scornfully glisters like fire, Shows his hot courage and his high desire.

Sometime he trots, as if he told the steps, With gentle majesty and modest pride; Anon he rears upright, curvets, and leaps, As who should say Lo, thus my strength is tried.

And this I do to captivate the eye Of the fair breeder that is standing by'.

What recketh he his rider's angry stir, His flattering 'Holla' or his 'Stand, I say'?

What cares he now for curb, or pricking spur? 255

For rich caparisons, or trappings gay?
He sees his love, and nothing else he sees,
Nor nothing else with his proud sight agrees.

Look when a painter would surpass the

In limning out a well-proportioned steed, His art with nature's workmanship at strife,

As if the dead the living should exceed; So did this horse excel a common one

In shape, in courage, colour, pace, and bone.

Round-hoof'd, short-jointed, fetlocks shag and long, 295

Broad breast, full eye, small head, and nostril wide,

High crest, short ears, straight legs and passing strong,

Thin mane, thick tail, broad buttock, tender hide;

Look what a horse should have he did not lack,

Save a proud rider on so proud a back. Sometime he scuds far off, and there he stares;

Anon he starts at stirring of a feather;
To bid the wind a base he now prepares,
And whe'r he run or fly they know not whether;

For through his mane and tail the high wind sings,

Fanning the hairs, who wave like feath'red wings.

He looks upon his love and neighs unto her; She answers him as if she knew his mind; Being proud, as females are, to see him woo her,

She puts on outward strangeness, seems unkind,

Spurps at his love, and scorps the heat

Spurns at his love, and scorns the heat he feels,

Beating his kind embracements with her heels.

Then, like a melancholy malcontent, He vails his tail, that, like a falling plume, Cool shadow to his melting buttock lent; He stamps, and bites the poor flies in his fume.

His love, perceiving how he was enrag'd, Grew kinder, and his fury was assuag'd.

His testy master goeth about to take him, When, lo, the unback'd breeder, full of fear, Jealous of catching, swiftly doth forsake him,

With her the horse, and left Adonis there.

As they were mad, unto the wood they hie them,

Out-stripping crows that strive to overfly them.

All swol'n with chafing, down Adoms sits, Banning his boist'rous and unruly beast; And now the happy season once more fits

That love-sick Love by pleading may be blest;

For lovers say the heart hath treble wrong,

When it is barr'd the aidance of the tongue.

An oven that is stopp'd, or river stay'd, Burneth more hotly, swelleth with more rage;

So of concealed sorrow may be said:

Fiee vent of words love's fire doth assuage;
But when the heart's attorney once is mute,

The client breaks, as desperate in his suit.

He sees her coming, and begins to glow Even as a dying coal revives with wind, And with his bonnet hides his angry brow, Looks on the dull earth with disturbed mind,

Taking no notice that she is so nigh, For all askance he holds her in his eye.

O what a sight it was, wistly to view How she came stealing to the wayward boy! To note the fighting conflict of her hue! 345 How white and red each other did destroy! But now her cheek was pale, and by and

It flash'd forth fire, as lightning from the

Now was she just before him as he sat, And like a lowly lover down she kneels; 350 With one fair hand she heaveth up his hat, Her other tender hand his fair cheek feels;

His tend'rer cheek receives her soft hand's print
As apt as new-fall'n snow takes any dint.

O, what a war of looks was then between

Her eyes, petitioners, to his eyes suing! His eyes saw her eyes as they had not seen

Her eyes wooed still, his eyes disdain'd the wooing;

And all this dumb play had his acts made plain

With tears which chorus-like her eyes did rain. 360

Full gently now she takes him by the hand, A lily prison'd in a gaol of snow, Or ivory in an alabaster band; So white a friend engirts so white a foe.

This beauteous combat, wilful and un willing,

Showed like two silver doves that sit a billing.

Once more the engine of her thoughts began:

Of Gairest mover on this mortal round, Would thou wert as I am, and I a man, My heart all whole as thine, thy heart my wound!

For one sweet look thy help I would assure thee,

Though nothing but my body's bane would cure thee'.

'Give me my hand' saith he. 'Why dosthou feel it?'

'Give me my heart,' saith she 'and thou shalt have it.

O, give it me, lest thy hard heart do steel it And being steel'd, soft sighs can never grave it;

Then love's deep groans I never shal regard,

Because Adonis' heart hath made mine hard.'

'For shame,' he cries 'let go, and let me go;
My day's delight is past, my horse is gone And 'tis your fault I am bereft him so.
I pray you hence, and leave me here alone:

For all my mind, my thought, my busy care,
Is how to get my palfrey from the mare.

Thus she replies: 'Thy palfrey, as he should,

Welcomes the warm approach of sweet desire.

Affection is a coal that must be cool'd; Else, suffer'd, it will set the heart on fire.

The sea hath bounds, but deep desire hath none,

Therefore no marvel though thy horse be gone.

'How like a jade he stood, fied to the tree,

Servilely master'd with a leathern rein!
But when he saw his love, his youth's fair fee.

He held such petty bondage in disdain,
Throwing the base thong from his bending crest,

395

Enfranchising his mouth, his back, his breast.

'Who sees his true-love in her naked bed, Teaching the sheets a whiter hue than white,

But, when his glutton eye so full hath fed,

His other agents aim at like delight? 400 Who is so faint that dares not be so bold To touch the fire, the weather being cold?

'Let me excuse thy courser, gentle boy; And learn of him, I heartily beseech thee, To take advantage on presented joy; 405 Though I were dumb, yet his proceedings teach thee.

O, learn to love! The lesson is but plain, And once made perfect never lost again'.

'I know not love,' quoth he 'nor will not know it,

Unless it be a boar, and then I chase it. 470 'Tis much to borrow, and I will not owe it. My love to love is love but to disgrace it;

For I have heard it is a life in death, That laughs, and weeps, and all but with a breath.

'Who wears a garment shapeless and unfinish'd?

Who plucks the bud before one leaf put forth?

If springing things be any jot diminish'd, They wither in their prime, prove nothing worth.

The colt that's back'd and burden'd being young

Loseth his pride and never waxeth strong. 420

'You hurt my hand with wringing; let us part,

And leave this idle theme, this bootless chat; Remove your siege from my unyielding heart;

To love's alarms it will not ope the gate.

Dismiss your vows, your feigned tears.

Dismiss your vows, your leigned tears, your flatt'ry;

For where a heart is hard they make no batt'ry.'

What! canst thou talk?' quoth she 'Hast thou a tongue?

O, would thou hadst not, or I had no hearing!

Thy mermaid's voice hath done me double wrong;

I had my load before, now press'd with bearing: 430 Melodious discord, heavenly tune harsh sounding, Ear's deep-sweet music, and heart's deep-sore wounding.

Had I no eyes but ears, my ears would

That inward beauty and invisible;

Or were I deaf, thy outward parts would move

Each part in me that were but sensible.

Though neither eyes nor ears, to hear nor see,

Yet should I be in love by touching thee.
Say that the sense of feeling were bereit me.

And that I could not see, nor hear, nor touch, 440

Yet would my love to thee be still as much: For from the stillitory of thy face excelling

Comes breath perfum'd, that breedeth love by smelling.

Being nurse and feeder of the other four! Would they not wish the feast might ever last,

And at his look she flatly falleth down, For looks kill love, and love by looks reviveth:

A smile recures the wounding of a frown. But blessed bankrupt that by love so thriveth!

The silly boy, believing she is dead, Claps her pale cheek till clapping makes ıt red:

And all-amaz'd brake off his late intent. For sharply he did think to reprehend her. Which cunning love did wittily prevent. Fair fall the wit that can so well defend her! For on the grass she lies as she were slain.

Till his breath breatheth life in her again. He wrings her nose, he strikes her on the cheeks.

He bends her fingers, holds her pulses hard, He chafes her lips, a thousand ways he seeks

To mend the hurt that his unkindness marr'd:

He kisses her; and she, by her good will, Will never rise, so he will kiss her still. 480

The night of sorrow now is turn'd to day: Her two blue windows faintly she upheaveth.

Chiefly in love, whose leave exceeds commission.

Affection faints not like a pale-fac'd coward.

But then wooes best when most his choice is froward.

When he did frown, O, had she then gave over.

Such nectar from his lips she had not suck'd.

Foul words and frowns must not repel a lover:

What though the rose have prickles, yet 'tis pluck'd.

Were beauty under twenty locks kept

Yet love breaks through and picks them all at last.

For pity now she can no more detain him: The poor fool prays her that he may depart. She is resolv'd no longer to restrain him: Bids him farewell, and look well to her

Now is she in the very lists of love, 59
Her champion mounted for the hot encounter.

All is imaginary she doth prove;

He will not manage her, although he mount her.

Even so she languisheth in her mishaps,

As those poor birds that helpless berries saw.

The warm effects which she in him finds missing 60

She seeks to kindle with continual kissing.

But all in vain; good queen, it will not be. She hath assay'd as much as may be prov'd; Her pleading hath deserv'd a greater fee;

She's Love, she loves, and yet she is not lov'd.

'Fie, fie,' he says 'you crush me; let me go;

You have no reason to withhold me so.'
'Thou hadst been gone,' quoth she' sweet

O, be advis'd! Thou know'st not what it is With javelin's point a churlish swine to Whose tushes never sheath'd he whetteth still,

Like to a mortal butcher bent to kill.

'On his bow-back he hath a battle set Of bristly pikes that ever threat his foes; His eyes like glow-worms shine when he doth fret;

His snout digs sepulchres where'er he goes; Being mov'd, he strikes whate'er is in his way.

And whom he strikes his cruel tushes slay.

'His brawny sides, with hairy bristles armed, 625 Are better proof than thy spear's point can

His short thick neck cannot be easily harmed;

Being ireful, on the lion he will venter.

As fearful of him, part; through whom he rushes.

'Alas, he nought esteems that face of thine, To which Love's eyes pays tributary gazes; Nor thy soft hands, sweet lips, and crystal eyne,

Whose full perfection all the world amazes;
But having thee at vantage—wondrous dread!—

Would root these beauties as he roots the mead.

O, let him keep his loathsome cabin still!

Beauty hath nought to do with such foul fiends.

Come not within his danger by thy will. They that thrive well take counsel of their friends.

When thou didst name the boar, not to dissemble,

I fear'd thy fortune, and my joints did tremble.

' Didst thou not mark my face? Was it not white?

Sawest thou not signs of fear lurk in mine eye?

Grew I not faint? And fell I not downnight? 645

Within my bosom, whereon thou dost lie, My boding heart pants, beats, and takes no rest,

But, like an earthquake, shakes thee on my breast.

For where Love reigns, disturbing Jealousy

Doth call himself Affection's sentinel; 650 Gives false alarms, suggesteth mutiny, And in a peaceful hour doth cry "Kill, kill!"

Distemp'ring gentle Love in his desire, As air and water do abate the fire.

This sour informer, this bate-breeding spy, 655

This canker that eats up Love's tender spring,

This carry-tale, dissentious Jealousy,

That sometime true news, sometime false doth bring,

Knocks at my heart, and whispers in mine ear,

That if I love thee I thy death should fear; 660

And, more than so, presenteth to mine eye The picture of an angry chafing boar, Under whose sharp fangs on his back doth

An image like thyself, all stain'd with gore; Whose blood upon the fresh flowers being shed 665

Doth make them droop with grief and hang the head.

What should I do, seeing thee so indeed, That tremble at th' imagination?

The thought of it doth make my faint heart bleed,

And fear doth teach it divination: 670
I prophesy thy death, my living sorrow,
If thou encounter with the boar tomorrow.

'But if thou needs wilt hunt, be rul'd by me;

Sometime he runs among a flock of sheep, To make the cunning hounds mistake their smell,

And sometime where earth-delving comes keep,

To stop the loud pursuers in their yell;
And sometime sorteth with a herd of Danger deviseth shifts; wit waits on fear. 690

For there his smell with others being mingled,

The hot scent-snuffing hounds are driven to doubt,

Ceasing their clamorous cry till they have singled

With much ado the cold fault cleanly out.
Then do they spend their mouths; echo

As if another chase were in the skies.

'By this, poor Wat, far off upon a hill, Stands on his hinder legs with list'ning ear.

To hearken if his foes pursue him still; Anon their loud alarums he doth hear; 700 And now his grief may be compared well To one sore sick that hears the passinghell.

^c Then shalt thou see the dew-bedabbled wretch

Each shadow makes him stop, each murmur stay; For misery is trodden on by many, And being low never relieved by any.

With this he breaketh from the sweet embrace

Of those fair arms which bound him to her bieast,

And homeward through the dark laund runs apace;

Leaves Love upon her back, deeply distress'd.

Look how a bright star shooteth from the sky So glides he in the night from Venus' eye;

Which after him she darts, as one on shore

Make verbal repetition of her moans; Passion on passion deeply is redoubled: 'Ay me!' she cries, and twenty times 'Woe, woe!'

And twenty echoes twenty times cry so.

She, marking them, begins a wailing note, And sings extemporally a woeful ditty—
How love makes young men thrall, and old men dote:

837

How love is wise in folly, foolish-witty. Her heavy anthem still concludes in woe, And still the choir of echoes answer so.

Her song was tedious, and outwore the night,

For lovers hours are long, though seeming short;

If pleas'd themselves, others, they think delight

In such-like circumstance, with such-like sport.

Their copious stones, oftentimes begun End without audience and are never done.

846

For who hath she to spend the night withal But idle sounds resembling parasits, Like shrill-tongu'd tapsters answering every call,

Soothing the humour of fantastic wits? 85 She says ''Tis so'; they answer all ''Tis so';

And would say after her, if she said ' No '.

Lo, here the gentle lark, weary of rest, From his moist cabinet mounts up on high, And wakes the morning, from whose silver breast 855

The sun ariseth in his majesty;

Who doth the world so gloriously behold That cedar-tops and hills seem burnish'd gold.

Venus salutes him with this fair goodmorrow: 850

'O thou clear god, and patron of all light, From whom each lamp and shining star doth borrow

The beauteous influence that makes him bright,

There lives a son that suck'd an earthly mother

May lend thee light, as thou dost lend to other'.

This said, she hasteth to a myrtle grove, 865 Musing the morning is so much o'erworn, And yet she hears no tidings of her love; She hearkens for his hounds and for his horn.

Anon she hears them chant it lustily, And all in haste she coasteth to the cry. And as she runs, the bushes in the way
Some catch her by the neck, some kiss her face,

872

Some twine about her thigh to make her stay;

She wildly breaketh from their strict embrace,

Like a milch doe whose swelling dugs do ache 875

Hasting to feed her fawn hid in some brake.

By this, she hears the hounds are at a bay; Whereat she starts, like one that spies an adder

Wreath'd up in fatal folds just in his way, The fear whereof doth make him shake and shudder:

Even so the timorous yelping of the hounds

Appals her senses and her spirit confounds.

For now she knows it is no gentle chase, But the blunt boar, rough bear, or lion proud,

Because the cry remaineth in one place, 885 Where fearfully the dogs exclaim aloud.

Finding their enemy to be so curst,
They all strain court'sy who shall cope him first.

This dismal cry rings sadly in her ear,
Through which it enters to surprise her heart. Soo

Who, overcome by doubt and bloodless fear,

With cold-pale weakness numbs each feeling part;

Like soldiers, when their captain once doth yield,

They basely fly and dare not stay the field.

Thus stands she in a trembling ecstasy; 895 Till, cheering up her senses all dismay'd, She tells them 'tis a causeless fantasy,

And childish error that they are afraid;
Bids them leave quaking, bids them fear no more—

And with that word she spied the hunted boar.

Whose frothy mouth, bepainted all with red.

Like milk and blood being mingled both together,

A second fear through all her sinews spread, Which madly hurries her she knows not whither:

This way she runs, and now she will no further, 905

But back retires to rate the boar for murther.

A thousand spleens bear her a thousand ways;

She treads the path that she untreads They bid thee crop a weed; thou pluck'st a again:

Her more than haste is mated with delays. Like the proceedings of a drunken brain,

Full of respects, yet nought at all respecting,

In hand with all things, nought at all effecting.

Here kennell'd in a brake she finds hound,

And asks the weary caitiff for his master; And there another licking of his wound, 915 'Gainst venom'd sores the only sovereign plaster; And here she meets another sadiy scowling,

To whom she speaks, and he replies with howling.

When he hath ceas'd his ill-resounding noise.

Another flap-mouth'd mourner, black and grim.

Against the welkin volleys out his voice; Another and another answer him,

Clapping their proud tails to the ground below,

Shaking their scratch d ears, bleeding as they go.

Look how the world's poor people are amazed At apparitions, signs, and prodigies,

Whereon with fearful eyes they long have gazed,

Infusing them with dreadful prophecies: So she at these sad signs draws up her breath. And, sighing it again, exclaims on Death.

' Hard-favour'd tyrant, ugly, meagre, lean, Hateful divorce of love,'-thus chides she Death-

' Grim-grinning ghost, earth's worm, what dost thou mean

To stifle beauty, and to steal his breath, Who when he liv'd, his breath and beauty set

Gloss on the rose, smell to the violet?

'If he be dead-O no, it cannot be, Seeing his beauty, thou shouldst strike at it.

O yes, it may; thou hast no eyes to see, But hatefully at random dost thou hit. 940 Thy mark is feeble age; but thy false

Mistakes that aim and cleaves an infant's heart.

' Hadst thou but bid beware, then he had spoke,

And hearing him thy power had lost his power. The Destinies will curse thee for this stroke:

flower.

Love's golden arrow at him should have fled.

And not Death's ebon dart, to strike him dead.

' Dost thou drink tears, that thou provok'st such weeping?

What may a heavy groan advantage thee? Why hast thou cast into eternal sleeping Those eyes that taught all other eyes to see? Now Nature cares not for thy mortal vigour, Since her best work is ruin d with the 11gour.

Here overcome, as one full of despair, 955 She vail'd her eyelids, who, like sluices. stopp'd

The crystal tide that from her two cheeks fair

In the sweet channel of her bosom dropp'd: But through the floodgates breaks the silver rain,

And with his strong course opens them again.

O, how her eyes and tears did lend and borrow!

Her eye seen in the tears, tears in her eye: Both crystals, where they view'd each other's sorrew-

Sorrow that friendly sighs sought still to dry:

But like a stormy day, now wind, now raın,

Sighs dry her cheeks, tears make them wet again.

Variable passions throng her constant woe. As striving who should best become her grief:

All entertain'd, each passion labours so That every present sorrow seemeth chief.

But none is best. Then join they all together. 071

Like many clouds consulting for foul weather.

By this, far off she hears some huntsman hollow:

A nurse's song ne'er pleas'd her babe so

The dire imagination she did follow This sound of hope doth labour to expel: For now reviving joy bids her rejoice, And flatters her it is Adonis' voice.

Whereat her tears began to turn their tide, Being prison'd in her eye like pearls in glass;

Yet sometimes falls an orient drop beside. Which her cheek melts, as scorning it should pass wash the foul face of the sluttish ground.

Who is but drunken when she seemeth Trifles, unwitnessed with eye or ear, drown'd.

O hard-believing love, how strange

Not to believe, and yet too credulous! Thy weal and woe are both of them ex tremes;

Despair and hope makes thee ridiculous: The one doth flatter thee in thought unlikely,

In likely thoughts the other kills the quickly.

Now she unweaves the web that she hat wrought:

Adonis lives, and Death is not to blame: It was not she that call'd him all to nought Now she adds honours to his hateful name She clepes him king of graves, and grav for kings.

Imperious supreme of all mortal things

'No, no,' quoth she 'sweet Death, I did but jest;

Yet pardon me I felt a kind of fear When as I met the boar, that bloody beas Which knows no pity but is still severe. 1000 Then, gentle shadow-truth I mus confess-

I rail'd on thee, fearing my love's decesse.

"Tis not my fault; the boar provok'd my tongue:

Be wreak'd on him, invisible commander, 'Tis he, foul creature, that hath done thee wrong

I did but act; he's author of thy slander. Grief hath two tongues, and never woman yet

Could rule them both without ten women's wit.

Thus, hoping that Adonis is alive,

Her rash suspect she doth extenuate; 1010 And that his beauty may the better thrive, With Death she humbly doth insinuate;

Tells him of trophies, statues, tombs, and stories

His victories, his triumphs, and his glories.

To be of such a weak and silly mind To wail his death who lives, and must not die

Till mutual overthrow of mortal kind! For he being dead, with him is beauty slain.

And, beauty dead, black chaos comes again.

' Fie, fie, fond love, thou art so full of fear As one with treasure laden, hemm'd with thieves:

Thy coward heart with false bethinking grieves. Even at this word she hears a merry horn.

Whereat she leaps that was but late forlorn.

As falcons to the lure away she flies: The grass stoops not, she treads on it so light; And in her haste unfortunately spies The foul boar's conquest on her fair delight; Which seen, her eyes, as murd'red with the view.

Like stars asham'd of day, themselves withdrew:

Or as the snail, whose tender horns being hit.

Shrinks backward in his shelly cave with pain.

And there, all smoth'red up, in shade doth Long after fearing to creep forth again;

So at his bloody view her eyes are fled Into the deep-dark cabins of her head:

Where they resign their office and their light

To the disposing of her troubled brain; 1040 Who bids them still consort with ugly night,

And never wound the heart with looks again:

Who, like a king perplexed in his throne, By their suggestion gives a deadly groan.

Whereat each tributary subject quakes; As when the wind, imprison'd in the ground, Struggling for passage, earth's foundation shakes.

Which with cold terror doth men's minds confound.

This mutiny each part doth so surprise That from their dark beds once more leap her eyes;

And, being open'd, threw unwilling light Upon the wide wound that the boar had trench'd

'O Jove,' quoth she 'how much a fool In his soft flank; whose wonted lily white With purple tears that his wound wept was drench'd.

No flow'r was nigh, no grass, herb, leaf, or weed,

But stole his blood and seem'd with him to bleed.

This solemn sympathy poor Venus noteth. Over one shoulder doth she hang her head; Dumbly she passions, franticly she doteth; She thinks he could not die, he is not dead.

Her voice is stopp'd, her joints forget to 1001 bow:

Her eyes are mad that they have wept till now.

Upon his hurt she looks so steadfastly
That her sight dazzling makes the wound seem three;
106

And then she reprehends her mangling eye
That makes more gashes where no bleach should be.

His face seems twain, each several limb

For oft the eye mistakes, the brain being troubled.

'My tongue cannot express my grief for one,

And vet' quoth she 'behold two Adons dead.

My signs are blown away, my salt tears gone,

Mine eyes are turn'd to fire, my heart to lead;

Heavy heart's lead melt at mine eyes' red fire!

So shall I die by diops of hot desire.

' Alas, poor world, what treasure hast thou lost!

What face remains alive that's worth the viewing?

Whose tongue is music now? What canst thou boast

Of things long since, or any thing ensuing?
The flowers are sweet, their colours fresh and trim;

But true-sweet beauty hv'd and died with him.

'Bonnet nor veil henceforth no creature wear;

Nor sun nor wind will ever strive to kiss you:

Having no fair to lose, you need not fear:

The sun doth scorn you, and the wind doth hiss you.

But when Adonis liv'd, sun and sharp air Lurk'd like two thieves to rob him of his fair:

'And therefore would he put his bonnet on, Under whose brim the gaudy sun would peep;

The wind would blow it off, and, being gone,

Play with his locks. Then would Adonis weep;

And straight, in pity of his tender years, They both would strive who first should dry his tears.

'To see his face the lion walk'd along Behind some hedge, because he would not fear him.

To recreate himself when he hath song, The tiger would be tame and gently hear him. If he had spoke, the wolf would leave his prey,

And never fright the silly lamb that day.

'When he beheld his shadow in the blook, The fishes spread on it their golden gills; When he was by, the birds such pleasure took

That some would sing, some other in their buils

Would bring him mulberries and ripeted cherries;

He fed them with his sight, they him with berries.

'But this foul, grim, and uichin-snouted bear, Tios Whose downward eye still looketh for a grave, Ne'er saw the beauteous livery that he wore:

Witness the entertainment that he gave.
If he did see his face, why then I know

If he did see his face, why then I know He thought to kiss him, and hath kill'd him so.

'Tis true, 'tis true; thus was Adonis slam: He ran upon the boar with his sharp spear, Who did not whet his teeth at him again, But by a kiss thought to persuade him there:

And nuzzling in his flank, the loving swine

Sheath'd unaware the tusk in his soft groin.

'Had I been tooth'd like him, I must confess,

With kissing him I should have kill'd him

first;
But he is dead, and never did he bless
My youth with his; the more am I accurst.'

With this, she falleth in the place she stood,

And stains her face with his congealed blood.

She looks upon his lips, and they are pale; She takes him by the hand, and that is cold; She whispers in his ears a heavy tale, 11.5 As if they heard the worful words she told;

She lifts the coffer-lids that close his eyes, Where, lo, two lamps burnt out in darkness lies;

Two glasses where herself herself beheld A thousand times, and now no more reflect, Their virtue lost wherein they late excell'd, And every beauty robb'd of his effect.

'Wonder of time,' quoth she 'this is my spite,

That, thou being dead, the day should yet be light.

Since thou art dead, lo, here I prophesy Sorrow on love hereafter shall attend: It shall be waited on with jealousy,

Find sweet beginning but unsavoury end, Ne'er settled equally, but high or low, That all love's pleasure shall not match his wee.

It shall be fickle, false, and full of fraud, Bud and be blasted in a breathing while, The bottom poison, and the top o'eistraw'd With sweets that shall the truest sight beguile:

The strongest body shall it make most weak,

Strike the wise dumb, and teach the fool to speak.

'It shall be sparing, and too full of riot, Teaching decrepit age to tread the measures:

The staring ruffian shall it keep in quier, Pluck down the rich, enrich the poor with treasures:

It shall be raging mad, and silly mild, Make the young old, the old become a child.

'It shall suspect where is no cause of fear;

It shall not fear where it should most mistrust:

It shall be merciful, and too severe, miss And most deceiving when it seems most just;

Perverse it shall be where it shows most toward,

Put fear to valour, courage to the coward.

'It shall be cause of war and dire events, And set dissension 'twixt the son and site, Subject and servile to all discontents, 1161 As dry combustious matter is to fire.

Sith in his prime death doth my love destroy,

They that love best their loves shall not enjoy.'

By this, the boy that by her side lay kill'd Was inclted like a vapour from her sight,

And in his blood that on the ground lay spill'd

A purple flow'r sprung up, check'ied with white,

Resembling well his pale cheeks, and the blood

Which in tound drops upon their whiteness stood.

She bows her head the new-sprung flow's to smell.

Comparing it to her Adonis' breath:

And says within her bosom it shall dwell, Since he himself is reft from her by death:

She crops the stalk, and in the breach appears

Green dropping sap, which she compares to tears.

'Poor flow'r,' quoth she 'this was thy father's guise—

Sweet issue of a more sweet-smelling sire— For every little grief to wet his eyes.

To grow unto him elf was his desire, riso And so 'tis thine; but know, it is as good To wither in my breast as in his blood.

'Here was thy father's bed, here in my breast:

Thou ait the next of blood, and 'tis thy right.

Lo, in this hollow cradle take thy rest: riss My throbbing heart shall rock thee day and night;

There shall not be one minute in an hour Wherem I will not kiss my sweet love's flow'r.'

Thus weary of the world, away she hies,
And yokes her silver doves; by whose swift aid

Their mistress, mounted, through the empty skies

In her light charlot quickly is convey'd, Holding their course to Paphos, where their queen

Means to itamure heiself, and not be seen.

TO THE

RIGHT HONOURABLE HENRY WRIOTHESLEY. EARLE OF SOUTHAMPTON, AND BARON OF TITCHFIELD.

THE love I dedicate to your Lordship is without end: wherof this Pamphlet without beginning is but a superfluous Moity. The warrant I have of your Honourable disposition. not the worth of my untutord Lines makes it assured of acceptance. What I have done is yours, what I have to doe is yours, being part in all I have, devoted yours. Were my worth greater my duety would shew greater, meane time, as it is, it is bound to your Lordship: To whom I wish long life still lengthned with all happinesse.

Your Lordships in all duety.

WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE.

THE ARGUMENT.

Lucius Tarquinius (for his excessive pride surnamed Superbus), after he had caused his own father-in-law, Servius Tullius, to be cruelly murd'red, and, contrary to the Roman laws and customs, not requiring or staying for the people's suifrages, had possessed himself of the kingdom, went, accompanied with his sons and other noblemen of Rome, to besiege Ardea; during which siege, the principal men of the aimy meeting one evening at the tent of Sextus Tarquinus, the King's son, in their discourses after supper every one commended the virtues of his own wife; among whom Collatinus extolled the incomparable chastity of his wife Lucretia. In that pleasant numour they all posted to Rome; and intending by their secret and sudden arrival to make trial of that which every one had before avouched, only Collatinus finds his wife (though it were late in the night) spinning amongst her maids; the other ladies were all found dancing and reveiling, or in several disports. Whereupon the noblemen yielded Collatinus the victory, and his wife the fame. At that time Sextus Tarquinius, being inflamed with Lucrece' beauty, yet smothering his passions for the present, departed with the rest back to the camp; from whence he shortly after privily withdrew himself, and was (according to his estate) royally entertained and lodged by Lucrece at Collatium. The same night he treacherously stealeth into her chamber, violently ravish'd her, and early in the morning speedeth away. Lucrece, in this lamentable plight, hastily dispatcheth messengers, one to Rome for her father, another to the camp for Collatine. They came, the one accompanied with Junius Brutus, the other with Publius Valerius: and, finding Lucrece attired in mourning habit, demanded the cause of her sorrow. She, first taking an oath of them for her revenge, revealed the actor and whole manner of his dealing, and withal suddenly stabbed herself. Which done, with one consent they all vowed to root out the whole hated family of the Tarquins; and, bearing the dead body to Rome, Brutus acquainted the people with the doer and manner of the vile deed, with a bitter invective against the tyranny of the King; wherewith the people were so moved, that with one consent and a general acclamation the Tarquins were all exiled, and the state government changed from kings to consuls.

FROM the besieged Ardea all in post, Borne by the trustless wings of false desire, Lust-breathed Tarquin leaves the Roman host.

And to Collatium bears the lightless fire Which, in pale embers hid, lurks to aspire 5 And girdle with embracing flames the waist

Of Collatine's fair love, Lucrece the

This bateless edge on his keen appetite; 1284

When Collatine unwisely did not let To praise the clear unmatched red and white

Which triumph'd in that sky of his delight, Where mortal stars, as bright as heaven's beauties.

With pure aspects did him peculiar duties.

For he tne night before, in Tarquin's tent, Unlock'd the treasure of his happy state-Haply that name of 'chaste' unhap'ly set What priceless wealth the heavens had him

In the possession of his beautious mare; Reck'ning his fortune at such high-proud rate.

That kings might be espoused to more fame.

But king nor peer to such a peerless dame.

O happiness enjoy'd but of a few! And, it possess'd, as soon decay'd and done As is the morning's silver-melting dew 2; Against the golden splendour of the sun! An expir'd date, cancell'd ere well begun:

Honour and beauty, in the owner's arms, Are weakly fortress'd from a world of Beauty itself doth of itself persuade

The eyes of men without an orator;
What needeth then apologies be made
To set fouth that which is so singular?
Or why is Collatine the publisher

Of that ich jewel he should keep unknown

From thievish ears, because it is his own?

Perchance his boast of Lucrece' sov'ieignty Suggested this proud issue of a king; For by our ears our hearts oft tainted be. Perchance that envy of so rich a thing, Biaving compare, disdainfully did sting 40 His high-pitch'd thoughts that meaner

His high-pitch'd thoughts that meaner men should yount

That golden hap which their superiors want.

But some untimely thought did instigate
His alt-too-timeless speed, it none of those.
His honour, his aftairs, his friends, his state,
Neglected all, with swirt intent he goes 4.
To quench the coal which in his liver glows.
O rash false heat, wrapp'd in repentant
cold.

Thy hasty spring still blasts and ne'er grows old!

When at Collatium this false lord arrived, Well was he welcom'd by the Roman dame, Within whose face beauty and virtue strived

Which of them both should underprop her fame:

When virtue bragg'd, beauty would blush for shame;

When beauty boasted blushes, in despite Virtue would stain that o'er with silver white.

But beauty, in that white intituled, From Venus' doves doth challenge that fair field:

Then virtue claims from beauty beauty's

Which virtue gave the golden age to guld 60 Their silver cheeks, and call'd it then their shield;

Teaching them thus to use it in the fight,

When thame assail'd, the red should terce the white.

This heraldry in Lucrece' face was seen,
Argued by beauty's red and virtue'.
white;

Or either's colour was the other queen, Proving from world's minority their right; Yet their ambition makes them still to fight,

The sovereignty of either being so great That oft they interchange each other's seat.

This silent war of lilies and of roses
Which Tarquin view'd in her fair face's field.

In their pure ranks his traitor eye encloses; Where, lest between them both it should be kill'd, 74

The coward captive vanquished doth yield To those two armies that would let him go

Rather than triumph in so false a foe.

Now thinks he that her husband's shallow tongue—

The niggard produgal that prais'd her so— In that high task bath done her beauty wrong, so

Which far exceeds his barren skill to show; Therefore that praise which Collatine doth

Enchanted Tarquin answers with sur-

In silent wonder of still-gazing eyes.

This earthly saint, adored by this devil, $5 Little suspecteth the false worshipper; For unstain'd thoughts do seldom dream on evil;

Birds never lim'd no secret bushes fear.
So guiltless she securely gives good cheer
And reverend welcome to her princely guest,

Whose inward ill no outward harm express'd:

For that he colour'd with his high estate, Hidling base sin in pleats of majesty; That nothing in him seem'd inordinate, 94 Save sometime too much wonder of his eye, Which, having all, all could not satisfy;

But, poorly rich, so wanteth in his store That cloy'd with much he pineth still for more.

But she that never cop'd with stranger eyes Could pick no meaning from their parling looks, 200

Nor read the subtle-shining secrecies
Witi in the glassy margents of such books.
She touch'd no unknown baits, nor fear'd
no hooks:

Nor could she moralize his wanton sight, More than his eyes were open'd to the light.

He stories to her ears her husband's fame, And this ambitious foul infirmity, Won in the fields of fruitful Italy: And decks with praises Collatine's high name.

Made glorious by his manly chivalry. With bruised arms and wreaths of victory.

Her joy with heav'd-up hand she doth express.

And, wordless, so greets heaven for his success.

Far from the purpose of his coming thither He makes excuses for his being there. No cloudy show of stormy blust'ring weather

Doth vet in his fair welkin once appear: Till sable Night, mother of Dread and Fear, Upon the world dim darkness doth display.

And in her vaulty prison stows the Day. For then is Tarquin brought unto his bed, Intending weariness with heavy sprite; For, after supper, long he questioned 122 night.

Now leaden slumber with life's strength Now serves the season that they may doth fight:

And every one to rest themselves betake, Save thieves, and cares, and troubled minds that wake.

As one of which doth Tarquin lie revolving The sundry dangers of his will's obtaining; Yet ever to obtain his will resolving, Though weak-built hopes persuade him to abstaining; 130 Despair to gain doth traffic oft for gaining; And when great treasure is the meed proposed. Though death be adjunct, there's no death supposed.

Those that much covet are with gain so fond

That what they have not, that which they possess

They scatter and unloose it from their boud, And so, by hoping more, they have but less; Or, gaining more, the profit of excess

Is but to surfeit, and such griefs sustain That they prove bankrupt in this poorrich gain.

The aim of all is but to nurse the life With honour, wealth, and ease in waning age;

And in this aim there is such thwarting strife

That one for all or all for one we gage: As life for honour in fell battle's rage: 145 Honour for wealth; and oft that wealth doth cost

The death of all, and all together lost.

So that in vent'ring ill we leave to be The things we are for that which we expect; 1286

TEA In having much, torments us with defect Of that we have; so then we do neglect The thing we have and, all for want of

Make something nothing by augmenting

Such hazard now must doting Tarquin make. Pawning his honour to obtain his lust: And for himself himself he must forsake-Then where is truth if there be no selftrust?

When shall he think to find a stranger just. When he himself himself confounds, betrays

To sland'rous tongues and wretched hateful days ?

Now stole upon the time the dead of night. When heavy sleep had clos'd up mortal eves :

No comfortable star did lend his light. With modest Lucrece, and wore out the No noise but owls' and wolves' deathboding cries:

surprise The silly lambs. Pure thoughts are dead and still. While lust and murder wake to stain and kill.

And now this lustful lord leap'd from his Throwing his mantle rudely o'er his arm: Is madly toss'd between desire and dread: Th' one sweetly flatters, th' other feareth harm:

But honest Fear, bewitch'd with lust's foul charm,

Doth too too oft betake him to retire, Beaten away by brain-sick rude desire.

His falchion on a flint he softly smiteth. That from the cold stone sparks of fire do fly,

Whereat a waven torch forthwith he lighteth,

Which must be lode-star to his lustful eve: And to the flame thus speaks advisedly: 180 As from this cold flint I enforc'd this

So Lucrece must I force to my desire '.

Here pale with fear he doth premeditate The dangers of his loathsome enterprise, And in his inward mind he doth debate 185 What following sorrow may on this arise; Then, looking scornfully, he doth despise His naked armour of still-slaughtered lust, And justly thus controls his thoughts unjust: Fair torch, burn out thy light, and lend it not

To darken her whose light excelleth thine: And die, unhallowed thoughts, before you blot

With your uncleanness that which is divine: Offer pure incense to so pure a shrine:

Let fair humanity abhor the deed That spots and stains love's modest snow-white weed.

'O shame to knighthood and to shining aıms! O foul dishonour to my household's grave! O impious act including all foul harms! A maitial man to be soft fancy's slave! 200 True valous still a true respect should have;

Then my digression is so vile, so base, That it will hve engraven in my face.

'Yea, though I die, the scandal will survive And be an eyesore in my golden coat; 205 Some loathsome dash the herald will contrive

To cipher me how fondly I did dote: That my posterity, sham'd with the note. Shall curse my bones, and hold it for no

To wish that I their father had not been.

'What win I if I gain the thing I seek? A dream, a breath, a froth of fleeting joy. Who buys a minute's mirth to wail a week? Or sells eternity to get a toy?

For one sweet grape who will the vine destroy?

Or what fond beggar, but to touch the crown, Would with the sceptre straight be strucken down?

' If Collatinus dream of my intent, Will he not wake, and in a desp'rate rage Post hither, this vile purpose to prevent— This siege that hath engist his marriage, This blur to youth, this sorrow to the sage,

This dying virtue, this surviving shame, Whose crime will bear an ever-during blame?

'O. what excuse can my invention make When thou shalt charge me with so black a

Will not my tongue be mute, my frail joints

Mine eyes forgo their light, my false heart bleed?

The guilt being great, the fear doth still exceed:

And extreme fear can neither fight nor But coward-like with trembling terror die.

'Had Collatious kill'd my son or sire, Or lain in ambush to betray my life, Or were he not my dear friend, this desire Might have excuse to work upon his wife, As in revenge or quittal of such strife;

But as he is my kinsman, my dear friend The shame and fault finds no excuse nor Shameful it is-ay, if the fact be known; Hateful it is-there is no hate in loving: I'll beg ner love-but she is not her own--The worst is but denial and reproving. My will is strong, past reason's weak removing-

Who fears a sentence or an old man's saw Shall by a painted cloth be kept in awe."

Thus, graceless, holds he disputation 'Tween flozen conscience and hot-bulning will.

And with good thoughts makes dispensation.

Urging the worser sense for vantage still: Which in a moment doth confound and kill All pure effects, and doth so far proceed That what is vile shows like a virtuous deed.

Quoth he 'She took me kindly by the hand And gaz'd for tidings in my cager eyes, Feating some hard news from the warlike band

Where her beloved Collatinus lies. O how her fear did make her colour rise!

First red as roses that on lawn we lay, Then white as lawn, the roses took away.

'And how her hand in my hand being lock'd

Forc'd it to tremble with her loyal fear! Which struck her sad, and then it taster rock'd

Until her husband's welfare she did hear; Whereat she smiled with so sweet a cheer That had Narcissus seen her as she stood Self-love had never drown'd him in the flood.

'Why hunt I then for colour or excuses? All orators are dumb when beauty pleadeth;

Poor wretches have remorse in poor abuses; Love thrives not in the heart that shadows dreadeth:

As corn o'ergrown by weeds, so heedful fear But all these poor forbiddings could not Is almost chok'd by unresisted lust.

Away he steals with open list'ning ear, Full of foul hope, and full of fond mistrust; Both which, as servitors to the unjust, 28° So cross him with their opposite per-

That now he yows a league, and now invasion.

Within his thought her heavenly image sits, And in the selfsame seat sits Collatine. That eve which looks on her confounds his wits:

That eye which him beholds, as more divine.

Unto a view so false will not incline:

But with a pure appeal seeks to the heart, Which once corrupted takes the worser part:

And therein heartens up his servile powers, Who, flatt'red by their leader's jocund

Stuff up his lust, as minutes fill up hours; And as their captain, so their pride doth grow,

Paying more slavish tribute than they owe. By reprobate desire thus madly led, 300 The Roman lord marcheth to Lucrece'

Night-wand'ring weasels shriek to see him there;

They fright him, yet he still pursues his fear.

As each unwilling portal yields him way, Through little vents and crannies of the place

The wind wars with his torch, to make him stay,

And blows the smoke of it into his face. Extinguishing his conduct in this case;

But his hot heart, which fond desire doth scorch.

Puffs forth another wind that fires the torch: 315

And, being lighted, by the light he spies Lucretia's glove, wherein her needle sticks; He takes it from the rushes where it lies, And griping it, the needle his finger pricks, As who should say 'This glove 10 wanton tricks 320

Now is he come unto the chamber door That shuts him from the heaven of his thought,

Which with a yielding latch, and with no more.

Hath barr'd him from the blessed thing he sought. So from himself implety hath wrought

That for his prey to pray he doth begin, As if the heavens should countenance his sin.

Thus treason works ere traitors be espied. Who sees the lurking serpent steps aside; But she, sound sleeping, fearing no such thing.

Lies at the mercy of his mortal sting.

Into the chamber wickedly he stalks, 365 And gazeth on her yet unstained bed. The curtains being close, about he walks, Rolling his greedy eyeballs in his head. By their high treason is his heart misled, Which gives the watchword to his hand

But blind they are, and keep themselves enclosed.

Then Collatine again by Lucrece' side
In his clear bed might have reposed still;
But they must ope, this blessed league to kill:

And holy-thoughted Lucrece to their sight

Must sell her joy, her life, her world's delight. 385

Her lily hand her rosy cheek lies under, Coz'ning the pillow of a lawful kiss; Who, therefore angry, seems to part in sunder,

Swelling on either side to want his bliss;
Between whose hills her head entombed is;
Where, like a virtuous monument, she lies.

To be admir'd of lewd unhallowed eyes.

Without the bed her other fair hand was, On the green coverlet; whose perfect white Show'd like an April daisy on the grass, 395 With pearly sweat, resembling dew of night. Her eyes, like marigolds, had sheath'd their light.

And canopied in darkness sweetly lay, Till they might open to adorn the day.

Her hair, like golden threads, play'd with her breath—

O modest wantons! wanton modesty!— Showing life's friumph in the map of death, And death's dim look in life's mortality. Each in her sleep themselves so beautify,

As if between them twain there were no strife.

But that life hy'd in death, and death in life.

Her breasts, like ivory globes circled with blue,

A pair of maiden worlds unconquered, Save of their lord no bearing yoke they

And him by oath they truly honoured. 410 These worlds in Tarquin new ambition bred.

Who like a foul usurper went about From this fair throne to heave the owner

What could he see but mightily he noted? What did he note but strongly he desired? What he beheld, on that he firmly doted, And in his will his wilful eye he tired. 417 With more than admiration he admired

Her azure veins, her alabaster skin, Her coral lips, her snow-white dimpled chin.

As the grim lion fawneth o'er his prey, Sharp hunger by the conquest satisfied, So o'er this sleeping soul doth Tarquin stay, His rage of lust by gazing qualified; Slack'd, not suppress'd; for standing by her side, 425 His eye, which late this mutiny restrains, Unto a greater uproar tempts his veins;

And they, like straggling slaves for pillage fighting,

Obdurate vassals, fell exploits effecting, In bloody death and ravishment delighting, Nor children's tears nor mothers' groans respecting,

Swell in their pride, the onset still expecting.

Anon his beating heart, alarum striking, Gives the hot charge and bids them do their liking.

His drumming heart cheers up his burning eye, 435

His eye commends the leading to his hand; His hand, as proud of such a dignity, Smoking with fride, march'd on to make his stand

On her bare breast, the heart of all her land; Whose ranks of blue veins, as his hand did scale,

Left their round turrets destitute and pale.

They, must'ring to the quiet cabinet Where their dear governess and lady lies, Do tell her she is dreadfully beset, 444. And fright her with confusion of their cries: She, much amaz'd, breaks ope her lock'd-up eyes,

That thinks she hath beheld some ghastly sprite

Whose grim aspect sets every joint ashaking-

And he hath won what he would lose again. This forced league doth force a further strife.

This momentary joy breeds months of pain, This hot desire converts to cold disdain; Pure Chastity is rifled of her store,

Against the unseen secrecy of night:

O comfort-killing Night, image of hell! Dim register and notary of shame! Black stage for tragedies and murders fell! Vasi sin-concealing chaos! nurse of blame! Bland muffled bawd! dark harbour for defame!

Grim cave of death! whisp'ring conspuator.

With close-tongu'd treason and the ravisher!

O unfelt sore! crest-wounding, private scar!
Reproach is stamp'd in Collatinus' face,
And Tarquin's eye may read the mot

'Thou makest the vestal violate her oath: Thou blowest the fire when temperance is thaw'd:

Thou smotherest honesty, thou murth'rest troth:

Thou foul abettor! thou notorious bawd! Thou plantest scandal and displacest laud. Thou ravisher, thou traitor, thou false thief,

Thy honey turns to gall, thy joy to grief!

'Thy secret pleasure turns to open shame, Thy private feasting to a public fast, Thy smoothing titles to a ragged name,

Thy sug'red tongue to bitter wormwood taste;

Thy violent vanities can never last. How comes it then, vile Opportunity, 893 Being so bad, such numbers seek for thee?

'When wilt thou be the humble suppliant's friend. And bring him where his suit may be

When wilt thou sort an hour great strifes to end?

Or free that soul which wretchedness hath chained?

But cloudy Lucrece shames herself to see. And therefore still in night would cloist'red be.

Revealing day through every cranny spies. And seems to point her out where she sits weeping:

To whom she sobbing speaks: 'O eve of eyes,

Why pry'st thou through my window? Leave thy peeping;

Mock with thy tickling beams eyes that are sleeping; 1000

Brand not my forehead with thy piercing light,

For day hath nought to do what's done by night'.

Thus cavils she with every thing she sees. True grief is fond and testy as a child.

Who wayward once, his mood with nought agrees. Old woes, not infant sorrows, bear them mild:

Continuance tames the one; the other

Like an unpractis'd swimmer plunging still

With too much labour drowns for want of

So she, deep drenched in a sea of care, 1100 Holds disputation with each thing she views.

And to herself all sorrow doth compare: No object but her passion's strength renews. And as one shifts, another straight ensues. Sometime her grief is dumb and hath no words: 1105 . Sometime 'tis mad and too much talk affords.

The little birds that tune their morning's joy

Make her moans mad with their sweet melody;

For mirth doth search the bottom of annoy; Sad souls are slain in merry company; 1110 Grief best is pleas'd with grief's society.

True sorrow then is feelingly suffic'd When with like semblance it is sympathiz'd.

'Tis double death to drown in ken of shore; He ten times pines that pines beholding food:

To see the salve doth make the wound ache more:

reat grief grieves most at that would do it good:

Deep woes roll forward like a gentle flood, Who, being stopp'd, the bounding banks o'erflows :

Grief dallied with nor law nor limit Than they whose whole is swallowed in knows. TT 20

'You mocking birds,' quoth she 'your tunes entomb Within your hollow-swelling feathered breasts.

And in my hearing be you mute and dumb. My restless discord loves no stops nor rests ; A woeful hostess brooks not merry guests. Relish your nimble notes to pleasing ears; Distress likes dumps when time is kept with tears.

'Come, Philomel, that sing'st of ravishment.

Make thy sad grove in my dishevell'd hair. As the dank earth weeps at thy languish-

So I at each sad strain will strain a tear. And with deep groans the diapason bear; For burthen-wise I'll hum on Tarquin still.

While thou on Tereus descants better skill.

'And whiles against a thoin thou bear'st thy part To keep thy sharp woes waking, wretched I.

To imitate thee well, against my heart Will fix a sharp knife to affight mine

Poor Lucrece' cheeks unto her maid seem so

And sorts a sad look to her lady's sorrow. For why her tace wore sorrow's livery: But durst not ask of her audaciously

Why her two suns were cloud-echpsed so, Nor why her fair cheeks over-wash'd with woe.

But as the earth doth weep, the sun being set.

O, peace!' quoth Lucrece 'If it should be

Bid thou be ready, by and by, to bear A letter to my loid, my love, my dear. Bid him with speed prepare to carry it; The cause craves haste, and it will soon be writ.

Her maid is gone, and she prepares to write, First hovering o'er the paper with her quill. Concert and grief an eager combat fight; What wit sets down is blotted straight with will :

This is too curious-good, this blunt and ill: Much like a press of people at a door. Throng her inventions, which shall go before.

At last she thus begins: 'Thou worthy

Of that unworthy wife that greeteth thee, Health to thy person! Next vouchsaie t afford-

If ever, love, thy Lucrece thou wilt see-Some present speed to come and visit me. So I commend me from our house in grief :

My woes are tedious, though my words are brief'.

Here folds she up the tenour of her woe. Her certain sorrow writ uncertainly. 1311 By this short schedule Collatine may know Her grief, but not her grief's true quality; She dares not thereof make discovery,

Lest he should hold it her own gross abuse, Ere she with blood had stain'd her stain'd

Besides, the life and feeling of her passion She hoards, to spend when he is by to hear

Of her disgrace, the better so to clear her From that suspicion which the world might bear her.

To shun this blot, she would not blot the letter

With words, till action might become them better.

To see sad sights moves more than hear them told:

For then the eye interprets to the ear 1325 The heavy motion that it doth behold. When every part a part of woe doth bear.

'Tis but a part of sorrow that we hear: Deep sounds make lesser noise than shallow fords. And sorrow ebbs, being blown with wind of words.

Her letter now is seal'd, and on it writ

At Ardea to my lord with more than haste'.

The post attends, and she delivers it. Charging the sour-fac'd groom to hie as fast As lagging fowls before the northern blast. Speed more than speed but dull and slow she deems:

Extremity still uigeth such extremes.

The homely villain curtsies to her low: And blushing on her, with a steadfast eve Receives the scroll without or yea or no. And forth with bashful innocence doth hie. But they whose guilt within their bosoms

Imagine every eye beholds their blame: For Luciece thought he blush'd to see her shame.

When, siliy groom God wot, it was defect Of spirit, life, and bold audacity. Such harmless creatures have a true respect To talk in deeds, while others saucily Promise more speed but do it leisurely.

Even so, this pattern of the worn-out age Pawn'd honest looks, but laid no words to gage.

His kindled duty kindled her mistrust. That two red fires in both their faces blazed; She thought he blush'd as knowing Tarquin's lust,

And, blushing with him, wistly on him gazed:

Her carnest eye did make him more amazed: The more she saw the blood his cheeks repienish,

The more she thought he spied in her some blemish.

But long she th.nks till he return again, And yet the duteous vassal scarce is gone. The weary t-me she cannot entertain, 1361 For now 'tis stale to sigh, to weep, and groan:

That she her plaints a little while doth

Pausing for means to mourn some newer wav. 1365

At last she calls to mind where hangs a In speech, it seem d, his beard all silver

Of skilful painting, made for Priam's Trov : Before the which is drawn the power of Greece

For Helen's rape the city to destroy,

Threat'ning cloud-kissing Ilion with annoy; Which the conceited painter drew so proud. 1371 As heaven, it seem'd, to kiss the turrets bow'd.

A thousand amentable objects there, In scorn of nature, art gave lifeless life: Many a dry drop seem'd a weeping tear Shed for the slaught'red husband by the 1376 wife;

The red blood reek'd to show the painter'strife:

And dying eyes gleam'd forth their ash lights.

Like dying coals burnt out in tedious nights.

There might you see the labouring pioneer Begrim'd with sweat and smeared all with dust:

And from the towers of Troy there would appear

The very eyes of men through loopholes thrust,

Gazing upon the Greeks with little lust. Such sweet observance in this work was 135-

That one might see those far-off eyes look sad.

In great commanders grace and majesty You might behold, triumphing in their faces :

In youth, quick bearing and dexterity; And here and there the painter interlaces

Pale cowards marching on with trembling paces,

Which heartless peasants did so well resemble

That one would swear he saw them quake and tremble.

In Ajax and Ulysses, O what art Of physiognomy might one behold! 1395 The face of either cipher'd either's heart; Their face their manners most expressly told:

In Ajax' eyes blunt rage and rigour roll'd; But the mild glance that sly Ulysses lent Show'd deep regard and smiling government.

There pleading might you see grave Nestor

As 'twere encouraging the Greeks to fight, Making such sober action with his hand That it beguil'd attention, charm'd the Many she sees where cares have carved sight.

Wagg'd up and down, and from his lips

did fly

Thin winding breath, which purl'd up to the sky.

About him were a press of gaping faces. Which seem'd to swallow up his sound advice,

All jointly list'ming, but with several graces, As it some mermaid did their ears entice: Some high, some low—the painter was so

The scalps of many, almost hid behind. To jump up higher seem'd to mock the mind.

Here one man's hand lean'd on another's head. 1415

His nose being shadowed by his neighbour's ear;

Here one being throng'd bears back, all boll'n and red;

Another smother'd seems to pelt and swear: And in their rage such signs of rage they

As, but for loss of Nestor's golden words, It seem'd they would debate with angry swords.

For much imaginary work was there; Concert deceitful, so compact, so kind, That for Achilles' image stood his spear, Gup'd in an armed hand; himself, behind Was left unseen, save to the eve of mind: A hand, a toot, a tace a leg, a head, Stood to: the whole to be imagined.

And from the walls of strong-besieged Troy When their brave hope, bold Hector, march'd to field,

Stood many Troyan mothers, sharing joy To see their youthful sons bright weapons wield:

And to their hope they such odd action vield

That through their light joy seemed to appear,

Like bright things stain'd, a kind of heavy fear.

And from the strond of Dardan where they fought,

To Simois' reedy banks, the red blood ran, Whose waves to imitate the battle sought With swelling ridges; and their ranks began

To break upon the galled shore, and than Retire again, till meeting greater ranks join, and shoot their foam at Simois' banks. They

But none where all distress and dolour 'Lo, here weeps Hecuba, here Priam dies. dwell'd.

Till she despairing Hecuba beheld.

Staring on Priam's wounds with her old eyes,

Which bleeding under Pyrrhus' proud foot lies.

In her the painter had anatomiz'd 2450 Time's ruin, beauty's wrack, and grim care's reign :

Her cheeks with chaps and wrinkles were disguis'd;

Of what she was no semblance did remain Her blue blood chang'd to black in every vein,

Wanting the spring that those shrunk pipes had fed. Show'd life imprison'd in a body dead.

On this sad shadow Lucrece spends her eyes, And shapes her sorrow to the beldam's

Who nothing wants to answer her but cries And bitter words to ban her cruel foes: 1460 The painter was no god to lend her those: And therefore Lucrece swears he did her wrong

To give her so much grief and not a tongue.

'Poor instrument,' quoth she 'without a sound.

I'll tune thy woes with my lamenting tongue,

And drop sweet balm in Priam's painted wound.

And rail on Pyrrhus that hath done him wrong,

And with my tears quench Troy that burns so long ;

And with my knife scratch out the angry

Of all the Greeks that are thine enemies. 'Show me the strumpet that began this stir.

That with my nails her beauty I may tear. Thy heat of lust, fond Paris, did incur This load of wrath that burning Troy doth bear. Thy eye kindled the fire that burneth here; And here in Troy, for trespass of thine

The sire, the son, the dame, and daughter die.

 Why should the private pleasure of some one

Become the public plague of many moe? Let sin, alone committed, light alone 1480 Upon his head that hath transgressed so: Let guiltless souls be freed from guilty woe. For one's offence why should so many

To plague a private sin in general?

Here manly Hector faints, here Troilus sounds:

Here friend by friend in bloody channel lies. And friend to friend gives unadvised wounds.

And one man's lust these many lives confounds.

Had doting Priam check'd his son's desire,

Troy had been bright with fame, and not with fire."

Here feelingly she weeps Troy's painted

For sorrow, like a heavy-hanging bell,

Once set on ringing, with his own weight goes;

Then little strength rings out the doleful knell: So Lucrece set a-work sad tales doth tell

To pencill'd pensiveness and colour'd

sorrow: She lends them words, and she their looks doth borrow.

She throws her eyes about the painting round.

And who she finds forlorn she doth lament. At last she sees a wretched image bound That piteous looks to Phrygian shepherds lent;

His face, though full of cares, yet show'd content:

Onward to Troy with the blunt swains he goes,

So mild that Patience seem'd to scorn his woes.

In him the painter labour'd with his skill To hide deceit, and give the harmless show An humble gait, calm looks, eyes wailing still.

A brow unbent, that seem'd to welcome woe;

Checks neither red nor pale, but mingled so That blushing red no guilty instance gave,

Nor ashy pale the fear that false hearts have:

But, like a constant and confirmed devil, He entertain'd a show so seeming just, And therein so ensconc'd his secret evil, That jealousy itself could not mistrust 1516 False-creeping craft and perjury should thrust

Into so bright a day such black-fac'd storms,

Or blot with hell-born sin such saint-like forms.

The well-skill'd workman this mild image drew For perjur'd Sinon, whose enchanting story The credulous old Priam after slew;

Whose words, like wildfire, burnt the shin- Here, all enrag'd, such passion her assails ing glory

Of rich-built Ilion, that the skies were sorry. And little stars shot from their fixed 1525 their faces.

This picture she advisedly perus'd. And chid the painter for his wondrous skill:

So fair a form lodg'd not a mind so ill; 1530 And still on him she gaz'd, and gazing

Such signs of truth in his plain face she belied.

'It cannot be' quoth she 'that so much

She would have said 'can lurk in such a look

But Tarquin's shape came in her mind the while,

And from her tongue 'can lurk' from 'cannot 'took :

'It cannot be 'she in that sense forsook, And turn'd it thus : 'It cannot be, I find, But such a face should bear a wicked mind:

'For even as subtle Sinon here is painted. So soher-sad, so weary, and so mild,

As if with grief or travall he had fainted, To me came Tarquin armed; so beguil'd With outward honesty, but yet defil'd 1545 With inward vice. As Priam him did cherish.

So did I Tarquin; so my Troy did perish.

'Look, look, how list'ning Priam wets his eyes, To see those borrowed tears that Sinon sheds. Priam, why art thou old, and yet not wise?

For every tear he falls a Troyan bleeds; His eye drops fire, no water thence proceeds ;

Those round clear pearls of his that move thy pity

Are balls of quenchless fire to burn thy city.

'Such devils steal effects from lightless

For Sinon in his fire doth quake with cold, And in that cold hot burning fire doth dwell:

These contraries such unity do hold So Priam's trust false Sinon's tears doth 1560

That he finds means to burn his Trov with water'.

That patience is quite beaten from her

She tears the senseless Sinon with her nails. Comparing him to that unhappy guest 1565 When their glass fell wherein they view'd Whose deed hath made herself herself detest.

At last she smilingly with this gives o'er: 'Fool! fool!' quoth she 'his wounds will not be sore."

Saying, some shape in Sinon's was abus'd. Thus ebbs and flows the current of her sorrow.

And time doth weary time with her complaining. She looks for night, and then she longs for morrow, That she concludes the picture was And both she thinks too long with her remaining.

Short time seems long in sorrow's sharp sustaining;

Though woe be heavy, yet it seldom siceps;

And they that watch see time how slow it creeps. 1575

Which all this time hath overslipp'd her thought

That she with painted images hath spent, Being from the teeling of her own grief brought

By deep surmise of others' detriment, 1579 Losing her woes in shows of discontent.

It easeth some, though none it ever cured.

think their dolour others have To endured.

But now the mindful messenger, come back, Brings home his lord and other company; Who finds his Luciece clad in mouining brack. 1585

And round about her tear-distained eve Blue circles stream'd, like rainbows in the skv.

These water-galls in her dim element Foretell new storms to those already speut.

Which when her sad-beholding husband 1590

Amazedly in her sad face he stares: Her eyes, though sod in tears, look'd red and raw.

Her lively colour kill'd with deadly cares. He hath no power to ask her how she fares; Both stood like old acquaintance in a trance. 1595 Met far from home, wond'ring each other's chance.

Only to flatter fools, and make them bold; At last he takes her by the bloodless hand,

And thus begins: 'What uncouth ill event Hath thee befall'n, that thou dost trembling stand?

Sweet love, what spite hath thy fair colour spent?

Why art thou thus attir'd in discontent?
Unmask, dear dear, this moody heaviness,

And tell thy grief, that we may give redress'.

Three times with sighs she gives her sorrow fire

Ere once she can discharge one word of woe;

At length address'd to answer his desire, She modestly prepares to let them know Her honour is ta'en prisoner by the foe;

While Collatine and his consorted lords
With sad attention long to hear her words.

1610

And now this pale swan in her wat'ry nest Begins the sad dirge of her certain ending.

'Few words' quoth she 'shall fit the trespass best,

Where no excuse can give the fault amending:

In me moe woes than words are now depending;

And my laments would be drawn out too long

To tell them all with one poor tired tongue.

'Then be this all the task it hath to say. Dear husband, in the interest of thy bed A stranger came and on that pillow lay 16-0 Where thou wast wont to rest thy weary head;

And what wrong else may be imagined By foul enforcement might be done to me From that, alas, thy Lucrece is not free.

For in the dreadful dead of dark midnight, 1625

With shining falchion in my chamber came A creeping creature, with a flaming light, And softly cried "Awake, thou Roman dame,

And entertain my love; else lasting shame On thee and thine this night I will inflict, If thou my love's desire do contradict.

"For some hard-favour'd groom of thine" quoth he

"Unless thou yoke thy liking to my will,
I'll murder straight, and then I'll slaughter
thee,
I'st thee,
I found you where you did

And swear I found you where you did fulfil

The loathsome act of lust, and so did kill The lechers in their deed: this act will be My fame, and thy perpetual infamy".

'With this I did begin to start and cry, And then against my heart he set his sword, Swearing, unless I took all patiently, 1641 I should not live to speak another word. So should my shame still rest upon record, And never be forgot in mighty Rome Th' adulterate death of Lucrece and her groom.

'Mine enemy was strong, my poor self weak,

And far the weaker with so strong a fear.

My bloody judge forbade my tongue to speak;

No rightful plea might plead for justice there.

His scarlet lust came evidence to swear 1650 That my poor beauty had purloin'd his eyes,

And when the judge is robb'd, the pissoner dies.

O, teach me how to make mine own excuse!
Or, at the least, this refuge let me find:
Though my gross blood be stain'd with this abuse,

Immaculate and spotless is my mind; That was not forc'd; that never was inclin'd

To accessary yieldings, but still pure Doth in her poison'd closet yet endure.'

Lo, here, the hopeless merchant of this loss, With head declin'd and voice damm'd up with woe,

With sad-set eyes and wretched arms across,

From lips new-waxen pale begins to blow The grief away that stops his answer so; But wretched as he is he strives in vain;

What he breathes out his breath drinks up again.

As through an arch the violent roaring tide Outruns the eye that doth behold his haste, Yet in the eddy boundeth in his pride Back to the strait that forc'd him on so

night,

Nith shining falchion in my chamber came In rage sent out, recall'd in rage, being
A creeping creature, with a flaming light,

Even so his sighs, his sorrows, make a saw,

To push grief on, and back the same grief draw.

Which speechless woe of his poor she attendeth,

And his untimely frenzy thus awaketh:

'Dear lord, thy sorrow to my sorrow lendeth

Another power; no flood by raining slaketh.

My woe too sensible thy passion maketh More feeling-painful. Let it then suffice To drown one woe, one pair of weeping eyes.

At this request, with noble disposition 1695 Each present lord began to piomise aid. As bound in knighthood to her imposition. Longing to hear the hateful toe bewray d. But she, that yet her sad task hath not said.

My low-declined honour to advance? 1705 May any terms acquit me from this chance? The poisoned fountain clears itself again; And why not I from this compelled stain?'

With this, they all at once began to say Her body's stain her mind untainted clears:

While with a joyless smile she turns away The face, that map which deep impression

Here with a sigh, as if her heart would break,

She throws forth Tarquin's name: 'He, he' she says,

But more than 'he' her poor tongue could not speak;

Till after many accents and delays,

Untimely breathings, sick, and short assays, She utters this: 'He, he, fair lords, 'tis

From fairest creatures we desire increase, That thereby beauty's rose might never die, But as the riper should by time decease, His tender heir might bear his memory; But thou, contracted to thine own bright eyes, Feed'st thy light's flame with self-substantial fuel.

Making a famine where abundance lies, Thyself thy foe, to thy sweet self too cruel. Thou that art now the world's fresh ornament

And only herald to the gaudy spring, Within thine own bud buriest thy content, churl, mak'st waste in And, tender niggarding.

Pity the world, or else this glutton be, To eat the world's due, by the grave and

When forty winters shall besiege thy brow, And dig deep trenches in thy beauty's field. Thy youth's proud livery, so gaz'd on now, Will be a tatter'd weed of small worth held. Then being ask'd where all thy beauty lies, Where all the treasure of thy lusty days, 6 To say within thine own deep-sunken eyes Were an all-eating shame and thriftless praise.

How much more praise deserved thy beauty's use,

If thou couldst answer 'This fair child of mine

Shall sum my count, and make my old excusé'

Proving his beauty by succession thine! This were to be new made when thou art

And see thy blood warm when thou feel'st it cold.

3

Look in thy glass, and tell the face thou viewest

Now is the time that face should form another;

Whose fresh repair if now thou not renewest. Thou dost beguile the world, unbless some mother.

For where is she so fair whose unear'd womb

Disdains the tillage of thy husbandry? Or who is he so fond will be the tomb Of his self-love, to stop posterity? Thou art thy mother's glass, and she in thee Calls back the lovely April of her prime: 10 So thou through windows of thine age shalt see,

Despite of wrinkles, this thy golden time, But if thou live rememb'red not to be. Die single, and thine image dies with thee.

Unthrifty loveliness, why dost thou spend Upon thyself thy beauty's legacy? Nature's bequest gives nothing, but doth lend.

And, being frank, she lends to those are free. Then, beauteous niggard, why dost thou abuse

The bounteous largess given thee to give? Profitless usurer, why dost thou use So great a sum of sums, yet canst not live? For having traffic with thyself alone.

Thou of thyself thy sweet self dost deceive. Then how when nature calls thee to be gone.

What acceptable audit canst thou leave? Thy unus'd beauty must be tomb'd with

Which, used, lives th' executor to be.

Those hours that with gentle work did frame

The lovely gaze where every eye doth dwell Will play the tyrants to the very same, And that unfair which fairly doth excel; For never-resting time leads summer on s To hideous winter, and confounds him

there: Sap check'd with frost and lusty leaves quite gone,

Beauty o'ersnow'd, and bareness every where.

Then, were not summer's distillation left A liquid prisoner pent in walls of glass, 10 Beauty's effect with beauty were bereft,

Nor it, nor no temembrance what it was: But flowers distill'd, though they with winter meet.

Leese but then show: their substance still lives sweet.

Then let not winter's ragged hand deface In thee thy summer eie thou be distill'd; Make sweet some vial; treasure thou some place

With beauty's treasure ere it be self-kill'd. That use is not forbidden usury Which happies those that pay the willing

That's for thyself to breed an other thee,

Or ten times happier, be it ten for one; Ten times thy self were happier than thou

If ten of thine ten times refigur'd thee. 10 Then what could Death do if thou shouldst depart,

Leaving thee living in posterity? Be not self-will'd, for thou art much too

To be death's conquest and make worms thine heli.

Lo, in the orient when the gracious light Lifts up his buining head, each under eve Doth homage to his new-appearing sight, Serving with looks his sacred majesty: And having climb'd the steep-up heavenly hill.

Resembling sire, and child, and happy mother.

Wno, all in one, one pleasing note do sing: Whose speechless song, being many, seeming one.

Sings this to thee: 'Thou single wilt prove none'.

Is it for fear to wet a widow's eve

That thou consum'st thyself in single life? Ah! if thou issueless shalt hap to die,

The world will wail thee like a makeless wife:

The world will be thy widow, and still weep That thou no form of thee hast left behind. When every private widow well may keep, By children's eyes, her husband's shape in mınd.

Look what an unthrift in the world doth spend

Shifts but his place, for still the world enjoys it;

But beauty's waste hath in the world an end,

And kept unus'd, the user so destroys it. No love toward others in that bosom sit. That on himself such murd'rous shame commits.

10

For shame! deny that thou bear'st love to

Who for thy self art so unprovident. Giant, if thou wilt, thou ait belov'd of many,

But that thou none lov'st is most evident: For thou art so possess'd with murd'rous

That 'gainst thyself thou stick'st not to conspire.

Seeking that beauteous roof to ruinate Which to repair should be thy chief desire. O, change thy thought, that I may change my mind!

Shall hate be fairer lodg'd than gentle love ? Be, as thy presence is, gracious and kind, Or to thy self at least kind-hearted prove;

Make thee an other self for love of me. That beauty still may live in thine or thee.

As fast as thou shalt wane, so fast thou grow'st

departest;

In singleness the parts that thou shouldst And that fresh blood which youngly thou bestow'st youth convertest.

Strikes each in each by mutual ordering; 10 Herein lives wisdom, beauty, and increase;

Without this folly, age, and cold decay. 6
If all were minded so, the times should cease,

And threescore year would make the world away.

Let those whom Nature hath not made for store,

Harsh, featureless, and rude, barrenly perish.

Look whom she best endow'd she gave the Mhich bounteous gift thou shouldst in bounty cherish; She carv'd thee for her seal, and meant thereby

Thou shouldst print more, not let that copy die.

12

When I do count the clock that tells the time,

And see the brave day sunk in hideous night;

When I behold the violet past prime, And sable curls all silver'd o'er with white; When lofty trees I see barren of leaves, 5 Which erst from heat did canopy the herd, And summer's green all girded up in sheaves Borne on the bier with white and bristly beard;

Then of thy beauty do I question make That thou among the wastes of time must

Since sweets and beauties do themselves forsake,

And die as fast as they see others grow;
And nothing 'gainst Time's scythe can
make defence

Save breed, to brave him when he takes thee hence.

13

O that you were yourself! But, love, you are

No longer yours than you your self here live.

Against this coming end you should prepare, And your sweet semblance to some other

And your sweet semblance to some other give.

So should that beauty which you hold in

lease 5
Find no determination; then you were

Find no determination; then you were
Your self again, after your self's decease,
When your sweet issue your sweet form should bear.

Who lets so fair a house fall to decay, 9
Which husbandry in honour might uphold
Against the stormy gusts of winter's day
And barren rage of death's eternal cold?

O, none but unthrifts! Dear my love, you know You had a father: let your son say so.

14

Not from the stars do I my judgment pluck, And yet methinks I have astronomy; But not to tell of good or evil luck, Of plagues, of dearths, or seasons' quality; Nor can I fortune to brief minutes tell, 5 Pointing to each his thunder, rain, and wind.

Or say with princes if it shall go well By off predict that I in heaven find; But from thine eyes my knowledge I derive, And, constant stars, in them I read such

As truth and beauty shall together thrive, If from thy self to store thou wouldst convert.

Or else of thee this I prognosticate:
Thy end is truth's and beauty's doom and date.

15

When I consider every thing that grows Holds in perfection but a little moment, That this huge stage presenteth nought but shows

Whereon the stars in secret influence comment;

When I perceive that men as plants increase,

Cheered and check'd even by the self-same sky,
Vaunt in their youthful sap, at height decrease,

And wear their brave state out of memory;
Then the conceit of this inconstant stay

Then the conceit of this inconstant stay

Sets you most rich in youth before my
sight,

Where wasteful Time debateth with Decay

To change your day of youth to sullied night;

And all in war with Time for love of you, As he takes from you, I engraft you new.

16

But wherefore do not you a mightler way Make war upon this bloody tyrant Time? And fortify your self in your decay With means more blessed than my barren rhyme?

Now stand you on the top of happy hours,

Now stand you on the top of nappy hours, And many maiden gardens, yet unset, 6 With virtuous wish would bear your living flowers.

Much liker than your painted counterfelt; So should the lines of life that life repair, 9 Which this, Time's pencil or my pupil pen, Neither in inward worth, nor outward fair, Can make you live your self in eyes of men.

To give away your self keeps your self still:

And you must live, drawn by your own sweet skill.

Who will believe my verse in time to come, If it were fill'd with your most high deserts? Though yet, heaven knows, it is but as a tomb

Which hides your life and shows not half your parts.

If I could write the beauty of your eyes 5 And in fresh numbers number all your graces,

The age to come would say 'This poet lies; Such heavenly touches ne'er touch'd earthly faces'.

So should my papers, yellowed with their age,

Be scorn'd, like o'd men of less truth than tongue;

And your true rights be term'd a peet's

And your true rights be term'd a poet's rage,
And stretched metre of an antique song.

But were some child of yours alive that time,

You should live twice—in it, and in my rhyme.

18

Shall I compare thee to a summer's day? Thou art more lovely and more temperate. Rough winds do shake the darling buds of May,

And summer's lease hath all too short a date:

Sometime too hot the eye of heaven shines, And often is his gold complexion dimm'd; And every fair from fair some time declines, By chance, or nature's changing course, untrimm'd;

But thy eternal summer shall not fade 9 Nor lose possession of that fair thou ow'st; Nor shall Death brag thou wand'rest in his shade.

When in eternal lines to time thou grow'st.
So long as men can breathe or eyes can

So long lives this, and this gives life to thee.

19

Devouring Time, blunt thou the lion's paws, And make the earth devour her own sweet brood;

Pluck the keen teeth from the fierce tiger's

And burn the long-liv'd phœnix in her blood;

Make glad and sorry seasons as thou fleet'st, And do whate'er thou wilt, swift-footed Time.

To the wide world and all her fading sweets; But I forbid thee one most heinous crime: O, carve not with thy hours my love's fair brow.

Nor draw no lines there with thine antique pen;

Firm in thy course untainted do allow For beauty's pattern to succeeding men. Yet, do thy worst, old Time. Despite thy wrong, My love shall in my verse ever live young woman's face, with Nature's own hand painted,

Hast thou, the Master Mistress of my passion;

A woman's gentle heart, but not acquainted With shifting change, as is false woman's fashion;

An eye more bright than theirs, less false in rolling,

Gilding the object whereupon it gazeth; A man in hue all hues in his controlling, Which steals men's eyes and women's souls amazeth.

And for a woman wert thou first created;
Till Nature, as she wrought thee, fell adoting,

And by addition me of thee defeated By adding one thing to my purpose nothing.

But since she prick'd thee out for women's pleasure,

Mine be thy love, and thy love's use their treasure.

21

So is it not with me as with that Muse, Stirr'd by a painted beauty to his veise; Who heaven itself for ornament doth use, And every fair with his fair doth rehearse, Making a couplement of pioud compare 5 With sun and moon, with earth and sea's rich gems,

With April's first-born flowers, and all things rare

That heaven's air in this huge rondure hems.

O, let me, true in love, but truly write, And then believe me, my love is as fair to As any mother's child, though not so bright As those gold candles fix'd in heaven's au. Let them say more that like of hearsay

well:

I will not praise that purpose not to sell.

22

My glass shall not persuade me I am old So long as youth and thou are of one date; But when in thee time's furrows I behold, Then look I death my days should expiate. For all that beauty that doth cover thee 5 Is but the seemly raiment of my heart, Which in thy breast doth live, as thine in me;

How can I then be elder than thou art?

O, therefore, love, be of thyself so wary, As I not for myself but for thee will; 10 Bearing thy heart, which I will keep so chary

As tender nurse her babe from faring ill.

Presume not on thy heart when mine is slain;

Thou gav'st me thine, not to give back again.

23

As an unperfect actor on the stage Who with his fear is put besides his part, Or some fielce thing replete with too much rage.

Whose strength's abundance weakens his own heart;

So I, for fear of trust, forget to say
The perfect ceremony of love's rite,
And in mine own love's strength seem to decay,

O'ercharg'd with builden of mine own love's might.

O, let my looks be then the eloquence And dumb presagers of my speaking breast; Who plead for love, and look for recompense,

More than that tongue that more hath more express'd.

O, learn to read what silent love hath writ!

To hear with eyes belongs to love's fine wit.

24

Mine eye hath play'd the painter and hath stell'd

Thy beauty's form in table of my heart;
My body is the frame wherein 'tis held,
And perspective it is best painter's art.
For through the painter must you see his skill

To find where your true image pictur'd lies, Which in my bosom's shop is hanging still, That hath his windows glazed with thine eyes.

Now see what good turns eyes for eyes have done:

Mine eyes have drawn thy shape, and thine for me 10 Are windows to my breast, where through the sun

Delights to peep, to ga.: therein on thee;
Yet eyes this cunning want to grace their

They draw but what they see, know not the heart.

25

Let those who are in favour with their stars Of public honour and proud titles boast, Whilst I, whom fortune of such triumph bars.

Unlook'd for joy in that I honour most.

Great princes' favourites their fair leaves spread

But as the marigoid at the sun's eye;

5

But as the marigoid at the sun's eye; And in themselves their pride lies buried, For at a frown they in their glory die. The painful warrior tamoused for fight, After a thousand victories once foil'd, 10 Is from the book of honour razed quite, And all the rest forgot for which he toil'd.

Then happy I, that love and am beloved Where I may not remove nor be removed.

26

Lord of my love, to whom in vassalage
Thy merit hath my duty strongly knit,
To thee I send this written embassage,
To witness duty, not to show my wit;
Duty so great, which wit so poor as mine 3
May make seem bare, in wanting words to show it,

But that I hope some good conceit of thine In thy soul's thought, all naked, will bestow it:

Till whatsoever star that guides my moving Points on me graciously with fair aspect, to And puts apparel on my tattered loving To show me worthy of thy sweet respect.

Then may I dare to boast how I do love thee;

Till then not show my head where thou mayst prove me.

77

Weary with toil, I haste me to my bed, The dear repose to limis with travel tired; But then begins a journey in my head To work my mind when body's work's expired;

For then my thoughts, from far where I abide,

Intend a zealous pilgrimage to thee,
And keep my drooping eyelids open wide,
Looking on darkness which the blind do see;
Save that my soul's imaginary sight a
Presents thy shadow to my sightless view,
Which, like a jewel hung in ghastly night,
Makes black night beauteous and her old tace new.

Lo, thus, by day my limbs, by night my mind,

For thee, and for myself, no quiet find.

28

How can I then return in happy plight That am debarr'd the benefit of rest? When day's oppression is not eas'd by night,

But day by night and night by day oppress'd?

And each, though enemies to either's reign, Do in consent shake hands to torture me, The one by toil, the other to complain

How far toil, still farther off from thee.
I tell the 'ay, to please him, thou art bright
And dos' him grace when clouds do bit
t 'e heaven;

So flatter I the swart-complexion'd night, When sparkling stars twire not, thou gild'st the even.

But day doth daily draw my sorrows longer,

And night doth nightly make grief's strength seem stronger.

29

When in disgrace with Fortune and men's eves.

I all alone beweep my outcast state, And trouble deaf heaven with my bootless cries.

And look upon myself, and curse my fate, Wishing me like to one more rich in hope, 5 Featur'd like him, like him with friends possess'd,

Desiring this man's art, and that man's scope,

With what I most enjoy contented least; Yet in these thoughts myself almost despising.

Haply I think on thee, and then my state, Like to the lark at break of day arising From sullen earth, sings hymns at heaven's gate;

For thy sweet love rememb'red such wealth brings

That then I scorn to change my state with kings.

20

When to the sessions of sweet silent thought

I summon up remembrance of things past, I sigh the lack of many a thing I sought, And with old woes new wail my dear time's waste.

Then can I drown an eye, unus'd to flow, 5 For precious friends hid in death's dateless night,
And weep afresh love's long since cancell'd woe,

And moan th' expense of many a vanish'd

And mean th' expense of many a vanish'd sight.

Then can I grieve at grievances foregone, And heavily from woe to woe tell o'er to The sad account of fore-bemoaned moan, Which I new pay as if not paid before.

But if the while I think on thee, dear friend,

All losses are restor'd, and sorrows end.

31

Thy bosom is endeared with all hearts
Which I by lacking have supposed dead;
And there reigns love and all love's loving parts,

And all those friends which I thought buried.

How many a holy and obsequious tear 5
Hath dear religious love stoi'n from mine
eye,

As interest of the dead, which now appear But things remov'd that hidden in thee

Thou art the grave where buried love doth

Hung with the trophies of my lovers gone, Who all their parts of me to thee did give; That due of many now it thine alone.

Their images I lov'd I view in thee, And thou, all they, hast all the all of me.

32

If thou survive my well-contented day When that churl Death my bones with dust shall cover,

And shalt by fortune once more re-survey. These poor rude lines of thy deceased lover,

Compare them with the bett'ring of the time,

And though they be outstripp'd by every pen.

Reserve them for my love, not for their rhyme,

Exceeded by the begint of happier men.

O, then vouchsare me but this loving thought:

'Had my friend's Muse grown with this growing age,

A dearer birth than this his love had brought.

To march in ranks of better equipage;
But since he died, and poets better prove,
Theirs for their style I'll read, his for his 33 love'.

Full many a glorious morning have I seen Flatter the mountain-tops with sovereign eye,

Kissing with golden face the meadows green,

Gilding pale streams with heavenly alchemy;

Anon permit the basest clouds to ride With ugly rack on his celestial face,

And from the forlorn world his visage hide, Stealing unseen to west with this disgrace. Even so my sun one early morn did shine With all triumphant splendour on my brow;

But out, alack! he was but one hour mine,

The region cloud hath mask'd him from me now.

Yet him for this my love no whit disdaineth;

Suns of the world may stain when heaven's sun staineth.

37

Why didst thou promise such a beauteous As a decrepit father takes delight day,

And make me travel forth without my cloak.

To let base clouds o'ertake me in my way, Hiding thy brav'ry in their rotten smoke? 'Tis not enough that through the cloud thou break

To dry the rain on my storm-beaten face, For no man well of such a salve can speak That heals the wound, and cures not the disgrace.

Nor can thy shame give physic to my grief; Though thou repent, yet I have still the

Th' oriender's sorrow lends but weak relief To him that bears the strong offence's cross. Ah! but those tears are pearl which thy love sheds,

And they are rich, and ransom all ill deeds.

35

No more be griev'd at that which thou hast done:

Roses have thorns, and silver fountains mud:

Clouds and eclipses stain both moon and

And loathsome canker lives in sweetest bud. All men make faults, and even I in this, Authorizing thy trespass with compare, Myself corrupting, salving thy amiss, Excusing thy sins more than thy sins are; For to the sensual fault I bring in sense-Thy adverse party is thy advocate— And 'gainst myself a lawful plea commence; Such civil war is in my love and hate

That I an accessary needs must be To that sweet thief which soully robs from me.

36

Let me confess that we two must be twain. Although our undivided loves are one; So shall those blots that do with me remain, Without thy help, by me be borne alone. In our two loves there is but one respect, Though in our lives a separable spite, Which though it alter not love's sole effect, Yet doth it steal sweet hours from love's delight.

I may not evermore acknowledge thee, Lest my bewailed guilt should do thee shame: Nor thou with public kindness honour me. Unless thou take that honour from thy

But do not so; I love thee in such sort As, thou being mine, mine is thy good To see his active child do deeds of youth. So I, made lame by Fortune's dearest spite. Take all my comfort of thy worth and truth:

For whether beauty, birth, or wealth, or wit.

Or any of these all, or all, or more. Entitled in thy parts do crowned sit. I make my love engrafted to this store. So then I am not lame, poor, nor despis'd. Whilst that this shadow doth such substance give

That I in thy abundance am suffic'd. And by a part of all thy glory live. Look what is best, that best I wish in This wish I have; then ten times happy me!

38

How can my Muse want subject to invent. While thou dost breathe that pour'st into my verse Thine own sweet argument, too excellent For every vulgar paper to rehearse? O, give thyself the thanks if aught in me Worthy perusal stand against thy sight; For who's so dumb that cannot write to thee.

When thou thy self dost give invention light?

Be thou the tenth Muse, ten times more in worth

Than those old nine which rhymers invocate: And he that calls on thee, let him bring torth

Eternal numbers to outlive long date. If my stight Muse do please these curious days, The pain be mine, but thine shall be the praise.

39

O, how thy worth with manners may I sing, When thou art all the better part of me? What can mine own praise to mine own self bring ?

And what is't but mine own, when I praise thee?

Even for this let us divided live. And our dear love lose name of single one, That by this separation I may give That due to thee which thou deserv'st alone.

O absence, what a torment wouldst thou prove,

Were it not thy sour lessure gave sweet To entertain the time with thoughts of love;

1314

Which time and thoughts so sweetly doth. If I lose thee, my loss is my love's main. disceive.

And that thou teachest how to make one t vain.

remain!

40

Take all my loves, my love, yea, take them all:

What hase then then more than thou hadst before?

No love, my love, that thou mayst true love call:

All mine was thine before thou hadst this

Then if for my love thou my love receivest. I cannot blame thee, for my love thou usest: But yet be blam'a, if thou thyself deceivest By wilful taste of what thyself refusest. I do forgive thy robb'ry, gentle thief, Although thou steal thee all my poverty; And yet love knows it is a greater grief To bear love's wrong than hate's known injury. Lascivious grace, in whom all ill well shows.

Kill me with spites: yet we must not be foes.

41

Those pretty wrongs that liberty commits When I am sometime absent from thy heart.

Thy beauty and thy years full well befits. For still temptation follows where thou art. Centle thou art, and therefore to be wor, Beauteous thou art, therefore to be assailed; And when a woman woos, what woman's son

Will sourly leave her till she have prevailed? Ay me! but yet thou mightst my seat forbear.

And chide thy beauty and thy straying vorth.

Who lead thee in their riot even there Where thou art forc'd to break a twofold truth:

Hers, by thy beauty tempting her to thee, Thine, by thy beauty being false to me.

That thou hast her, it is not all my grief. And yet it may be said I lov'd her dearly; That she hath thee is of my wailing chief, A loss in love that touches me more nearly. Loving offenders, thus I will excuse ye: Thou dost love her because thou know'st I love her.

And for my sake even so doth she abuse me, Suff'ring my friend for my sake to approve her.

And, losing her, my friend hath found that loss:

Both find each other, and I lose both twain. By praising him here who doth hence And both for my sake lay on me this cross.

But here's the joy: my friend and I are one:

Sweet flattery I then she loves but me alone.

43

When most I wink, then do mine eyes best see,

For all the day they view things unrespected:

But when I sleep, in dreams they look on thee,

And, darkly bright, are bright in dark directed: Then thou whose shadow shadows dorn make bught, How would thy shadow's form form happy show To the clear day with thy much clearer light.

When to unseeing eyes thy shade shines so! How would, I say, mine eyes be blessed made

By looking on thee in the living day, When in dead night thy fair imperfect shade

Through heavy sleep on sightless eyes doth stav i

All days are nights to see till I see thee.

And nights bright days when dreams do show thee me.

If the dull substance of my flesh were thought.

Injurious distance should not stop my way: For then, despite of space, I would be brought

From limits far remote, where thou dost stay.

No matter then, although my foot did stand

Upon the farthest earth remov'd from thee. For nimble thought can jump both sea and

As soon as think the place where he would be.

But ah! thought kills me that I am not thought.

To leap large lengths of miles when thou art gone,

But that, so much of earth and water wrought.

I must attend time's leisure with my moan, Receiving nought by elements so slow But neavy tears, badges of either's woe.

The other two, slight air and purging fire, Are both with thee, wherever I abide; The first my thought, the other my desire, These present-absent with swift motion slide.

For when these quicker elements are gone In tender embassy of love to thee, My life, being made of four, with two alone Sinks down to death, oppress'd with melancholy;

Until life's composition be recured

By those swift messengers return'd from thee,

Who even but now come back again, assured

Of thy fair health, recounting it to me.

This told, I joy; but then no longer glad,
I send them back again, and straight grow sad.

46

Mine eye and heart are at a mortal war How to divide the conquest of thy sight; Mine eye my heart thy picture's sight would bar,

My heart mine eye the freedom of that right.

My heart doth plead that thou in him dost lie.

A closet never pierc'd with crystal eyes; But the defendant doth that plea deny, And says in him thy fair appearance lies. To 'cide this title is impanelled

A quest of thoughts, all tenants to the heart;

And by their verdict is determined

And by their verdict is determined

The clear eye's moiety and the dear heart's part—

As thus: mine eye's due is thine outward part, And my heart's right thine inward love

47 of heart.

Betwixt mine eye and heart a league is took, And each doth good turns now unto the other.

When that mine eye is famish'd for a look, Or heart in love with sighs himself doth smother:

With my love's picture then my eye doth feast.

And to the painted banquet bids my heart; Another time mine eye is my heart's guest, And in his thoughts of love doth share a part;

So, either by thy picture or my love,
Thyself away art present still with me;
For thou not farther than my thoughts
canst move.

And I am still with them, and they with thee;

Or if they sleep, thy picture in my sight Awakes my heart to heart's and eye's delight

48

How careful was I when I took my way, Each trifle under truest bars to thrust, That to my use it might unused stay From hands of falsehood, in sure wards of trust!

But thou, to whom my sewels trifles are, 5 Most worthy comfort, now my greatest grief,

Thou, best of dearest, and mine only care, Ait left the prey of every vulgar thief. Thee have I not lock'd up in any chest, Save where thou art not, though I feel thou art,

Within the gentle closure of my breast, From whence at pleasure thou mayst come and part:

And even thence thou wilt be stol'n, I tear,

For truth proves thievish for a prize so dear.

49

Against that time, if ever that time come, When I shall see thee frown on my defects, When as thy love hath cast his utmost sum, Call'd to that audit by advis'd respects; Against that time when thou shalt strangely

And scarcely greet me with that sun, thine eye,

When love, converted from the thing it was, Shall reasons find of settled gravity— Against that time do I ensconce me here Within the knowledge of mine own desert, And this my hand against myself uprear, it To guard the lawful reasons on thy part:

To leave poor me thou hast the strength of laws.

Since why to love I can allege no cause.

50

How heavy do I journey on the way, When what I seek—my weary travel's

Doth teach that ease and that repose to say 'Thus far the miles are measur'd from thy friend!'

The beast that bears me, tired with my wee, Plods dully on, to bear that weight in me, As if by some instinct the wretch did know His rider lov'd not speed being made from

The bloody spur cannot provoke him on 9 That sometimes anger thrusts into his hide. Which heavily he answers with a groan, More sharp to me than spurring to his side;

For that same groan doth put this in my mind:

My grief lies onward, and my joy behind.

1316

54

Of my dull bearer, when from thee I speed. From where thou art why should I haste me By that sweet ornament which truth doth thence?

Till I return, of posting is no need. O, what excuse will my poor beast then

When swift extremity can seem but slow? Then should I spur, though mounted on the wind;

In winged speed no motion shall I know. Then can no horse with my desire keep pace:

Therefore desire, of perfect'st love being made,

Shall weigh no dull flesh in his fiery race; But love, for love, thus shall excuse my jade:

Since from thee going he went wilful slow

Towards thee I'll run, and give him leave to go.

52

So am I as the rich whose blessed key Can bring him to his sweet up-locked treasure,

The which he will not ev'ry hour survey For blunting the fine point of seldom pleasure.

Therefore are teasts so so'emn and so rare. Since seldom coming, in the tong year set, Like stones of worth they thinly placed are, Or captain jewels in the carcanet.

So is the time that keeps you as my chest. Or as the wardrobe which the robe doth hide,

To make some special instant special blest By new unfolding his imprison'd pride.

Blessed are you, whose worthiness gives scope,

Being had, to triumph, being lack'd, to hope.

53

What is your substance, whereof are you made.

That millions of strange shadows on you Sweet love, renew thy force; be it not tend?

Since every one hath, every one, one shade,

And you, but one, can every shadow lend. Describe Adonis, and the counterfeit Is poorly imitated after you;

On Helen's cheek all art of beauty set, And you in Grecian tires are painted new. Speak of the spring and foison of the year: The one doth shadow of your beauty show, The other as your bounty doth appear, And you in every blessed shape we know.

In all external grace you have some part, heart.

Thus can my love excuse the slow offence O, how much more doth beauty beauteous seem give!

The rose looks fair, but fairer we it deem For that sweet odour which doth in it

The canker-blooms have full as deep a dve As the perfumed tincture of the roses. Hang on such thorns, and play as wantonly When summer's breath their masked buds discloses:

But for their virtue only is their show. They lived unwoo'd, and unrespected fade; Die to themselves. Sweet roses do not so: Of their sweet deaths are sweetest odours made.

And so of you, beauteous and lovely youth.

When that shall vade, by verse distills your truth.

55

Not marble nor the gilded monuments Or princes shall outlive this pow'rful rhyme;

But you shall shine more bright in these contents

unswept stone, besmear'd with Than sluttish time.

When wasteful war shall statues overturn. And proils root out the work of masonry, Nor Mars his sword not war's quick fire shall burn

The living record of your memory. 'Gainst death and all-oblivious enmity Shall you pace forth; your praise shall still find room,

Even in the eyes of all posterity That wear this world out to the ending doom. So, till the judgment that yourself arise, You live in this, and dwell in lovers' eyes.

56

said

Thy edge should blunter be than appetite, Which but to-day by feeding is allay'd, To-morrow sharp'ned in his former might. So, love, be thou; although to-day thou fill Thy hungry eyes, even till they wink with fulness.

To-morrow see again, and do not kill The spirit of love with a perpetual dulness. Let this sad int'rim like the ocean be Which parts the shore where two con

Return of love, more blest may be the view; Or call it winter, which, being full of care, Makes summer's welcome thrice more wish'd, more rare.

57

Being your slave, what should I do but tend

Upon the hours and times of your desire? I have no precious time at all to spend, Nor services to do, till you require.

Nor dare I chide the world-without-end hour, 5

Whilst I, my sovereign, watch the clock for you.

Nor think the bitterness of absence sour, When you have bid your servant once adieu;

Nor dare I question with my jealous thought

Where you may be, or your affairs suppose, But, like a sad slave, stay and think of nought

Save where you are how happy you make those.

So true a fool is love that in your will, Though you do anything, he thinks no ill.

58

That god forbid that made me first your slave

I should in thought control your times of pleasure,

Or at your hand th' account of hours to crave,

Being your vassal bound to stay your leisure!

O, let me suffer, being at your beck,
Th' imprison'd absence of your liberty,
And patience, tame to sufferance, bide each check

Without accusing you of injury Be where you list; your charter is so strong

That you will; to you it doth belong

Your self to pardon of self-doing crime.

I am to wait, though waiting so be hell;

Not blame your pleasure, be it ill or well.

59

If there be nothing new, but that which is Hath been before, how are our brains beguil'd,

Which labouring for invention bear amiss The second burthen of a former child! 4 O, that record could with a backward look, Even of five hundred courses of the sun, Show me your image in some antique book, Since mind at first in character was done! That I might see what the old world could

To this composed wonder of your frame; Whether we are mended, or whe'er better they,

Or whether revolution be the same.
O, sure I am, the wits of former days

To subjects worse have given admiring praise.

60

Like as the waves make towards the pebbled shore,

So do our minutes hasten to their end; Each changing place with that which goes before.

In sequent toil all forwards do contend. Nativity, once in the main of light, 5 Crawls to maturity, wherewith being crown'd,

Crooked eclipses 'gainst his glory fight, And Time that gave doth now his gift contound.

Time doth transfix the flourish set on youth,

And delves the parallels in beauty's brow, Feeds on the rarries of nature's truth, And nothing stands but for his scythe to mow.

And yet to times in hope my verse shall stand,
Praising thy worth, despite his cruel

Praising thy worth, despite his cruel hand.

61

Is it thy will thy image should keep open My heavy eyelids to the weary night?

Dost thou desire my slumbers should be broken.

While shadows like to thee do mock my sight?

Is it thy spirit that thou send'st from thee So far from home into my deeds to pry, To find out shames and idle hours in me, The scope and tenour of thy jealousy? O no! thy love, though much, is not so great:

It is my love that keeps mine eye awake; Mine own true love that doth my rest defeat To play the watchman ever for thy sake.

For thee watch I, whilst thou dost wake elsewhere.

From me far off, with others all too near.

62

sin of self-love possesseth all mine eye, so And all my soul, and all my every part;
And for this sin there is no remedy,
It is so grounded inward in my heart.
Methinks no face so gracious is as mine, so, No shape so true, no truth of such account,
And for myself mine own worth do define d As I all other in all worths surmount.
But when my glass shows me myself indeed,

Beated and chopt with tann'd antiquity, 10 O fearful meditation! Where, alack, Mine own self-love quite contrary I read; Shall Time's best jewel from Time's chest Self so self-loving were iniquity.

"Tis thee, my self, that for myself I praise, Painting my age with beauty of thy days.

63

Against my love shall be as I am now, With Time's injurious hand crush'd and o'erworn :

When hours have drain'd his blood, and fill'd his brow

With lines and wrinkles: when his youthful

Hath travell'd on to age's steepy night: 5 And all those beauties whereof now he's

Are vanishing or vanish'd out of sight. Stealing away the treasure of his spring-For such a time do I now fortify Against confounding age's cruel knife, That he shall never cut from memory My sweet love's beauty, though my lover's

His beauty shall in these black lines be

And they shall live, and he in them still green.

64

When I have seen by Time's fell hand detaced

The rich proud cost of outworn buried age; When sometime lofty towers I see downrased.

And brass eternal slave to mortal rage; When I have seen the hungry ocean gain 5 Advantage on the kingdom of the shore, And the firm soil win of the wat'ry main. Increasing store with loss, and loss with store:

When I have seen such interchange of state. Or state itself confounded to decay: Ruin hath taught me thus to ruminate-That Time will come and take my love away.

This thought is as a death, which cannot choose

But weep to have that which it fears to lose.

65

Since brass, nor stone, nor earth, nor boundless sea.

But sad mortality o'ersways their power, How with this rage shall beauty hold a plea, Whose action is no stronger than a flower? O, how shall summer's honey breath hold

A gainst the wrackful siege of batt'ring days, When rocks impregnable are not so stout, Nor gates of steel so strong, but Time decays?

he hid?

Or what strong hand can hold his swift foot back ?

Or who his spoil of beauty can forbid? O, none, unless this miracle have might, That in black ink my love may still shine bright.

Tir'd with all these, for restful death I cry: As, to behold desert a beggar born. And needy nothing trimm'd in jollity. And purest faith unhappily forsworn, And gilded honour shamefully misplac'd. 5 And maiden virtue rudely strumpeted, And right perfection wrongfully disgrac'd, And strength by limping sway disabled, And art made tongue-tied by authority, And folly, doctor-like, contiolling skill, 10 And simple truth miscall'd simplicity, And captive good attending captain ill-

Tir'd with all these, from these would I be gone,

Save that, to die, I leave my love alone.

Ah! wherefore with infection should he live And with his presence grace impiety, That sin by him advantage should achieve. And lace itself with his society? Why should talse painting imitate his cheek,

And steal dead seeming of his living hue? Why should poor beauty indirectly seek Roses of shadow, since his rose is true? Why should he live now Nature bankrupt is. Beggar'd of blood to blush through lively veins? For she hath no exchequer now but his, And, proud of many, lives upon his gains.

O, him she stores, to show what wealth she had

In days long since, before these last so had.

68

Thus is his check the map of days outworn, When beauty hy'd and died as flowers do now,

Before these bastard signs of fair were born. Or durst inhabit on a living brow; Before the golden tresses of the dead, The right of sepulchres, were shorn away To live a second life on second head, Ere beauty's dead ficece made another gay. In him those holy antique hours are seen, Without all ornament, itself and true, Making no summer of another's green, Robbing no old to dress his beauty new;

And him as for a map doth Nature store, To show false Art what beauty was of vore.

Those parts of thee that the world's eye doth view

Want nothing that the thought of hearts can mend.

All tongues, the voice of souls, give thee that due.

Utt'ring bare truth, even so as foes commend.

Thine outward thus with outward praise i

But those same tongues that give thee so thine own

In other accents do this praise confound By seeing farther than the eye hath shown. They look into the beauty of thy mind, And that, in guess, they measure by thy deeds:

Then, churls, their thoughts, although their eyes were kind,

To thy fair flower add the rank smell of weeds.

But why thy odour matcheth not thy show.

The soil is this—that thou dost common grow.

70

That thou art blam'd shall not be thy defect.

For slander's mark was ever yet the fair; The ornament of beauty is suspect,

A crow that flies in heaven's sweetest air. So thou be good, slander doth but approve Thy worth the greater, being woo'd of time; For canker vice the sweetest buds dot's love, And thou present'st a pure unstained prime. Thou hast pass'd by the ambush of young days.

Either not assail'd, or victor being charg'd; Yet this thy praise cannot be so thy praise To tie up envy, evermore enlarg'd.

If some suspect of ill mask'd not thy show,

Then thou alone kingdoms of hearts shouldst owe.

71

No longer mourn for me when I am dead Than you shall hear the surly sullen bell Give warning to the world that I am fled From this vile world, with vilest worms to dwell.

Nay, if you read this line, remember not 5
The hand that writ it; for I love you so,
That I in your sweet thoughts would be forgot,

If thinking on me then should make you woe.

O, if, I say, you look upon this verse, 9 When I perhaps compounded am with clay, Do not so much as my poor name rehearse, But let your love even with my life decay: Lest the wise world should look into your moan,

And mock you with me after I am gone.

72

O, lest the world should task you to recite What ment ha'd in me, that you should love

After my death, dear love, forget me quite, For you in me can nothing worthy prove; Unless you would devise some virtuous lie, To do more for me than mine own desert, And hang more praise upon deceased I. Than niggard truth would willingly impart, O, lest your true love may seem false in this.

That you for love speak well of me untrue, My name be builed where my body is, in And live no more to shame nor me nor you!

Fo. I am sham'd by that which I bring forth,

And so should you, to love things nothing worth.

73

That time of year thou mayst in me behold When yellow leaves, or none, or few, do hang

Upon those boughs which shake against the cold,

cold,
Bare ruin'd choirs where late the sweet birds sang.

In me thou seest the twilight of such day 3 As after sunset fadeth in the west, Which by and by black night doth take away.

Death's second self, that seals up all in rest.
In me thou seest the glowing of such fire
That on the ashes of his youth doth lie, 10
As the death-bed whereon it must expire,
Consum'd with that which it was nourish'd

by.

This thou perceiv'st which makes thy love more strong,

To love that well which thou must leave ere long.

74

But be contented. When that fell arrest Without all bail shall carry me away, My life hath in this line some interest, Which for memorial still with thee shall stay.

When thou reviewest this, thou dost review
The very part was consecrate to thee. 6
The earth can have but earth, which is his due;

My spirit is thine, the better part of me. So then thou hast but lost the dregs of life, The prey of worms, my body being dead? The coward conquest of a wretch's knife,

1320

Too base of thee to be remembered. 12
The worth of that is that which it contains,

And that is this, and this with thee remains.

75

So are you to my thoughts as food to life, Or as sweet-season'd showers are to the ground;

And for the peace of you I hold such strife
As 'twixt a miser and his wealth is found
Now proud as an enjoyer, and anon Doubting the filching age will steal his treasure;

Now counting best to be with you alone, Then better'd that the world may see my pleasure;

Sometime all full with feasting on your sight,

And by and by clean starved for a look; 10 Possessing or pursuing no delight Save what is had or must from you be took. Thus do I pine and surfeit day by day. Or gluttoning on all, or all away.

76

Why is my verse so barren of new pride? So far from variation or quick change? Why, with the time, do I not glance aside To new-found methods and to compounds strange?

Why write I still all one, ever the same,
And keep invention in a noted weed,
That every word doth almost tell my name.
Showing their birth, and where they did proceed?

O, know, sweet love, I always write of you,

And you and love are still my argument; 10 So all my best is dressing old words new, Spending again what is already spent; For as the sun is daily new and old, So is my love still telling what is told.

77

Thy glass will show thee how thy beauties wear,

Thy dial how thy precious minutes waste; The vacant leaves thy mind's imprint will bear.

And of this book this learning mayst thou taste.

The wrinkles which thy glass will truly show

Of mouthed graves will give thee memory; Thou by thy dial's shady stealth mayst know

Time's thievish progress to eternity.

Look what thy memory cannot contain

Commit to these waste blanks, and thou shalt find

Those children nurs'd, deliver'd from thy brain,

To take a new acquaintance of thy mind. These offices, so oft as thou wilt look, Shall profit thee, and much enr.ch thy book.

78

So oft have I invok'd thee for my Muse, And found such fair assistance in my verse, As every alien pen hath got my use, And under thee their poesy disperse. Thine eyes, that taught the dumb on high

Thine eyes, that taught the dumb on high to sing

And heavy ignorance aloft to fly,

And neavy ignorance aloft to fly,
Have added feathers to the learned's wing
And given grace a double majesty.
Yet be most proud of that which I compile,
Whose influence is thine, and born of thee:
In others' works thou dost but mend the style.

And arts with thy sweet graces graced be; But thou art all my art, and dost advance As high as learning my rude ignorance.

79

Whilst I alone did call upon thy aid, My verse alone had all thy gentle grace; But now my gracious numbers are decay'd And my sick Muse doth give another place. I grant, sweet love, thy lovely argument beserves the travail of a worther pen. Yet what of thee thy poet doth invent He robs thee of, and pays it thee again. He lends thee virtue, and he stole that word From thy behaviour; beauty doth he give, And found it in thy cheek; he can afford No praise to thee but what in thee doth live. Then thank him not for that which he doth say, Since what he owes thee thou thyself dost pay.

80

O, how I faint when I of you do write, Knowing a better spirit doth use your name And in the praise thereof spends all his might

To make me tongue-tied, speaking of your fame!

But since your worth, wide as the ocean is, The humble as the proudest sail doth bear, My saucy bark, inferior far to his, On your broad main doth wilfully appear. Your shallowest help will hold me up afloat,

Whilst he upon your soundless deep doth ride;
Or, being wreck'd, I am a worthless boat, He of tall building and of goodly pride.

Then if he thrive, and I be cast away,
The worst was this: my love was my
decay.

Or I shall live your epitaph to make,
Or you survive when I in earth am rotten
From hence your memory death cannot take,

Although in me each part will be forgotten Your name from hence immortal life shal have.

Though 1, once gone, to all the world must die;

The earth can yield me but a common grave,

When you entombed in men's eyes shall lie Your monument shall be my gentle verse. Which eyes not yet created shall o'er-read; And tongues to be your being shall rehearse When all the breathers of this world are dead.

You still shall live, such virtue hath my pen,

Where breath most breathes, even in the mouths of men.

82

I grant thou wert not married to my Muse, And therefore mayst without attain o'er-

The dedicated words which writers use Of their fair subject, blessing every book. Thou art as fair in knowledge as in hue, 5 Finding thy worth a limit past my praise And therefore art enforc'd to seek anew Some fresher stamp of the time-bettering days.

And do so, love; yet when they have devis'd

What strained touches rhetoric can lend, in Thou truly fair wert truly sympathiz'd In true plain words by thy true-telling friend;

And their gross painting might be better us'd

Where cheeks need blood; in thee it is abus'd.

83

I never saw that you did painting need, And therefore to your fair no painting set; I found, or thought I found, you did exceed The barren tender of a poet's debt; And therefore have I slept in your report, s That you your self, being extant, well might show

How far a modern quill doth come too short,

Speaking of worth, what worth in you doth grow.

This silence for my sin you did impute, Which shall be most my glory, being dumb; For I impair not beauty, being mute, 11 When others would give life, and bring a tomb.

There lives more life in one of your fair eyes

Than both your poets can in praise devise.

84

Who is it that says most which can say more

Than this rich praise—that you alone are you?

In whose confine immured is the store Which should example where your equal grew?

Lean penury within that pen doth dwell 5 That to his subject lends not some small glory:

But he that writes of you, if he can tell That you are you, so digmiles his story. Let him but copy what in you is writ, Not making worse what nature made so clear.

And such a counterpart shall fame his wit, Making his style admired every where.

You to your beauteous blessings add a curse,

Being fond on praise, which makes your praises worse.

85

My tongue-tied Muse in manners holds her still.

While comments of your praise, richly compil'd,

Reserve their character with golden quill And precious phrase by all the Muses fil'd. I think good thoughts, whilst other write good words,

And, like unlettered clerk, still cry' Amen' To every hynn that able spirit affords In polish'd form of well-refined pen. Hearing you prais'd, I say 'Tis so, 'tis true'.

And to the most of praise add something more;

But that is in my thought, whose love to you,

Though words come nindmest, holds his

Though words come nindmost, holds his rank before.

Then others for the breath of words respect,

Me for my dumb thoughts, speaking in effect.

86

Was it the proud full sail of his great verse, Bound for the prize of all-too-precious you, That did ray tipe thoughts in my brain inhearse,

Making their tomb the womb wherein they grew?

Was it his spirit, by spirits taught to write s Above a mortal pitch, that struck me dead? No, neither he, nor his compeers by night

Giving him aid, my verse astonished. He nor that affable familiar ghost Which nightly gulls him with intelligence, As victors, of my silence cannot boost:

I was not sick or any feat from thence.

But when your countenance fill'd up his line.

Then lack'd I matter; that enfeebled

87

Farewell! thou art too dear for my possessing,

And like enough thou know'st thy estimate
The charter of thy worth gives thee releasing;

My bonds in thee are all determinate.

For how do I hold thee but by thy granting?
And for that riches where is my deserving?
The cause of this fair gift in me is wanting,
And so my patent back again is swerving.
Thy self thou gav'st, thy own worth then not knowing,

Or me, to whom thou gav'st it, else mistaking;

So thy great gift, upon misprision growing,

Comes home again, on better judgment making.

Thus have I had thee, as a dream doth flatter:

In sleep a king, but waking no such matter.

88

When thou shalt be disposed to set me light, And place my ment in the eye of scorn, Upon thy side against myseli I'li fight, And prove thee virtuous, though thou art forsworn.

With mine own weakness being best acquainted.

Upon thy part I can set down a story Ot faults conceal'd, wherein I am attainted; That thou, in losing me, shall win much glory.

And I by this will be a gainer too;

For bending all my loving thoughts on thee,

The injuries that to myself I do,
Doing thee vantage, double vantage me.
Such is my love, to thee I so belong,
That for thy right myself will bear all wrong.

89

Say that thou didst forsake me for some fault,

And I will comment upon that offence; Speak of my lameness, and I straight will halt;

Against thy reasons making no defence.
Thou canst not, love, disgrace me half so

To set a form upon desired change, As I'll myself disgrace, knowing thy will. I will acquaintance strangle and look strange.

Be absent from thy walks, and in my congue

Thy sweet beloved name no more shall dwell,

Lest I, too much prorane, should do it wrong,

And haply of our old acquaintance tell.

For thee, against myself I'll vow debate,

For 1 must ne'er love him whom thou dost hate.

90

Then hate me when thou wilt; if ever, now;

Now while the world is bent my deeds to cross,

Join with the spite of fortune, make me bow,

And do not drop in for an after-loss. Ah, do not, when my heart hath scap'd this sorrow, 5 Come in the rearward of a conquei d wee; Give not a windy night a rainy morrow

To linger out a purpos'd overthiow. If thou wilt leave me, do not leave me last.

When other petty griefs have done their spite,

But in the onset come; so shall I taste
At first the very worst of fortune's might;
And other strains of woe, which now seem

Compar'd with loss of thee will not seem so.

0.1

Some glory in their birth, some in their skill.

Some in their wealth, some in their body's force;

Some in their garments, though new-tangled ill;

Some in their hawks and hounds, some in their horse;

And every humour hath his adjunct pleasure, 5

Wherein it finds a joy above the rest; But these particulars are not my measure; All these I better in one general best. Thy love is better than high buth to me, Picher than wealth, prouder than garments'

Richer than wealth, prouder than garments' cost, to
Of more delight than hawks and horses be;

And, having thee, of all men's pride I boast—
Wretched in this alone, that thou mayst

Wretched in this alone, that thou mayst take

All this away, and me most wierched make.

95

But do thy worst to steal thy self away, For term of life thou art assured mine; And life no longer than thy love will stay, For it depends upon that love of thine. 4 Then need I not to fear the worst of wrongs. When in the least of them my life hath end. I see a better state to me belongs Than that which on thy humour doth depend.

Thou canst not vex me with inconstant mind. Since that my life on thy revolt doth he.

O what a happy title do I find, Happy to have thy love, happy to die!

But what's so blessed-tair that fears no blot?

Thou mayst be false, and yet I know it not.

93

So shall I live, supposing thou art true, Like a deceived husband; so love's face May still seem love to me, though alter'd new-

Thy looks with me, thy heart in other place.

For there can live no hatred in thine eye; Therefore in that I cannot know thy change.

In many's looks the false heart's history Is writ in moods and frowns and wrinkles strange;

But heaven in thy creation did decree That in thy face sweet love should ever dwell:

Whate'er thy thoughts or thy heart's workings be,

Thy looks should nothing thence but sweetness tell.

How like Eve's apple doth thy beauty If thy sweet virtue answer not thy show!

They that have power to hurt and will do

That do not do the thing they most do show, Who, moving others, are themselves as stone,

Unmoved, cold, and to temptation slow-They rightly do inherit Heaven's graces, s And husband nature's riches from expense: They are the lords and owners of their faces, Others but stewards of their excellence. The summer's flow'r is to the summer sweet Though to itself it only live and die; But if that flow'r with base infection meet, The basest weed outbraves his dignity.

deeds :

Lilies that fester smell far worse than weeds.

How sweet and lovely dost thou make the shame

Which, like a canker in the fragrant rose. Doth spot the beauty of thy budding name! O, in what sweets dost thou thy sine enclose!

That tongue that tells the story of thy days. Making lascivious comments on thy sport. Cannot dispraise but in a kind of praise: Naming thy name blesses an ill report. O. what a mansion have those vices got .

Which for their habitation chose out thee, Where beauty's veil doth cover every blot. And all things turns to fair that eyes can see! Take heed, dear heart, of this large privilege; The hardest knife ill-us'd doth lose his edge.

96

Some say thy fault is youth, some wantonness:

Some say thy grace is youth and gentle sport ; Both grace and faults are lov'd of more and

Thou mak'st faults graces that to thee resort.

As on the finger of a throned queen The basest jewel will be well esteem'd: So are those errors that in thee are seen To truths translated and for true things deem'd.

How many lambs might the stern wolf betray,

If like a lamb he could his looks translate! How many gazers mightst thou lead away. If thou wouldst use the strength of all thy state !

But do not so; I love thee in such sort. As, thou being mine, mine is thy good report.

97

How like a winter hath my absence been From thee, the pleasure of the fleeting year! What freezings have I felt, what dark days seen !

What old December's bareness everywhere! And yet this time remov'd was summer's time.

The teeming autumn, big with rich increase, Bearing the wanton burden of the prime. Like widowed wombs after their lord's decease:

Yet this abundant issue seem'd to me But hope of orphans, and unfathered fruit; For summer and his pleasures wait on thee, For sweetest things turn sourcest by their And, thou away, the very birds are mute;

Or, if they sing, 'tis with so dull a cheer That leaves look pale, dreading the winter's near.

From you have I been absent in the spring, When proud-pied April, dress'd in all his trim.

Hath put a spirit of youth in every thing, That heavy Saturn laugh'd and leap'd with him.

Yet nor the lays of birds, nor the sweet smell 5

Of different flowers in odour and in hue, Could make me any summer's story tell, Or from their proud lap pluck them where they grew;

Nor did I wonder at the lily's white, Nor praise the deep vermilion in the rose They were but sweet, but figures of delight, Drawn after you, you pattern of all those. Yet seem'd it winter still, and, you away.

Yet seem'd it winter still, and, you away, As with your shadow I with these did play.

99

The forward violet thus did I chide:
Sweet thief, whence didst thou steal thy sweet that smells,

If not from my love's breath? The purple pride

Which on thy soft cheek for complexion dwells

In my love's veins thou hast too grossly dy'd.

The lily I condemned for thy hand, And buds of marjoram had stol'n thy hair; The roses fearfully on thorns did stand, One blushing shame, another white despair; A third, nor red nor white, had stol'n of both,

And to his robb'ry had annex'd thy breath; But, for his theft, in pride of all his growth A vengeful canker eat him up to death.

More flowers I noted, yet I none could see But sweet or colour it had stol'n from thee.

100

Where art thou, Muse, that thou forget'st so long

To speak of that which gives thee all thy might?

Spend'st thou thy fury on some worthless song,
Dark'ning thy power to lend base subjects

light?
Return, forgetful Muse, and straight

redcem

Sing to the car that doth thy lays esteem
And gives thy pen both skill and argument.
Rise, resty Muse, my love's sweet face survey,

If Time have any wrinkle graven there; 10 If any, be a satire to decay,

And make Time's spoils despised everywhere,

Give my love fame faster than Time wastes life;

So thou prevent'st his scythe and crooked knife.

101

O truant Muse, what shall be thy amends For thy neglect of truth in beauty dy'd? Both truth and beauty on my love depends; So dost thou too, and therein dignified. Make answer, Muse. Wilt thou not haply

'Truth needs no colour with his colour fix'd:

Beauty no pencil, beauty's truth to lay; But best is best, if never intermix'd'? Because he needs no praise, wilt thou be dumb?

Excuse not silence so; for't lies in thee so To make him much outlive a gilded tomb, And to be piais'd of ages yet to be.

And to be plais'd of ages yet to be.

Then do thy office, Muse. I teach thee how

To make him seem long hence as he shows now.

102

My love is strength'ned, though more weak in seeming;

I love not less, though less the show appear; That love is merchandiz'd whose rich esteeming

The owner's tongue doth publish every where.

Our love was new, and then but in the spring,

When I was wont to greet it with my lays; As Philomel in summer's front doth sing, And stops her pipe in growth of riper days. Not that the summer is less pleasant now I han when her mournful hymns did hush the night, 10 But that wild music burthens every bough, And sweets grown common lose their dear delight.

Therefore, like her, I sometime hold my tongue.

Because I would not dull you with my song.

103

Alack, what poverty my Muse brings forth, That, having such a scope to show her pride,

The argument all bare is of more worth Than when it hath my added praise beside! O, blame me not, if I no more can write! s Look in your glass, and there appears a face That over-goes my blunt invention quite, Dulling my lines, and doing me disgrace.

Were it not sinful then, striving to mend, To mar the subject that before was well? For to no other pass my verses tend Than of your graces and your gifts to tell:

And more, much more, than in my verse can sit

Your own glass shows you, when you look in it.

104

To me, fair friend, you never can be old, For as you were when first your eye I ey'd, Such seems your beauty still. Three winters cold

Have from the torests shook three summers' pride,

Three beauteous springs to yellow aurumn turn'd

In process of the seasons have I seen,
Three April perfumes in three hot Junes burn'd.

Since first I saw you fresh, which yet are

Ah, yet doth beauty, like a dial-hand, Steal from his figure, and no pace perceiv'd;

So your sweet hue, which methinks still doth stand,

Hath motion, and mine eye may be deceiv'd.

For fear of which, hear this, thou age unbred:
Ere you were born was beauty's summer

105 dead.

Let not my love be call'd idolatry,
Nor my beloved as an idol show.
Since all alike my songs and praises be
To one, of one, still such, and ever so.
Kind is my love to-day, to-morrow kind, s
Still constant in a wondrous excellence;
Therefore my verse, to constancy contin'd,
One thing expressing, leaves out difference.
'Fair, kind, and true' is all my argument,
'Fair, kind, and true' varying to other
words;

And in this change is my invention spent, Three themes in one, which wondrous scope affords.

Fair, kind, and true, have often liv'd alone,

Which three, till now, never kept seat But makes antiquity for aye his page; in one.

Finding the first conceit of love the 106

When in the chronicle of wasted time
I see descriptions of the fairest wights,
And beauty making beautiful old rhyme
In praise of ladies dead and lovely knights,
Then, in the blazon of sweet beauty's best,
Of hand, of foot, of lip, of eye, of brow, "
I see their antique pen would have express'd

Even such a beauty as you master now. 1326

So all their praises are but prophecies
Of this our time, all you prefiguring;
And, for they look'd but with divining
eyes,

They had not skill enough your worth to sing;

For we, which now behold these present days,

Have eyes to wonder, but lack tongues to praise.

107

Not mine own fears, nor the prophetic soul Of the wide world dreaming on things to come,

Can yet the lease of my true love control, Suppos'd as torfeit to a confin'd doom. 4 The mortal moon hath her eclipse endur'd, And the sad augurs mock their own pres-

Incertainties now crown themselves assur'd, And peace proclaims olives of endless age. Now with the drops of this most balmy time

My love looks fresh, and Death to me subscribes, Since spite of him I'll live in this poor rhyme,

While he insults o'er dull and speechless tribes.

And thou in this shalt find thy monu-

When tyrants' crests and tombs of brass are spent.

108

What's in the brain that ink may character Which hath not figur'd to thee my true spirit?

What's new to speak, what new to register, That may express my love or thy dear merit?

Nothing, sweet boy; but yet, like prayers divine, 5

I must each day say o'er the very same; Counting no old thing old, thou mine, I thine,

Even as when first I hallowed thy fair name.

So that eternal love in love's fresh case Weighs not the dust and injury of age, 10 Nor gives to necessary wrinkles place, But makes antiquity for ave his page:

Finding the first conceit of love there bred.

Where time and outward form would show it dead.

109

O, never say that I was false of heart, Though abtence seem'd my flame to qualify! As easy might I from my self depart As from my soul, which in thy breast doth lie:

That is my home of love. If I have rang'd. None else to me, nor I to none alive. Like him that travels, I return again, Just to the time, not with the time ex-chang'd,

So that my self bring water for my stain. Never believe, though in my nature reign'd All frailties that besiege all kinds of blood, That it could so preposterously be stain'd To leave for nothing all thy sum of good; For nothing this wide universe 1 call 13

Save thou, my rose; in it thou art my all.

110

Alas, 'tis true I have gone here and there And made myself a motley to the view, Gor'd mine own thoughts, sold cheap what is most dear.

Made old offences of affections new. Most true it is that I have look'd on truth Askance and strangely; but, by all above, These blenches gave my heart another youth.

And worse essays prov'd thee my best of love.

Now all is done, have what shall have no

Mine appetite I never more will grind On newer proof, to try an older friend, A god in love, to whom I am confin'd.

Then give me welcome, next my heaven the best,

Even to thy pure and most most loving breast.

111

O. for my sake do you with Fortune chide, The guilty goddess of my harmful deeds, That did not better for my life provide Than public means which public manners breeds.

Thence comes it that my name receives a brand,

And almost thence my nature is subdu'd To what it works in, like the dyer's hand. Pity me then, and wish I were renew'd; Whilst, like a willing patient, I will drink Potions of eisel, gainst my strong infection:

No bitterness that I will bitter think, Nor double penance, to correct cor action.

Pity me then, dear friend, and I assure

Even that your pity is enough to cure me.

112

Your love and pity doth th' impression fill Which vulgar scandal stamp'd upon my brow:

For what care I who calls me well or ill, So you o'ergreen my bad, my good allow? You are my all the world, and I must strive To know my shames and praises from your tongue;

That my steel'd sense or changes right or wrong.

In so protound abysm I throw all care Of others' voices that my adder's sense 10 To critic and to flatterer stopped are. Mark how with my neglect I do dispense:

You are so strongly in my purpose bred That all the world besides inethinks are dead.

113

Since I left you, mine eye is in my mind: And that which governs me to go about Doth part his function, and is partly blind, Seems seeing, but effectually is out; For it no form delivers to the heart Of bird, of flow'r, or shape, which it doth latch:

Of his quick objects hath the mind no part, Nor his own vision holds what it doth catch:

For if it see the rud'st or gentlest sight, The most sweet favour or deformed'st cieature.

The mountain or the sea, the day or night, The crow or dove, it shapes them to your feature.

Incapable of more, replete with you, My most true mind thus mak'th mine eye untrue.

114

Or whether doth my mind, being crown'd with you,

Drink up the monarch's plague, this flattery?

Or whether shall I say mine eye saith true, And that your love taught it this alchemy To make of monsters and things indigest 5 Such cherubins as your sweet self resemble, Creating every bad a perfect best

As fast as objects to his beains assemble? O, 'tis the first; 'tis flatt'ry in my seeing, And my great mind most kingly dunks it uv.

Mine eye well knows what with his gust is greeing,

And to his palate doth prepare the cup.

If it be poison'd, 'tis the lesser sin That mine eye loves it, and doth first begin.

Those lines that I before have writ do lie; Even those that said I could not love you dearer:

Yet then my judgment knew no reason why

My most full flame should afterwards burn clearer.

But reckoning Time, whose million'd accidents

Creep in 'twixt vows and change decrees of And, sick of welfare, found a kind of kings,

Tan sacred beauty, blunt the sharp'st To be diseas'd ere that there was true intents.

Divert strong minds to th' course of alt'ring things-

Alas, why, fearing of Time's tyranny, Might I not then say 'Now I love you best

When I was certain o'er incertainty, Crowning the present, doubting of the rest? Love is a babe: then might I not say so, To give full growth to that which still doth grow?

Let me not to the marriage of true minds Admit impediments. Love is not love Which alters when it alteration finds, Or bends with the remover to remove. O, no! it is an ever-fixed mark, That looks on tempests and is never shaken; It is the star to every wand'ring bark, Whose worth's unknown, although his height be taken.

Love's not Time's fool, though rosy lips and cheeks

Within his bending sickle's compass come; Love alters not with his brief hours and weeks,

But bears it out even to the edge or doom. If this be error, and upon me prov'd, I never writ, nor no man ever lov'd.

117

Accuse me thus: that I have scanted all Wherein I should your great deserts repay; Forgot upon your dearest love to call, Whereto all bonds do tie me day by day; That I have frequent been with unknown minds.

And given to time your own dear ourchas'd right:

That I have hoisted sail to all the winds Which should transport me farthest from your sight.

Book both my wilfulness and errors down. And on just proof surmise accumulate; 10 Bring me within the level of your frown, But shoot not at me in your wakened hate; Since my appeal says I did strive to The humble salve which wounded bosoms prove

The constancy and virtue of your love.

118

Like as to make our appetites more keen With eager compounds we our palate urge, As to prevent our maladies unseen We sicken to shun sickness when we purge; Even so, being full of your ne'er-cloying sweetness.

To bitter sauces did I frame my feeding, 1328 needing.

Thus policy in love, t' anticipate The ills that were not, giew to faults assured. And brought to medicine a healthful state. Which, rank of goodness, would by ill be cured.

But thence I learn, and find the lesson true,

Drugs poison him that so fell sick of you.

110

What potions have I drunk of Siren tears. Distill'd from limbecks foul as hell within, Applying fears to hopes, and hopes to fears, Still losing when I saw my self to win! What wretched errors hath my heart committed,

Whilst it hath thought it self so blessed never!

How have mine eyes out of their spheres been fitted

In the distraction of this madding fever! O benefit ot ill! Now I find true

That better is by evil still made better: 10 And ruin'd love, when it is built anew, rows fairer than at first, more strong, far greater.

So I return rebuk'd to my content. And gain by ill thrice more than I have spent.

120

That you were once unkind befriends me

And for that sorrow which I then did feel Needs must I under my transgression bow. Unless my nerves were brass or hammered steel.

For if you were by my unkindness shaken. As I by yours, y'have pass'd a hell of time: And I, a tyrant, have no lessure taken To weigh how once I suffered in your crime. O that our night of woe might have remem-

My deepest sense how hard true sorrow hits, And soon to you, as you to me, then tend'red fits!

But that your trespass now becomes a fee:

Mine ransoms yours, and yours must ransom me.

121

By their rank thoughts my deeds must not be shown, Unless this general evil they maintain: All men are bad, and in their badness reign.

122

Thy gift, thy tables, are within my brain Full character'd with lasting memory, Which shall above that idle rank remain Beyond all date, even to eternity; Or at the least so long as brain and heart 5 Have faculty by nature to subsist; Till each to raz'd oblivion yield his part Of thee, thy record never can be miss'd. That poor retention could not so much hold.

Nor need I tallies thy dear love to score; : Therefore to give them from me was I hold, To trust those tables that receive thee more To keep an adjunct to remember thee Were to import forgettumess in me.

No, Time, thou shalt not boast that I do change.

Thy pyramids built up with newer might To me are nothing novel, in flung strange; They are but dressings of a tormer sight. Our dates are brief, and therefore we admire What thou dost foise upon us that is old, And rather make them born to our desire Than think that we before have heard them told.

Thy registers and thee I both defy. Not wond'ring at the present nor the past, For thy records and what we see doth lie, Made more or less by thy continual haste.

This I do vow, and this shall ever be: I will be true, despite thy scythe and thee.

124

If my dear love were but the child of state, It might for Fortune's bastard be unfather'd.

As subject to Time's love or to Time's hate, Weeds among weeds, or flowers with flowers gather'd.

No, it was builded far from accident; It suffers not in smiling pomp, nor falls Under the blow of thralled discontent. Whereto th' inviting time our fashion calls. It fears not Policy, that heretic, Which works on leases of short-numb'red hours,

But all clone stands hugely politic, That it not grows with heat nor drowns

When it ast impeach'd, stands least in thy control.

126

O thou, my lovely boy, who in thy power Dost hold Time's fickle glass, his sickle

Who hast by waning grown, and therein show'st

Thy lovers withering as thy sweet self grow'st;

If Nature, sovereign mistress over wrack, 5 As thou goest onwards, still will pluck thee back.

She keeps thee to this purpose, that her skill

May time disgrace, and wretched minutes kill.

Yet fear her, O thou minion of her pleasure! She may detain, but not still keep, her treasure;

Her audit, though delay'd, answer'd must be.

And her quietus is to render thee.

127

In the old age black was not counted fair, Or if it were, it bore not beauty's name; But now is black beauty's successive heir, And beauty slander'd with a bastard shame;

For since each hand hath put on nature's

Sweet beauty hath no name, no holy bower.

But is protan'd, if not lives in disgrace. Therefore my mistress' brows are raven

At such who, not born fair, no beauty lack, My mistiess when she walks treads on the Sland'ring creation with a false esteem.

Yet so they mourn, becoming of their

That every tongue says beauty should look so.

128

How oft, when thou, my music, music play'st

Upon that blessed wood whose motion sounds

With thy sweet fingers, when thou gently sway'st

The wirv concord that mine ear confounds. Do I envy those jacks that nimble leap To kiss the tender inwaid of thy hand Whilst my poor lips, which should that harvest reap,

At the wood's boldness by thee blushing stand!

To be so tickled, they would change their state

And situation with those dancing chips 10 O'er whom thy fingers walk with gentle gait.

Making dead wood more blest than living hps.

Since saucy jacks so happy are in this. Give them thy fingers, me thy lips to kiss.

Th' expense of spirit in a waste of shame Is lust in action; and till action, lust Is perjur'd, murd'rous, bloody, full of blame.

Savage, extreme, rude, cruel, not to trust; Enjoy'd no sooner but despised straight; 5 Past reason hunted, and, no sooner had, Past reason hated, as a swallowed bait, On purpose laid to make the taker mad-Mad in pursuit, and in possession so: Had, having, and in quest to have, extreme; A bliss in proof, and prov'd, a very wee; Before, a joy propos'd; behind, a dream. All this the world well knows; yet none knows well

To shun the heaven that leads men to this hell.

But no such roses see I in her cheeks: And in some perfumes is there more delight Than in the breath that from my mistress

I love to hear her speak, yet well I know black, 9 That music hath a far more pleasing sound; Her eyes so suited, and they mourners seem 'I grant I never saw a goddess goground.

And yet, by heaven, I think my love as rare

As any she belied with false compare.

131

Thou art as tyrannous, so as thou art. As those whose beauties proudly make them cruel:

For well thou know'st to my dear doting heart

Thou art the fairest and most precious jewel.

Yet, in good faith, some say that thee behold

Thy face hath not the power to make love groan.

To say they err I dare not be so bold. Although I swear it to myself alone. And, to be sure that is not false I swear. A thousand groans, but thinking on thy

And thence this slander, as I think. proceeds.

132

Thine eyes I love, and they, as pitying me. Knowing thy heart torments me with disdain,

Have put on black, and loving mourners be, Looking with pretty ruth upon my pain. And truly not the morning sun of heaven 5 Better becomes the grey cheeks of the east, Nor that full star that ushers in the even Doth half that glory to the sober west, As those two mourning eyes become thy

Is't not e lough to torture me alone,
But slav: to slavery my sweet'st friend roust be?

Me from ny self thy cruel eye hath taken, s And my next self thou harder hast engrossed;

Of him, my self, and thee, I am forsaken; A torment thrice three-fold thus to be crossed.

Prison my heart in thy steel bosom's ward, But then my friend's heart let my poor heart bail:

Whoe'er keeps me, let my heart be his guard;

Thou canst not then use rigour in my gaol.

And yet thou wilt; for I, being pent in thee,

Perforce am thine, and all that is in me.

134

So now I have confess'd that he is thine, And I myself am mortgag'd to thy will; My self I'll forfeit, so that other mine Thou wilt restore to be my comfort still. But thou wilt not, nor he will not be free, 5 For thou art covetous, and he is kind; He learn'd but surety-like to write for me Under that bond that him as fast doth bind. The statute of thy beauty thou wilt take, Thou usurer that put's forth all to use, xo And sue a friend came debtor for my sake; So him I lose through my unkind abuse.

Him have I lost; thou hast both him and me;

He pays the whole, and yet am I not free.

135

Whoever hath her wish, thou hast thy Will.

And Will to boot, and Will in over-plus;
More than enough am I that vex thee still,
To thy sweet will making addition thus. 4
Wilt thou, whose will is large and spacious,
Not once vouchsafe to hide my will in thine?

Shall will in others seem right gracious, And in my will no fair acceptance shine? The sea, all water, yet receives rain still, And in abundance addeth to his store; 10 So thou, being rich in Will, add to thy Will One will of mine, to make thy large Will more.

Let no unkind, no fair beseechers kill; Think all but one, and me in that one Will.

136

If thy soul check thee that I come so near, Swear to thy blind soul that I was thy Will, And will, thy soul knows, is admitted there; Thus far for love my love-suit, sweet, fulfil. Will will fulfil the treasure of thy love, say, fill it full with wills, and my will one.

In things of great research to the prove

Among a number one is re-kosem nero.

Then in the number let rie pass untola,
Though in thy store's account I one must be:

For nothing hold me, so it please thee hold That nothing me, a something sweet to thee;

Make but my name thy love, and love that still,

And then thou lov'st me, for my name is Will.

137

Thou blind fool, I ove, what dost thou to mine eyes

That they behold, and see not what they see?

They know what beauty is, see where it lies, Yet what the best is take the worst to be. If eyes, corrupt by over-partial looks, 5 Be anchor'd in the bay where all mea ride, Why of eyes' falsehood hast thou forged hooks.

Whereto the judgment of my heart is tied?
Why should my heart think that a several plot.

Which my heart knows the wide world's common place?

Or mine eyes, seeing this, say this is not, To put fair truth upon so foul a face? In things right true my heart and eyes

In things right true my heart and eyes have erred,

And to this false plague are they now transferred.

138

When my love swears that she is made of truth.

I do believe her, though I know she lies, That she might think me some untutor'd youth.

Unlearned in the world's false subtleties.
Thus vainly thinking that she thinks me young, 5

Although she knows my days are past the best.

Simply I credit her false-speaking tongue; On both sides thus is simple truth suppress'd.

But wherefore says she not she is unjust? And wherefore say not I that I am old? 100, love's best habit is in seeming trust,

And age in love loves not to have years told.

Therefore I lie with her, and she with me,
And in our faults by lies we flattered be.

139

O, call not me to justify the wrong
That thy unkindness lays upon my heart;
Wound me not with thine eye, but with thy tongue;

Use power with power, and slay me not by art.

Tell me thou lov'st elsewhere; but in my sight,

Dear heart, forbear to glance thine eye aside.

What need'st thou wound with cunning, when thy might

Is more than my o'erpress'd defence can bide?

Let me excuse thee: ah! my love well knows

Her pretty looks have been mine enemies; And therefore from my face she turns my foes,

That they elsewhere might dart their injuries.

Yet do not so; but since I am near slain, Kill me outright with looks and rid my pain.

140

Be wise as thou art cruel; do not press My tongue-tied patience with too much disdain;

Lest sorrow lend me words, and words express

The manner of my pity-wanting pain.

If I might teach thee wit, better it were,
Though not to love, yet, love, to tell me so;
As testy sick men, when their deaths be near.

No news but health from their physicians know.

For, if I should despair, I should grow mad, And in my madness might speak ill of thee.

Now this ill-wresting world is grown so had Mad slanderers by mad ears believed be.

That I may not be so, nor thou belied, Bear thine eyes straight, though thy proud heart go wide.

141

In faith, I do not love thee with mine eyes, For they in thee a thousand errors note; But 'tis my heart that loves what they despise.

Who in despite of view is pleas'd to dote. Nor are mine ears with thy tongue's tune delighted:

Nor tender feeling to base touches prone, Nor taste nor smell desire to be invited To any sensual feast with thee alone; But my five wits nor my five senses can Dissuade one foolish heart from serving thee,

Who leaves unsway'd the likeness of a man, Thy proud heart's slave and vassal wretch

Only my plague thus far I count my gain, That she that makes me sin awards me pain. 142

Love is my sin, and thy dear virtue hate, Hate of my sin, grounded on sinful loving. O, but with mine compare thou thine own state,

And thou shalt find it merits not reproving; Oi, if it do, not from those lips of thine, 5 That have profan'd their scarlet ornaments, And seal'd talse bonds of love as oft as Robb'd others' beds' revenues of their rents.

Be it lawful I love thee as thou lov'st those Whom thine eyes woo as mine importune thee.

Root pity in thy heart, that, when it grows, Thy pity may deserve to pitied be.

If thou dost seek to have what thou dost hide,

By self-example mayst thou be denied!

143

Lo as a careful huswife runs to catch One of her feathered creatures broke away, Sets down her babe, and makes all swift dispatch

In pursuit of the thing she would have stay; Whilst her neglected child holds her in chase,

Cries to catch her whose busy care is bent

To follow that which flies before her face, Not prizing her poor infant's discontent; So run'st thou after that which flies from thee.

Whilst I thy babe chase thee afar behind; But it thou catch thy hope, turn back to me,

And play the mother's part, kiss me, be kind.

So will I pray that thou mayst have thy Will.

If thou turn back and my loud crying

144

I wo loves I have, of comfort and despair, Which like two spirits do suggest me still; The better angel is a man right fair. The worser spirit a woman colour'd ill. To win me soon to hell, my female evil 5 Tempteth my better angel from my side, And would corrupt my saint to be a devil, Wooing his purity with her foul pride. And whether that my angel be turn'd fiead, Suspect I may, yet not directly tell; 10 But being both from me, both to each friend.

I guess one angel in another's hell.
Yet this shall I ne'er know, but live in doubt,
Till my bad angel fire my good one out.

1332

Those lips that Love's own hand did make Breath'd forth the sound that said 'I hate' To me that languish'd for her sake; But when she saw my woeful state, Straight in her heart did mercy come, Chiding that tongue that ever sweet Was us'd in giving gentle doom; And taught it thus anew to greet: 'I hate' she alter'd with an end That follow'd it as gentle day
Doth follow night, who like a fiend From heaven to hell is flown away:
'I hate' from hate away she threw, And say'd my lite, saying 'not you'.

146

Poor soul, the centre of my sinful earth, [My sinful earth] these rebel pow'rs that thee array,

Why dost thou pine within and suffer dearth,

Painting thy outward walls so costly gay? Why so large cost, having so short a lease, 5 Dost thou upon thy tading mansion spend? Shall worms, inheritors of this excess, Eat up thy charge? Is this thy body's end? Then, soul, live thou upon thy servant's lose.

And let that pine to aggravate thy store; 10 Buy terms divine in selling hours of dross; Within be fed, without be rich no more. So shalt thou teed on Death, that feeds on men.

And, Death once dead, there's no more dying then.

147

My love is as a fever, longing still For that which longer nurseth the disease; Feeding on that which doth preserve the ill, Th' uncertain sickly appetite to please. My Reason, the physician to my Love, 5 Angry that his prescriptions are not kept, Hath left me, and I desperate now approve Desire is death, which physic did except. Past cure I am, now reason is past care, And frantic mad with evermore unrest; 10 My thoughts and my discourse as mad men's are.

At random from the truth vainly express'd;
For I have sworn thee fair, and thought thee bright,

Who art as black as hell, as dark as night.

148

O me, what eyes hath Love put in my head, Which have no correspondence with true sight!

Or, if they have, where is my judgment fled, That censures falsely what they see aright?

li that be tair whereon my false eyes dote, 5
What means the world to say it is not so?
If it be not, then love doth well denote
Love's eye is not so true as all men's—no, How can it? O, how can Love's eye be true.

That is so vex'd with watching and with tears?

No marvel then though I mistake my view: The sun itself sees not till heaven clears.

O cunning Love! with tears thou keep'st me blind,

Lest eyes well seeing thy foul faults should find.

149

Canst thou, O cruel! say I love thee not,
When I against myself with thee partake?
Do I not think on thee when I forgot
Am of myself, all tyrant, for thy sake?
Who hatch thee that I do call my friend? 5
On whom frown'st thou that I do fawn upon?

Nay, if thou lour'st on me, do I not spend Revenge upon myself with present moan? What merit do I in myself respect That is so proud thy service to despise, ro

When all my best doth worship thy defect, Commanded by the motion of thine eyes?

But, love, hate on, for now I know thy mind:

Those that can see thou lov'st, and I am blind.

150

O, from what pow'r hast thou this pow'rful might

With insufficiency my heart to sway?
To make me give the he to my true sight,
And swear that brightness doth not grace
the day?

Whence hast thou this becoming of things

That in the very refuse of thy deeds
There is such strength and warrantise of

That in my mind thy worst all best exceeds? Who taught thee how to make me love thee more,

The more I hear and see just cause of hate? O, though I love what others do abhor, With others thou shouldst not abhor my state:

If thy unworthiness rais'd love in me, More worthy I to be belov'd of thee.

151

Love is too young to know what conscience is:

Yet who knows not conscience is born of love?

Then, gentle cheater, uige not my amiss, Lest guilty of my faults thy sweet self prove.

For thou betraying me, I do betray 5 My nobler part to my gross body's treason; My soul doth tell my body that he may Triumph in love; flesh stays no farther reason.

But, using at thy name, doth point out thee As his triumphant prize. Proud of this pude.

He is contented thy poor drudge to be.
To stand in thy affair, fall by thy side.

No want of conscience hold it that I call Her 'love' for whose dear love I rise and fall.

152

In loving thee hou know'st I am forsworn, But thou art twice forsworn, to me love swearing;

In act thy bed-vow broke, and new faith

In vowing new hate after new love bearing. But why of two oaths' breach do I accuse thee, When I break twenty? I am perjur'd most; For all my vows are oaths but to misuse thee.

And all my honest faith in thee is lost;
For I have swoin deep oaths of thy deep kindness.

Oaths of thy love, thy truth, thy constancy; And, to enlighten thee, gave eyes to blind

Or made them swear against the thing they see:

For I have sworn thee fair—more perjur'd I,

To swear against the truth so foul a lie!

153

Cupid laid by his brand, and fell asleep. A maid of Dian's this advantage found, And his love-kindling fire did quickly steep; In a cold valley-fountain of that ground; Which borrow'd from this holy fire of Love

A dateless lively heat, still to endure, 6 And grew a seething bath, which yet men prove Against strange maladies a sovereign cure. But at my mistress' eye Love's brand new-fired.

The boy for trial needs would touch my breast;

I, sick withal, the help of bath desired, And thither hied, a sad distemper'd guest, But found no cure. The bath for my help hes

Where Cupid got new fire—my mistress' eyes.

154

The little love-god, lying once asleep, Laid by his side his heart-inflaming brand, Whilst many nymphs that vow'd chaste life to keep

Came tripping by; but in her maiden hand

The fairest votary took up that fire 5 Which many legions of true hearts had warm'd:

And so the general of hot desire
Was sleeping by a virgin hand disarm'd.
This brand she quenched in a cool well
by,

Which from Love's fire took heat perpetual, Growing a bath and healthful remedy 12 For men diseas'd; but I, my mistress' thrall.

Came there for cure, and this by that I prove:

Love's fire heats water, water cools not

A LOVER'S COMPLAINT

From off a hill whose concave womb re- Crack'd many a ring of posted gold and worded

A plaintful story from a sist'ring vale, My spirits t' attend this double voice accorded.

And down I laid to list the sad-tun'd tale: Ere long espied a fickle maid full pale, Tearing of papers, breaking rings a-twain. Storming her world with sorrow's wind and Upon her head a platted hive of straw. Which fortified her visage from the sun. Whereon the thought might think sometime it saw

The carcase of a beauty spent and done. Time had not scythed all that youth begun, Nor youth all quit; but, spite of heaven's feli rage.

Some beauty peep'd through lattice of sear'd age.

Oft did she heave her napkin to her eyne, Which on it had conceited characters, Laund'ring the silken figures in the brine That seasoned woe had pelleted in tears, And often reading what contents it bears; As often shrieking undistinguish'd woe, 20 In clamours of all size, both high and low.

Sometimes her levell'd eyes their carriage ride,

As they did batt'ry to the spheres intend; Sometime diverted their poor balls are tied To th' orbed earth; sometimes they do extend

Their view right on: anon their gazes lend To every place at once, and nowhere fix'd, The mind and sight distractedly commix'd.

Her hair, nor loose nor tied in formal plat, Proclaim'd in her a careless hand of pride; For some, untuck'd, descended her sheav'd hat.

Hanging her pale and pined cheek beside; Some in her threaden fillet still did bide, And, true to bondage, would not break from thence,

Though slackly braided in loose negligence.

A thousand favours from a maund she drew Of amber, crystal, and of beaded jet. Which one by one she in a river threw. Upon whose weeping margent she was set: Like usury, applying wet to wet, Or monarch's hands that lets not bounty fall Where want cries some but where excess begs all.

Of folded schedules had she many a one, Which she perus'd, sigh'd, tore, and gave the flood:

bone.

Bidding them find their sepulchres in mud : Found yet moe letters sadly penn'd in blood,

With sleided silk feat and affectedly Enswath'd and seal'd to curious secrecy, 49

These often bath'd she in her fluxive eyes. And often kiss'd, and often gan to tear; Cried 'O false blood, thou register of lies,

What unapproved witness dost thou bear! Ink would have seem'd more black and damned here!

This said, in top of rage the lines she rents. Big discontent so breaking their contents.

A reverend man that graz'd his cattle nigh, Sometime a blusterer that the ruffle knew Of court, of city, and had let go by The swiftest hours observed as they flew. Towards this afflicted fancy fastly drew; And, privileg'd by age, desires to know In brief the grounds and motives of her woe.

So slides he down upon his grained bat. And comely distant sits he by her side; 63 When he again desires her, being sat, Her grievance with his hearing to divide. If that from him there may be aught applied

Which may her suffering ecstasy assuage. "Tis promis'd in the charity of age.

'Father,' she says 'though in me you behold

The injury of many a blasting hour. Let it not tell your judgment I am old: Not age, but sorrow, over me hath power. I might as yet have been a spreading flower, Fresh to myself, if I had self-applied Love to myself, and to no love beside.

'But woe is me! too early I attended A youthful suit—it was to gain my grace— O I one by nature's outwards so commended That maidens' eyes stuck over all his face. Love lack'd a dwelling and made him her place:

And when in his fair parts she did abide, She was new lodg'd and newly deified.

'His browny locks did hang in crooked curls;

And every light occasion of the wind Upon his lips their silken parcels hurls. What's sweet to do, to do will aptly find: Each eye that saw him did enchant the mind: For on his visage was in little drawn

A LOVER'S COMPLAIN'S

What largeness thinks in Paradise was sawn.

'Small show of man was yet upon his civin; His phœnix down began but to appear, Like unshorn velvet, on that termless skin, Whose bare out-brang'd the web it seem'd to wear;

Yet show'd his visage by that cost more dear:

And nice affections wavering stood in doubt If best were as it was, or best without.

' His qualities were beauteous as his torm, For maiden-tongu'd he was, and thereof free;

Yet, if men mov'd him, was he such a storm As oft 'twixt May and April is to see, When winds breathe sweet, unruly though they be.

His rudeness so with his authoriz'd youth Did livery falseness in a pride of truth. 105

'Well could he ride, and often men would say

"That horse his mettle f om his rider takes: Proud of subjection, noble by the sway, What rounds, what bounds, what course.

what stop he makes! " re-And controversy hence a question takes, Whether the horse by him became his deed, Or he his manage by th' well-doing steed.

'But quickly on this side the verdict went: His real habitude gave life and grace To appertainings and to ornament, 115 Accomplish'd in himself, not in his case. All aids, themselves made fairer by their place,

Came for additions; yet their purpos'd trim Piec'd not his grace, but were all grac'd by

'So on the tip of his subduing tongue 120 All kind of arguments and question deep, All replication prompt, and reason strong, For his advantage still did wake and sleep. To make the weeper laugh, the laugher weep,

He had the dialect and different skill, 125 Catching all passions in his craft of will;

'That he did in the general bosom reign Of young, of old, and sexes both enchanted, To dwell with him in thoughts, or to remain

In personal duty, following where he haunted.

Consents bewitch'd, ere he desire, have granted,

And dialogu'd for him what he would say, Ask'd their own wills, and made their wills obey.

'Many there were that did his picture get, To serve their eyes, and in it put their mind;

Like fools that in the smoothafton set. The goodly objects which obvious they find Of lands and makens tooks to the in thought assigned.

And abouting it, thee measures to bestow them

Than the true goves landlord which doth owe than.

'So many have, that never touch'd his hand,

Sweetly supposed them mistress of his heart. My woeful self, that did in freedom stand, And was my own fee-simple, not in part, What with his art in youth, and youth in art, Threw my affections in his charmed power, Reserv'd the stalk and gave him all my flower.

'Yet did I not, as some my equals did, Demand of him, nor being desired yielded; Finding myself in honour so forbid, rso With safest distance I mine honour shielded. Exper ence for me many bulwarks builded Of preofs new-bleeding which remain'd the foil

Of this false jewel, and his amorous spoil.

But ah! who ever shunn'd by precedent

'But ah! who ever shunn'd by precedent The destin'd ill she must herself assay? Or torc'd examples, 'gainst her own content,

To put the by-past perils in her way? Counsel may stop awhile what will not stay; For when we rage, advice is often seen 160 By blunting us to make our wits Liore keen.

Nor gives it satisfaction to our blood.
That we must curb it upon others' proof,
To be forbod the sweets that seem so good 164

For fear of harms that preach in our behoof. O appetite, from judgment stand aloof! The one a pa ate hath that needs will taste, Though Reason weep, and cry "It is thy last".

'For further I could say "This man's untrue",

And knew the patterns of his foul beguiling:

Heard where his plants in others' orchards

Saw how deceits were gilded in his smiling; Knew vows were ever brokers to defiling; Thought characters and words merely but art.

And bastards of his foul adulterate heart.

'And long upon these terms I held my city, Till thus he gan besiege me: "Gentle maid, Have of my suffering youth some feeling pity,

And be not of my holy vows afraid. That's to ye sworn to none was ever said;

A LOVER'S COMPLAINT

For feasts of love I have been call'd unto, Till now did ne'er invite nor never woo.

"All my offences that abroad you see Are errors of the blood, none of the mind; Love made them not; with acture they may be,

Where neither party is nor true nor kind They sought their shame that so their shame did find:

And so much less of shame in me remains By how much of me their reproach contains.

"Among the many that mine eyes have seen,

Not one whose flame my heart so much as warmed.

Or my affection put to th' smallest teen, Or any of my leisures ever charmed. Harm have I done to them, but ne'er was harmed:

Kept hearts in liveries, but mine own was free,

And reign'd commanding in his monarchy.
"Look here what tributes wounded fancies sent me,

Of pallid pearls and rubies red as blood; Figuring that they their passions likewise lent me

Of grief and blushes, aptly understood 200 In bloodless white and the encrimson'd mood—

Effects of terror and dear modesty,

Encamp'd in hearts, but fighting outwardly.

"And, lo, behold these talents of their

With twisted metal amorously empleach'd, I have receiv'd from many a several fair, Their kind acceptance weepingly beseech'd, With the annexions of fair gems enrich'd, And deep-brain'd sonnets that did amplify Each stone's dear nature, worth, and quality.

"The diamond—why, 'twas beautiful and hard,

Whereto his invis'd properties did tend; The deep-green em'rald, in whose fresh regard

Weak sights their sickly radiance do amend; The heaven-hu'd sapphire and the opal blend

With objects manifold; each several stone, With wit well blazon'd, smil'd, or made some moan.

"Lo, all these trophies of affections hot, Of pensiv'd and subdu'd desires the tender, Nature hath charg'd me that I hoard them not,

But yield them up where I myself must render—

That is, to you, my origin and ender; For these, of force, must your oblations be, Since I their altar, you enpatron me.

"O, then, advance of yours that phraseless hand 225 Whose white weighs down the airy scale of praise;

Take all these similes to your own command.

Hallowed with sighs that burning lungs did raise:

What me, your minister, for you obeys, Works under you; and to your audit comes Their distract parcels in combined sums.

"Lo, this device was sent me from a nun, Or sister sanctified, of holiest note, Which late her noble suit in court did shun,

Whose rarest havings made the blossoms dote; 235

For she was sought by spirits of richest coat,
But kept cold distance, and did thence remove

To spend her living in eternal love.

"But, O my sweet, what labour is't to leave

The thing we have not, mast'ring what not strives,

Paling the place which did no form receive, Playing patient sports in unconstrained gives!

She that her fame so to herself contrives,
The scars of battle scapeth by the flight,
And makes her absence valiant, not her might.

"O, pardon me, in that my boast is true! The accident which brought me to her eye Upon the moment did her force subdue, And now she would the caged cloister fly. Religious love put out religion's eye. 250 Not to be tempted, would she be immur'd, And now, to tempt all, liberty procur'd.

"How mighty then you are, O, hear me tell! 253

The broken bosoms that to me belong Have emptied all their fountains in my well, And mine I pour your ocean all among. I strong o'er them, and you o'er me being strong,

Must for your victory us all congest,
As compound love to physic your cold breast.

"My parts had pow'r to charm a sacred nun, 260

Who, disciplin'd, ay, dieted in grace, Believ'd her eyes when they t' assail begun, All vows and consecrations giving place.
O most potential love! vow, bond, nor space,

In thee hath neither sting, knot, nor confine,

For thou art all, and all things else are thine.

"When thou impressest, what are precepts worth

That shall prefer and undertake my troth ". 'This said, his wat'ry eyes he did dismount,

Whose sights till then were levell'd on my face: Each cheek a river running from a fount

With brinish current downward flow'd apace.

O, how the channel to the stream gave grace! Who glaz'd with crystal gate the glowing

That flame through water which their hue encloses.

O father, what a hell of witchcraft lies In the small orb of one particular tear I But with the mundation of the eves What rocky heart to water will not wear? What breast so cold that is not warmed here?

In either's aptness, as it best deceives. To blush at speeches rank, to weep at woes, Or to turn white and swoon at tragic shows:

'That not a heart which in his level came Could scape the hail of his all-hurting aım. 370

Showing fair nature is both kind and tame; And, veil'd in them, did win whom he would main.

Against the thing he sought he would exclaim:

When he most burn'd in heart-wish'd luxury,

He preach'd pure maid and prais'd cold chastity.

'Thus merely with the garment of a Grace The naked and concealed fiend he cover'd, That th' unexperient gave the tempter place,

Which, like a cherubin, above them hover'd. Who, young and simple, would not be so lover'd?

Ay me! I tell; and yet do question make What I should do again for such a sake.

O, that injected moisture of his eye, O, that false fire which in his cheek so glowed.

O, that forc'd thunder from his heart did fly,

O, that sad breath his spongy lungs bestowed.

O, all that borrowed motion, seeming owed. Would yet again betray the fore-betray'd, And new pervert a reconciled maid!

When my love swears that she is made of Sweet Cytherea, sitting by a brook

I do believe her, though I know she les, That she might think me some untutor'd vouth.

Unskilful in the world's false forgeries. Thus vainly thinking that she thinks me young,

Although I know my years be past the best, I sm ling credit her false-speak ng tongue, Outfacing faults in love with love's ill rest. But wherefore says my love that she is voung?

And wherefore say not I that I am old? 10 O, love's best habit is a soothing tongue, And age in love loves not to have years told.

Therefore I'll lie with love, and love with me.

Since that our faults in love thus smother'd be.

Two loves I have, of comfort and despair, That like two spirits do suggest me still; My better angel is a man right fair, My worser sp.rit a woman colour'd ill. To win me soon to hell, my female evil Tempteth my better angel from my side, And would corrupt my saint to be a devil. Wooing his purity with her fair pride. And whether that my angel be turn'd fiend, Suspect I may, yet not directly tell; For being both to me, both to each friend, I guess one angel in another's hell. The truth I shall not know, but live in doubt.

Till my bad angel fire my good one out.

Did not the heavenly rhetoric of thine eye, 'Gainst whom the world could not hold argument.

Persuade my heart to this false perjury? Vows for thee broke deserve not punishment.

A woman I forswore; but I will prove, 5 Thou being a goddess. I forswore not thee: My vow was earthly, thou a heavenly love; Thy grace being gain'd cures all disgrace

My vow was breath, and breath a vapour is; Then, thou fair sun, that on this earth doth shine.

Exhale this vapour vow; in thee it is: If broken, then it is no fault of mine. If by me broke, what fool is not so wise To break an oath, to win a paradise?

With young Adonis, lovely, fresh, and green,

Did court the lad with many a lovely look, Such looks as none could look but beauty's queen.

She told him stories to delight his ear: 5 She show'd him favours to allure his eye: To win his heart she touch'd him here and there:

Touches so soft still conquer chastity.

But whether unripe years did want conceit. Or he refus'd to take her figured proffer, 10 The tender nibbler would not touch the bait. But smile and jest at every gentle offer.

Then fell she on her back, fair queen, and

He rose and ran away; ah, fool too froward!

If love make me forsworn, how shall I swear to love?

O never faith could hold, if not to beauty vowed;

Though to myself forsworn, to thee I'll constant prove;

Those thoughts, to me like oaks, to thee like osiers bowed.

Study his bias leaves and makes his book thine eyes,

Where all those pleasures live that art can comprehend.

If knowledge be the mark, to know thee shall suffice:

Well learned is that tongue that well can thee commend:

All ignorant that soul that sees thee without wonder:

Which is to me some praise, that I thy parts admire. Thine eye Jove's lightning seems, thy voice his dreadful thunder, Which, not to anger bent, is music and sweet fire.

Celestial as thou art, O, do not love that wrong.

To sing heaven's praise with such an earthly tongue.

Scarce had the sun dried up the dewy morn, And scarce the herd gone to the hedge for shade.

When Cytherea, all in love forlorn, A longing tarriance for Adonis made Under an osier growing by a brook,

1339

A brook where Adon us'd to cool his spleen. Hot was the day; she hotter that did look For his approach that often there had been. Anon he comes, and throws his mantle by, And stood stark naked on the brook's green brim.

The sun look'd on the world with glorious eye,

Yet not so wistly as this queen on him. He, spying her, bounc'd in whereas he stood: 'O Jove,' quoth she 'why was not I a flood?

Fair is my love, but not so fair as fickle; Mild as a dove, but neither true nor trusty Brighter than glass, and yet, as glass is brittle:

Softer than wax, and vet, as iron, rusty; 4 A lily pale, with damask dye to grace her None fairer, nor none falser to deface her.

Her lips to mine how often hath she joined, Between each kiss her oaths of true love swearing!

How many tales to please me hath she coined,

Dreading my love, the loss whereof still fearing!

Yet, in the midst of all her pure protestings,

Her faith, her oaths, her tears, and all, were jestings.

She burn'd with love, as straw with fire flameth,

She burn'd out love, as soon as straw outburneth:

She fram'd the love, and yet she foil'd the framing,

She bade love last, and yet she fell a-turning. Was this a lover, or a lecher whether?

Bad in the best, though excellent in neither.

If music and sweet poetry agree, As they must needs, the sister and the brother, Then must the love be great 'twixt thee and me, Because thou lov'st the one, and I the other. Dowland to thee is dear, whose heavenly touch

Upon the lute doth ravish human sense; Spenser to me, whose deep conceit is such As, passing all conceit, needs no defence. Thou lov'st to hear the sweet melodious sound

That Phœbus' lute, the queen of music,

And I in deep delight am chiefly drown'd

Whenas himself to singing he betakes, One god is god of both, as poets feign: One knight loves both, and both in thee remain.

Fair was the morn, when the fair queen of love,

Paler for sorrow than her milk-white dove. For Adon's sake, a youngster proud and

Her stand she takes upon a steep-up hill. 5 Anon Adonis comes with horn and hounds: She, silly queen, with more than love's good will.

Forbade the boy he should not pass those grounds.

'Once ' quoth she 'did I see a fair sweet vouth

Here in these brakes deep-wounded with a boar,

Deep in the thigh, a spectacle of ruth! See in my thigh,' quoth she 'here was the sore.

She showed hers; he saw more wounds than one.

And blushing fled, and left her all alone.

Sweet rose, fair flower, untimely pluck'd. soon vaded,

Pluck'd in the bud, and vaded in the spring! Bright orient pearl, alack, too fimely shaded!

Fair creature, kill'd too soon by death's sharp sting!

Like a green plum that hangs upon a tree, And falls, through wind, before the fall should be.

I weep for thee, and yet no cause I have: For why thou lefts me nothing in thy will. And yet thou lefts me more than I did crave:

For why I craved nothing of thee still. 10 O yes, dear friend, I pardon crave of thre!

Thy discontent thou didst bequeath to me.

Venus, with Adonis sitting by her Under a myrtle shade, began to woo him. She told the youngling how god Mars did try her.

And as he fell to her, she fell to him. 'Even thus' quotin she 'the warlike god

Ah! that I had my lady at this bay. To kiss and clip me till I run away!

Crabbed age and youth cannot live together:

Youth is full of pleasance, age is full of care; Youth like summer morn, age like winter weather:

Youth like summer brave, age like winter

Youth is full of sport, age's breath is short: Youth is numble, age is lame; Youth is hot and bold, age is weak and

cold;

Youth is wild, and age is tame.

Age, I do abhor thee; youth, I do adore thee.

O, my love, my love is young! Age, I do defy thee. O sweet shepherd, hie thee,

For methinks thou stays too long.

Beauty is but a vain and doubtful good. A shining gloss that vadeth suddenly: A Gower that dies when first it gins to bud; A brittle glass that's broken presently; 4 A doubtful good, a gloss, a glass, a flower, Lost, vaded, broken, dead within an hour.

And as goods lost are seld or never found, As vaded gloss no rubbing will refresh, As flowers dead lie withered on the ground, As broken glass no cement can redress: 10 So beauty, blemish'd once, for ever lost. In spite of physic, painting, pain, and cost.

Good night, good rest. Ah, neither be my share!

She bade good night that kept my rest

And daff'd me to a cabin hang'd with care, To descant on the doubts of my decay. 'Farewell,' quoth she 'and come again

Yet at my parting sweetly did she smile, In scorn or friendship, nill I construe whether:

morning rise Doth cite each moving sense from idle rest.

Not daring trust the office of mine eyes. While Philomela sits and sings, I sit and maık. And wish her lays were tuned like the lark:

For she doth welcome daylight with her ditty.

And drives away dark dreaming night. The night so pack'd, I post unto my pretty; Heart hath his hope, and eyes their wished sight:

Sorrow chang'd to solace, and solace mix'd with sorrow:

For why she sigh'd, and bade me come to-morrow.

Were I with her, the night would post too soon; But now are minutes added to the hours:

To spite me now, each minute seems a moon: Yet not for me, shine sun to succour flowers!

Pack night, peep day; good day, of night now borrow;

Short, night, to-night, and length thyself to-morrow.

It was a lording's daughter, the fairest one of three.

That liked of her master as well as well might be,

Till looking on an Englishman, the fairest that eye could see,

Her fancy fell a-turning. Long was the combat doubtful that love with love did fight,

To leave the master loveless, or kill the gallant knight;

To put in practice either, alas, it was a spite Unto the silly damsel!

But one must be refused; more mickle was the pain

That nothing could be used to turn them both to gain,

For of the two the trusty knight was wounded with disdain.

Alas, she could not help it! Thus art with arms contending was victor of the day,

Which by a gift of learning did bear the maid away.

Then, lullaby, the learned man hath got the lady gay: 15

For now my song is ended.

On a day, alack the day!

Spied a blossom passing fair. Playing in the wanton air. Through the velvet leaves the wind. All unseen, gan passage find: That the lover, sick to death, Wish'd himself the heaven's breath. 'Air,' quoth he 'thy cheeks may blow; Air, would I might triumph so ! But, alas, my hand hath sworn Ne'er to pluck thee from thy thorn; Vow, alack, for youth unmeet, Youth, so apt to pluck a sweet. Thou for whom Jove would swear Juno but an Ethiope were; And deny himself for Jove, Turning mortal for thy love.

My flocks feed not, My ewes breed not, My rams speed not, All is amiss; Love is dying, Faith's defying, Heart's denying, Causer of this. All my merry jigs are quite forgot, All my lady's love is lost, God wot. Where her faith was firmly fix'd in love, There a nay is plac'd without remove. One silly cross Wrought all my loss. O frowning Fortune, cursed fickle dame!

For now I see Inconstancy

More in women than in men remain.

All fears scorn I, Love hath forlorn me, Living in thrall; Heart is bleeding, All help needing. O cruel speeding, Fraughted with gall ! My shepherd's pipe can sound no deal; My wether's bell rings doleful knell; My curtail dog, that wont to have play'd, Plays not at all, but seems afraid. 30 With sighs so deep, Procures to weep, In howling wise, to see my doleful plight. How sighs resound

Through heartless ground,

In black mourn I.

Like a thousand vanquish'd men in bloody fight !

Clear wells spring not, Sweet birds sing not, Green plants bring not Forth their dye. Herds stand weeping, Flocks all sleeping, Nymphs back peeping Fearfully. All our pleasure known to us poor swains. All our merry meetings on the plains. All our evening sport from us is fled, All our love is lost, for Love is dead. Farewell, sweet lass; Thy like ne'er was

For a sweet content, the cause of all my moan.

Poor Corydon Must live alone;

Other help for him I see that there is none.

When as thine eye hath chose the dame. And stall'd the deer that thou shouldst

Let reason rule things worthy blame, As well as fancy, partial wight: Take counsel of some wiser head. Neither too young nor yet unwed.

And when thou com'st thy tale to tell, Smooth not thy tongue with filed talk. Lest she some subtle practice smell-A cripple soon can find a halt: But plainly say thou lov'st her well. And set her person forth to sell.

And to her will frame all thy ways: Spare not to spend, and chiefly there Where thy desert may merit praise By ringing in thy lady's ear. The strongest castle, tower, and town, The golden bullet beats it down.

Serve always with assured trust, And in thy suit be humble-true; 20 Unless thy lady prove unjust, Press never thou to choose a new. When time shall serve, be thou not slack To proffer, though she put thee back.

What though her frowning brows be bent, Her cloudy looks will calm ere night; And then too late she will repent That thus dissembled her delight; And twice desire, ere it be day,

That which with scorn she put away. 30

What though she strive to try her strength, And ban and brawl and say thee nay? Her feeble force will yield at length. When craft hath taught her thus to say: 'Had women been so strong as men, 25 In faith, you had not had it then '.

The wiles and guiles that women work, Dissembled with an outward show, The tricks and toys that in them lurk, 40 The cock that treads them shall not know.

Have you not heard it said full oft, A woman's nay doth stand for nought?

Think women still to strive with men To sin, and never for to saint; There is no heaven—be holy then— When time with age shall them attaint. Were kisses all the joys in bed, One woman would another wed.

But soft; enough—too much I fear; Lest that my mistress hear my song; 50 She will not stick to round me on th' ear, To teach my tongue to be so long. Yet will she blush, here be it said, To hear her secrets so bewray'd.

Live with me, and be my love, And we will all the pleasures prove That hills and valleys, dales and fields, And all the craggy mountains yields.

There will we sit upon the rocks, And see the shepherds feed their flocks, By shallow rivers, by whose falls Melodious birds sing madrigals.

There will I make thee a bed of roses, With a thousand fragrant posies, A cap of flowers, and a kirtle Embroidered all with leaves of myrtle;

A belt of straw and ivy buds, With coral clasps and amber studs. And it these pleasures may then move, 15 Then live with me and be my love.

LOVE'S ANSWER

If that the world and love were young, And truth in every shepherd's tongue, These pretty pleasures might me move, To live with thee and be thy love.

20

As it fell upon a day,
In the merry month of May,
Sitting in a pleasant shade
Which a grove of myrtles made,
Beasts did leap and birds did sing,
Trees did grow and plants did spring;
Every thing did banish moan,
Save the nightingale alone.

She, poor bird, as all forloin. Lean'd her breast up-till a thorn. TO And there sung the dolefull'st ditty. That to hear it was great pity. 'Fie, sie, fie!' now would she cry;
'Teru, Teru!' by and by; That to hear her so complain 15 Scarce I could from tears refrain: For her griefs, so lively shown, Made me think upon mine own. Ah, thought I, thou mourn'st in vain ; None takes pity on thy pain: Senseless trees, they cannot hear thee: Ruthless bears, they will not cheer thee. King Pandion, he is dead: All thy friends are lapp'd in lead; All thy fellow birds do sing, 25 Careless of thy sorrowing. Even so, poor bind, like thee, None alive will pity me. Whilst as fickle Fortune smil'd, Thou and I were both beguil'd. 30 Every one that flatters thee Is no friend in misery. Words are easy, like the wind; Faithful friends are hard to find. Every man will be thy friend 35 Whilst thou hast wherewith to spend: But if store of crowns be scant. No man will supply thy want. If that one be prodigal, Bountiful they will him call, And with such-like flattering, 40 'Pity but he were a king'. If he be addict to vice, Quickly him they will entice: If to women he be bent, 43 They have at commandement; But if Foitune once do frown, Then farewell his great renown. They that fawn'd on him before Use his company no more. He that is thy friend indeed, He will help thee in thy need; If thou sorrow, he will weep; If thou wake, he cannot sleep. Thus of every grief in heart 55 He with thee doth bear a part. These are certain signs to know Futhful friend from flatt'ring foe.

THE PHOENIX AND TURTLE

LET the bird of loudest lay, On the sole Arabian tree, Herald sad and trumpet be, To whose sound chaste wings obey.

But thou shricking harbinger, Foul precurrer of the fiend, Augur of the fever's end, To this troop come thou not near.

From this session interdict Every fowl of tyrant wing, Save the eagle, feath'red king: Keep the obsequy so strict.

Let the priest in surplice white, That defunctive music can, Be the death-divining swan, Lest the requiem lack his right.

And thou treble-dated crow, That thy sable gender mak'st With the breath thou giv'st and tak'st. 'Mongst our mourners shalt thou go. 20

Here the anthem doth commence: Love and constancy is dead; Phœnix and the turtle fled In a mutual flame from hence.

So they lov'd as love in twain Had the essence but in one; Two distincts, division none: Number there in love was slain.

Hearts remote, yet not asunder; Distance, and no space was seen 'Twixt this turtle and his queen; But in them it were a wonder.

So between them love did shine That the turtle saw his right Flaming in the phœnix' sight: Either was the other's mine. Property was thus appalled, That the self was not the same; Single nature's double name Neither two nor one was called.

Reason, in itself confounded, Saw division grow together, To themselves yet either neither, Simple were so well compounded,

That it cried 'How true a twain Seemeth this concordant one! Love hath reason, reason none, If what parts can so remain'.

Whereupon it made this threne To the pheenix and the dove, Co-supremes and stars of love, As chorus to their tragic scene.

THRENOS

Beauty, truth, and rarity, Grace in all simplicity, Here enclosed in cinders lie.

Death is now the phoenix' nest; And the turtle's loyal breast To eternity doth rest.

Leaving no posterity— 'Twas not their infirmity, It was married chastity.

Truth may seem, but cannot be; Beauty brag, but 'its not she: Truth and beauty buried be.

To this urn let those repair That are either true or fair; For these dead birds sigh a prayer, a sufficiently catholic attitude to understand and appreciate his character. But a series of episodes in which he is represented as intervening in person to quell the 'ill May-day' riot of 1517 so disturbed the licenser that after marking several passages for omission he turned back and wrote at the beginning of the manuscript:

'Leave out the insurrection wholly and the cause thereof and begin with Sir Thomas More at the Mayor's sessions with a report afterwards of his good service done being Sheriff of London upon a mutiny against the Lombards. Only by a short report and not otherwise at your own perils.—Tyllney'.

The constant danger of attack on the foreign colonies in London from riotous native elements was too present to the ficenser's mind to

At some stage in the struggle to fit the play for official favour the author or authors sought the help of Shakespeare, not as some unknown or prentice playwright, but as one whose dexterity and experience would supply the resource required.

Shakespeare's scene opens with the rioters led by Lincoln crying out against the foreigners. To them enters a Sergeant-at-Arms, followed by the Lord Mayor with the Earls of Surrey and Shrewsbury and Sir Thomas More. The crowd cry down the Mayor and Earls but are willing to give More a hearing. The interpretation of the typographical detail of the transcript will be clear from Dr. Greg's own analysis:

APPENDIX

THIS transcript, reproduced in type-facsimile, of 147 lines from the manuscript of the play of Sir Thomas More, is included by the generous permission of Sir Walter Greg, who made it, and the syndics of the Cambridge University Press. It can be studied with complete advantage only in the context for which Dr. Greg designed it—namely, Shakespeare's Hand in Sir Thomas More, a study from all angles of the authorship of these lines by a group of scholars who proved, beyond reasonable question, that Shakespeare wrote them, and that chance has preserved for us, in addition to the six, possibly seven, genuine signatures, this

Though only a comparison of the transcript with a facsimile of the original will make clear the full implications of this discovery, the reader has here before him a fragment of the master's composition, transcribed with a care that will permit him to understand more adequately than any description the difficulties confronting Heminge and Condell in their editorial labours. The 147 lines occupy both sides of a leaf of paper and one side of a second leaf, and form part of a scene Shakespeare contributed to a piece by some fellow playwrights. The original author or authors had difficulty with the licenser of plays. That official was not troubled by the play's protagonist being More, a martyr to the cause of Catholicism: a Protestant audience under the Protestant Elizabeth had blunders that mar the Good Quartos and that must have stood in the transcripts prepared by scriveners working from Shakespeare's papers. The three pages of Sir Thomas More here transcribed must, when they were new and fresh, have presented an appearance that might reasonably be described as scarcely blotted; but careful study can discover beneath the discolourings and blurrings that now overlay them the many pitfalls that would await a printer. We need not therefore be surprised, though we may regret, that even with Shakespeare's papers in their possession Heminge and Condell did not succeed in giving us the perfect text. Only the most unrelaxing vigilance and supervision can arrest the brood of error that haunt the printing-house and the copyist's desk alike. The three pages from Shakespeare's own hand may show the reader some of the loopholes through which those intruders have found their way into Shakespeare's text.

The visible traces can be read ye (hardly 1t), but at the same time they are rather widely separated from the preceding word, and it is possible that they represent an S or some other sign indicating that the original text was to resume at this point.

FINAL NOTE ON CERTAIN READINGS IN LL. 103-14.

103 bis. (deleted)] The curious symbol superimposed on this word has certainly not the form of the & usual in English hands. It may, however, I think, be a loose attempt at rendering the print form of ampersand, which though rare is not unknown in manuscripts of the period. Since the ink in which the symbol is written is identical with that of the original writing, it seems unlikely that a second hand is involved in the alteration. This also applies to the contraction mark of malie in 1. 101.

z to and your.] Thotes: 'a word was underlined for insertion between these two words, but it appears to have been wiped out while the ink was still wet. The traces of the letters seem to suggest bend.' It appears that and was crossed out and the word, whatever it was, interlined to replace it. But the whole alteration, which was probably never completed, has been crased. The traces are very illegible, but to me they suggest the letters by a rather than bend.

113 warrs T warrs noting that the writer 'altered warrs to warrs by interlining a long s.' I am not myself able to detect any indication of a final s, and believe the supposed f to be the upward curl of the regular English final s.

112-4. In these difficult lines, if the original writer intended the interlined words in in to yo' obedienc: as a substitute for the two half-lines why even...by obedienc (as has been suggested) one would have expected him to delete the latter. But, with the substitution of hurly for evarrs he left the passage as it was, and must, I think, have meant it to stand. I conjecture that a stop was intended after feet in I. 111, and that in in to yo' obedienc: should be inserted between ryot; and why. The whole passage is clumsy but I no longer think, as I was once inclined to do, that the author was conscious of having left it in confusion.

speakers. He then read it through, inserting the prefixes and at the same time making certain additions to the text, some words at the beginning of 1. 22, at the end of 1. 38, and the whole of 1. 45.... The addition of the speakers' names was certainly perfunctory, especially on the first page, but, apart from the unsatisfactory condition of the deleted passage on the third, I do not find any evidence of haste or carelessness in composition'.

The scene, however, does not stand in its final state exactly as Shakespeare left it. The heavier type indicates additions and alterations by a second hand, that of a playhouse reviser who tried to clarify and pull together certain details of the original. One instance only of his efforts can be commented on here: he has deleted ll. 112-14 and substituted a phrase of his own. Shakespeare's omission of punctuation marks and capital letters, his insertion of the phrase 'in in to your obedience' and the extra-metrical nature of the conclusion of l. 114 puzzled the reviser. He took the phrase 'to kneed to be forgiven' with what goes before instead of with what follows, and in his determination to have it all tidy scored out the troublesome passage and inserted a join of his own contriving.

Had this manuscript gone as it stands to the printer it needs no imagination to picture the difficulties that would have confronted the compositor. It is true that these three pages were composed by Shakespeare in circumstances very different from those in which he wrote his own plays. But the handwriting, with all the difficulties and irregularities recorded in Dr. Greg's notes, would be the same; there would be the same minimum of punctuation and capitalization, and possibly, in places, the same insertions, extra-metrical lines, and loose ends. These by themselves would be sufficient to explain many of the
